WILSON URGED TO MEDIATE

FAKE DENTISTS UNDER FIRE OF STATE BOARD

'Tribune' Joins Campaign to Drive Quack Teeth Doctors from City.

DEADLY WORK BARED.

A little over two years ago THE TRIBUNE conducted a crusade against quack doctors.

The result is that, as far as Chicago is concerned, the quack doctor is a rara avis.

This species of human leeches may not be extinct, but their organized power to wreck lives of citizens at the expense of the community's pocketbooks has been broken. Their flamboyant signs no longer lure the credulous in State street and most of their sumptuously fitted office suites are now occupied by legitimate enterprises.

QUACK DENTISTS THRIVE.

But there still lurks behind the same flaring signs and the doors of the same expensive offices another kind of quack, equally as dangerous and even more subtle than his cousin faker of medicine. He is the quack dentist.

Like the "old docs" of the fraud school he advertises in whatever publication will accept his misstatements and lures patients to his tooth factory through the medium of lurid circulars which picture the pleasures of "painless dentistry." Like the fake physician, too, he is usually well supplied with funds and crafty in evading the law without technically violating its letter. For a fake in dentistry is much harder to prove than a false diagnosis of illness, yet teeth that do not "bite" may prove just as fatal as to the victim as a virlent infection.

STATE BOARD BEGINS WAR.

Tomorrow THE TRIBUNE and the state board of dental examiners is to start a fight to drive out these false teeth specialists. Dr. O. H. Seifert, secretary of the board, has asked and received the cooperation of Attorney General Patrick J. Lucey, who has appointed Assistant Attorney General Richard H. Colby to collect the evidence and prosecute.

It is estimated there are 200 of these advertising, so-called painless dentists in Chicago. Evidence has been collected from time to time against more than twenty of them. The investigation will continue and methods employed by these quacks will be published in THE TRIBUNE as the evidence is uncovered.

ATTORNEY BARES CONDITIONS.

Attorney Colby, in an address before the senior class of the Chicago College of Dental Surgery yesterday, outlined the course of action to be pursued in making Chicago an unhealthy place for quacks to operate in.

"The work of a percentage of the advertisers who protect their individual names by operating under a corporate name is crude," he said. "They wilfully misrepresent work, degrade and corrupt the dental profession, and, worst of all, destroy the health of their patients.

"Their work is criminal in its character. They prey upon the working people and actors particularly, always claiming they work more cheaply than reputable dentists. Because of this representation and because we were deceived at the time it was made, we did not go after them as we should have.

FIND CHARGES EXORBITANT.

"Upon investigation we found that in addition to these quacks doing work which they knew would destroy patients' health, charges were exorbitant. Sometimes these charges would be three times the amount a real dentist asks for giving the treatment properly. We have affidavits of two poor women who parted with $125 each and in return were given improper treatment.

"One evil that has been fostered by corporations practicing dentistry is their instruction to their men to do work which they know is improper and which they know will destroy the patient's bite. This is common among them in making crowns for teeth. Not one of the crowns may be put on properly, for if it is the 'inspector,' as they call him, will send the work back to be done over.

"Some of these places take in as high as $1,000 a day. They do this by employ

Bandit, Haunted by Girl's Screams, Gives Himself Up

Phantom Voices Drive Rush Street Robber, Out of a Job, to Confess.

FINDS IT DANGEROUS

There is something accusing in the screams of Miss Barbara Wood and Miss Katherine Carroll, 156 Ontario street, for last night the robber who aroused their vocal appeals surrendered because he "heard them screaming wherever he went."

Charles Haney is the name of the self-confessed bandit. Last night he went into Harrison street station and drew a revolver. But there was no violence in his method and Sergeant Thomas Connery asked him what ailed him.

"My name is Haney," he said. "I am a robber. Here is my revolver."

And he handed over a blue nosed six shooter that was fully loaded.

Girls' Screams Haunt Him.

"I am the fellow that held up the drug store of Nathan Wolin at 516 Rush street Wednesday night, when the girls screamed. I also held up a saloon at Lake and Clinton streets last week. I got $2.50 from the drug store and $1.15 from the saloon."

Sergeant Connery called Wolin's store and found the description of Haney fitted that of the robber.

"I came from Switzerland six years ago," he continued. "Times got pretty hard and I bought this gun of a pawnbroker in Halsted street last week. Then I robbed the places.

"When I went into the drug store I didn't have much nerve. I had walked around outside for a long time and finally I made up my mind. When I stuck my hand in the cash register I grabbed a few coins and ran.

Phantom Voices Pursue.

"I heard the girls screaming as I ran. Ever since then I have heard those screams. I have been sleeping in lodging houses, but I would awake every few moments with the screams in my ears.

"Tonight I couldn't stand it any longer. I got to thinking what might happen. I was afraid I might have to shoot or lose my bluff sometime or perhaps some one might kill me. So I thought I had best have the police protect me from myself.

"I'm all right when I have a job, but I got hungry and I couldn't get work. But I didn't think what the consequences might be, for it's a dangerous business.

"I was walking past the station when I decided to come in and surrender."

POLICEMAN IN BANDIT ROLE SHOT BY GOTHAM DETECTIVE

Shows Methods of Robbers in Parade—3,000 See Act of Sleuth Who Thought It Real.

New York, May 6.—In front of the grandstand in Fifth avenue where 3,000 spectators were watching a demonstration of police methods in connection with the annual police parade today, a police officer who was playing the part of a highwayman in a holdup scene was shot in the head by a detective, who apparently thought that the h'dup was real.

The supposed highwayman, Lieut. Christopher Reilly, after snatching a handbag from a police matron, who was playing the part of a shopper, had been pursued by patrolmen and police dogs, and surrounded.

While the police were pretending to overpower him, the detective rushed in and fired at Reilly, the bullet passing through his chin and neck. The detective was placed under arrest and the wounded policeman was removed to a hospital.

VILLA BAND IN TRAP; 42 SLAIN BY U.S. CAVALRY

Howze Surprises Camp After Night Ride—No American Hit.

CARRANZA O. K.'S PACT

BY CARL D. GROAT.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 6.—Riding like fiends through a wild country at night, American troopers yesterday at Ojo Azules—the Blue Spring—routed 142 Villista raiders in a two hour fight, killed forty-two, wounded many, capturing some men, mules, and ponies, and came out unscathed.

Their thirty-six mile ride through a strange land will go down in cavalry history as a "brilliant piece of work," in the words of Gen. Funston's report.

Above the more spectacular, though, looms the fact that the battle showed Carrancista soldiers and United States troopers to be working together. Acting Secretary Bliss emphasized this point especially tonight.

Carrancistas, encamped at the Blue Spring, some sixty miles southwest of Chihuahua City, had been attacked Thursday night, Gen. Funston's report this afternoon showed. Five of their men had been taken.

SURPRISE SLEEPING CAMP.

Maj. Howze, with six troops of the Eleventh cavalry, set out at 8:30 o'clock in pursuit. At daylight they came upon the sleeping Villista camp. Revolvers drawn, they plunged into the enemy, totally surprising them. The Villistas fought and ran. After the struggle forty-two dead were counted.

The Villistas spread out into the mountains with some of Maj. Howze's men chasing them.

Army men hailed the battle as a fine demonstration of the fighting qualities of the men under Gen. Pershing. They thought a few more such fights would mean accomplishment of the task of scattering Villa's bands.

REPORT ON BATTLE.

The official report said:

San Antonio, Mexico, May 6.—The band of 140 Villistas that attacked the Carranza garrison yesterday at Ojo Azules remained there in camp last night. The leaders of the band were Gens. Cruz Dominguez, Gullo Acosta, and Antonio Angeles.

This morning they were struck by Maj. Howze with six troops of the Eleventh cavalry and completely surprised. Forty-two killed were actually counted. The number of wounded is unknown, but it must be many. Several prisoners were taken, also seventy-five ponies and mules.

STAGE PISTOL FIGHT.

Our cavalry rode them down and killed many, using pistols. The fight lasted two hours, the men being pursued as individuals into difficult mountains. Five Carrancistas condemned to be shot by the Villistas were taken and released. We have no casualties. Maj. Howze left here at 8:30 last night, marched thirty-six miles, and reached Ojo Azules at daylight.

I consider this a brilliant piece of work. Other cavalry detachments of this command are now operating in the several districts. FUNSTON.

CARRANZA GIVES O. K.?

El Paso, Tex., May 6.—It was announced in Juarez that the long expected reply had been received from Gen. Carranza at Mexico City regarding the tentative agreement drawn up by Gen. Scott and Gen. Obregon.

In a few minor details the first chief is said to have differed with his minister of war, but that in the main the agreement was satisfactory to the Carranza government.

Soon after the receipt of the announcement Gen. Trevino left for Torreon. It is believed the final conference will follow soon, as the approval of Gen. Carranza is said to have ended the temporary deadlock.

KILL TEN MEXICAN RAIDERS.

Columbus, N. M., May 6.—Ten Mexicans have been killed in the last few weeks by American soldiers who caught them cutting the field telegraph wire, according to apparently authentic reports here tonight. It was pointed out that the wire cutting has practically ceased since.

Wireless Phone Success; Soon to Control U.S. Navy

Daniels Gives Orders to Warship at Sea and to Land Stations.

FIRST TEST OF KIND

Washington, D. C., May 6.—A working system of wire and wireless communication said by army and navy experts to be unequaled by that of any other nation was effected today by the navy department as an adjunct to the preparedness program.

It was inaugurated by a wireless telephone conversation, the first of its kind ever held, during which Secretary Daniels, seated at his desk in the navy department, gave instructions to a commander on the bridge of a warship operating against a theoretical enemy far off the Virginia capes and received reports from him.

Simultaneously other officials of the department were in telephone communication with all the navy yards and stations in continental United States.

The plan represents more than a year of continued labor by naval officers and experts of the American Telephone and Telegraph company who have been cooperating with the department on the invitation of Secretary Daniels.

System Called Thorough Success.

It was pronounced a thorough success by officials who witnessed its execution this afternoon. Tests of the plan will continue, however, until 8 o'clock Monday morning, all business between the department and stations in the United States and the battleship New Hampshire, used for the wireless telephone communication, being conducted either by telegraph, telephone, or wireless until that time.

Secretary Daniels was the first to converse with Capt. Chandler of the New Hampshire. He told the captain to get under way by 10 o'clock Sunday and talk to the department again then.

"It will not be long before the secretary of the navy can sit in his office in the department," Mr. Daniels told the captain, "and communicate verbally with ships all over the world."

Tests Given a Wide Range.

Rear Admiral Benson then talked to Capt. Chandler, reiterating the secretary's instructions and ordering the New Hampshire to keep in touch with the department by radio telephone and report its position every hour.

The naval station at Pensacola was the first of the shore bases with which communication was established. Commander Mustin, in charge there, reported as to the progress being made by the naval aviators. They were working day and night, he said, and making good progress.

Other connections were made with the naval training station north of Chicago in 32½ seconds, the New York navy yard in 27 seconds, with Norfolk in 41 seconds. Only a few seconds more were required to connect with the station at San Diego, Cal., from which point Admiral Fullam, commanding the Pacific reserve fleet, talked to Secretary Daniels.

NO PART IN AUTO MERGER, STUDEBAKER COMPANY SAYS

Chevrolet Head Also Brands as False Story that $200,000,000 "Trust" Is Being Formed.

South Bend, Ind., May 6.—That the Studebaker corporation is not interested in a proposed merger of motor car manufacturers, as reported from Detroit yesterday, was announced here today by A. R. Erskine, president of the Studebaker concern.

"The story is without foundation, so far as we are concerned," said Mr. Erskine. "No officer or director of our corporation is a party to the proposed consolidation."

Denial from Maxwell Company.

Detroit, Mich., May 6.—The Maxwell Motor company today entered an unqualified denial of "an utterly false report" that it has joined in a big auto merger.

Auto "Trust" Idle Rumor.

New York, May 6.—Reports that a $200,000,000 motor car corporation was to be formed by union of the General Motors, Chevrolet, Maxwell, Studebaker, and Continental companies with W. C. Durant, president of the Chevrolet, as the moving spirit, were today flatly denied by Durant.

"The entire report is a fabrication, pure and simple, the invention of some imaginative mind," said Durant. "I am not identified directly or indirectly with any such project.

"The Chevrolet company is not acquiring other automobile companies and no such policy is contemplated."

DENTIST, FILLING TEETH, SCRATCHED THUMB; DEAD.

Septicoccus Germs from Cavity Lodged on Instrument, Physician Believes.

As the result of puncturing his thumb with an instrument he was using in filling a patient's tooth, Dr. Frank Timmerman, a dentist with an office at North and Washtenaw avenues, died last night of blood poisoning.

On Monday afternoon, while the dentist was working on a decayed tooth, the instrument slipped. As the wound was insignificant, Dr. Timmerman thought little of it until on the following afternoon he became ill.

On Thursday his condition became so serious that he was taken to the West Side hospital, where it was found that septicemia had set in. Efforts to save his life were unsuccessful.

Dr. E. A. Corcoran, a friend, was asked whether he believed the instrument responsible had been cared for properly before Dr. Timmerman used it.

"Yes," replied Dr. Corcoran. "Dr. Timmerman was a very careful man and an able dentist. In my opinion the septicoccus germs which infected the wound lodged on the instrument from the tooth he was filling. A decayed tooth is more productive of such germs than a rusty nail."

Dr. Timmerman was 47 years old and had practiced dentistry in Chicago for twenty years. He is survived by a widow. His home was at 1611 North Albany avenue.

BURGLARS IN WILMETTE GET JEWELS WORTH $3,000.

Frank J. Baker Suspects "Inside Job" Because of Intimate Knowledge of House Secrets.

Burglars on an "inside job" got more than $3,000 worth of jewels from the residence of Frank J. Baker, vice president of the Public Service company of northern Illinois, Friday night, according to a report to the Wilmette police.

These articles are missing: Dinner ring, $1,000; bar pin containing nineteen diamonds, diamond bracelet, several small pieces, gold bracelet worth $180, gold cuff links, $100 in cash.

Mr. Baker said Mrs. Baker sometimes kept valuables in the pocket of of her riding skirt which hung in a closet. This fact, together with evidence that a secret door in the basement had been left open and that a second floor screen had been cut at the proper place to permit turning a secret catch, caused the victim to suspect some one familiar with the premises. A discharged servant is sought.

WIDOW SUED BY GIRL FOR BALM

Mother of Two Asks $80,000 on Dead Man's Promise to Wed Her.

Suit against a widow for her husband's alleged breach of a promise, given while he lived with her, to marry another woman, was filed in the Circuit court yesterday against Mrs. Jennie F. Gordon, widow of Robert W. Gordon, west side building contractor, who died a year ago, leaving an estate of $120,000.

The plaintiff, Miss Marion Anderson, filed two suits for herself and one for each of the two children which it is asserted she bore to Gordon while he was maintaining her in an apartment. Each of the four suits is for $15,000.

"Miss Anderson is a niece of Gordon's first wife, who divorced him a dozen years ago and has since died," explained the plaintiff's attorney, Earl J. Walker.

Married Second Time.

"A few years after his divorce Gordon married a second time. Having no children, he and his new wife adopted Robert B. Gordon, said to be a blood nephew of Gordon. The adopted son is about 25 years old.

"Seven years ago, despite his remarriage, Gordon began giving attention to Miss Anderson, then 17 years old. Lacking knowledge that he was again married, Miss Anderson did not rebuff him.

"Gordon, then about 46 years old, promised to marry the young girl, whom he installed in an apartment. Her friends commonly believed her married. She was known as 'Mrs. Gordon.' His real wife knew nothing of Marion; and of his real wife Marion knew nothing.

"Six years ago Miss Anderson gave birth to a boy, named Robert Wallace Gordon, after his father. Gordon kept putting the girl off, repeatedly renewing his assurances of marriage. Two years ago Miss Anderson became the mother of Alice Helen Gordon.

Girl Learns of Wife.

"About this time Miss Anderson and the true Mrs. Gordon became cognizant of each other's existence. Alarmed, Miss Anderson insisted that Gordon provide for his two children's future.

"Complying, he took out two $10,000 life insurance policies, making his two children the respective beneficiaries. Some little time before his death, however, he canceled the policies.

"The suits are against Mrs. Gordon and the adopted son, as Gordon's heirs, and against Mrs. Gordon, as administratrix of the estate. Miss Anderson's two suits each are for breach of promise. The children's suits are for Gordon's violation of his promise to take out insurance policies for their benefit."

"I never heard of Miss Anderson," said former Judge Charles S. Cutting, Mrs. Gordon's attorney. "Mrs. Gordon is out of town."

During the coming week temperatures above the seasonal average are indicated for the middle plains states and the great central valleys. Moderate temperatures are a probability in the region of the great lakes.

An extensive area of low pressure that now covers the northwestern states and the western Canadian provinces will advance slowly eastward reaching the middle west by the middle of the week. It will cause unsettled weather and local showers during the next several days in the region of the great lakes and the extreme upper Mississippi valley.

By the middle of the week local showers and thunderstorms are probable over the great valleys and the plains states. The weather will be generally fair the first half of the week throughout the great central valleys.

WOMAN, ALONE IN FLAT, BATTLES WITH BURGLAR.

After setting the table for her husband's supper, Mrs. George A. Moore, 3632 Rokeby street, entered a bedroom that opens off the dining room. The burglar, she says, was crouched in a corner. He evidently had been awaiting her.

"What are you doing here?" Mrs. Moore asked the man as he leaped toward her. They struggled through the bedroom door into the dining room. After five minutes he knocked her down and fled through the front door. He took with him jewelry said to be worth $1,000.

POPE APPEALS TO PRESIDENT TO AID PEACE

Message Follows Hint from the Kaiser He Is Ready to Stop War.

SUBSEA ISSUE ENDED.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 6.—[Special.—Will President Wilson attempt to end the great war by offering his services as mediator?

This is the question that came to the fore today while the president and his advisers were studying the official text of the German reply to the American ultimatum.

The peace possibility received unusual attention because of the general conviction that a break between the United States and Germany has been averted. The closest advisers of the president are convinced that Mr. Wilson will pronounce the German reply a substantial compliance with his essential demand, despite the threat of Berlin to resume ruthless submarine warfare unless Great Britain be compelled to abandon the starvation blockade.

BASIS FOR PEACE TALK.

The talk of peace was revived by the following incidents:

Mgr. Bonzano, the papal delegate to the United States, delivered to President Wilson today a message from Pope Benedict urging America to remain out of the war and suggesting mediation.

Ambassador Gerard cabled further details of his conversations with the kaiser, in which the latter expressed an ardent desire that President Wilson undertake the task of restoring peace.

Unofficial dispatches from Berlin, probably inspired, showed the expectation of the German government and public that an amicable settlement of the submarine controversy with the United States would lead eventually to mediation proposals by President Wilson.

SILENT ON POPE'S APPEAL.

The message from the pope was delivered personally at the White House by Mgr. Bonzano. The delegate did not see the president, but he left the communication with Secretary Tumulty, who immediately laid it before Mr. Wilson.

White House officials said the message was personal in character and would not be made public. It was stated, however, that in the communication the pope expressed apprehension of the consequences of a rupture of the friendly relations of Germany and America and abjures the president to do all in his power to avoid so untoward an occurrence, which might lead to a prolongation of the bloody conflict in Europe.

The pope also takes occasion to reiterate his hope that the president of the United States would be able to wield his powerful influence to bring about a termination of the war. This is the second time that the pope has suggested to the president the desirability of undertaking mediation.

GERMAN TERMS MODERATE.

Significance was attached to the statement in the Berlin reply to the American note that Germany is ready to make peace on a basis of "safeguarding Germany's vital interests."

The impression gains ground that Germany, desiring to end the war while it is a victor on land, is exerting every possible influence to induce President Wilson to initiate mediation on his own responsibility. Germany has not formally asked he president to mediate and will not do so, according to German officials here.

Formal peace overtures by Germany, it is contended, would be hailed by the allies as a confession of weakness, if not of defeat, and only would serve to encourage the entente to redoubled exertions to whip their enemies. If, however, the president would undertake mediation upon his own initiative Germany would accept the overtures.

Although the official representatives of the allies here maintain that their governments would not consider peace overtures even made by the president of the United States, the opinion is growing among American public men that the entente powers would return a favorable reply, particularly if the summer campaign fails to dispossess the Germans of any appreciable portion of their conquests in territory.

While the allies control the sea, Germany is generally conceded to be the victor on land in the war up to date. Germany is in a position to settle the war on favorable terms—immensely more favorable than a year ago. German officials are saying that Berlin will be able to command still more favorable terms a year hence.

If the allies reach the conclusion by the end of the summer campaign that it would be wiser to compromise than to fight several years longer, they would be in a mood to accept mediation.

Deny Britain Will Quit.

The opposition to conscription and other evidences of domestic discord in Great Britain indicate the existence of strong sentiment for an immediate termination of the war. The British government, however, professes to be prepared for a prolonged struggle.

British officials confess that their chief hope of victory lies in a war of attrition, and are predicting that the side with the last billion dollars will win. They thus contemplate a war to exhaustion, in which the greater financial resources of the allies will triumph.

Germany is appealing to the peace sentiment in the entente nations with its peace proposals. Germany is putting forth the impression that it is willing to make peace on reasonable terms. Berlin now says that it is ready to end the war at any time provided the "vital interests" of Germany are safeguarded. This is the most moderate peace suggestion that has emanated from Berlin since the beginning of the war, and therefore is regarded as particularly significant of a sincere desire on the part of Germany to end the struggle.

German Terms in Doubt.

What Germany deems its "vital interests," however, is not disclosed. If Germany is willing to restore the status quo in Europe before the war the proposal would seem to be extremely moderate.

German officials here say they do not know what their government would consider the safeguarding of vital interests. They do not believe it means the restoration of the status quo. They are of the opinion that Germany, while willing to give up Belgium, will insist upon a "new status" of the kingdom, which will detach it from the influence of the allies.

Furthermore, German officials believe that Berlin will consider the retention of Courland and the erection of an independent kingdom of Poland as protection against Russia necessary to a safeguarding of German vital interests.

These officials doubt that the sovereignty of Serbia, Montenegro, and Albania could be restored, particularly because Bulgaria came into the war to recover what it lost in the Balkan war, and will insist upon a retention of the spoils.

At the White House it is stated that President Wilson will not renew the offer of mediation unless he be formally invited to do so by one or more of the belligerents. There are many public men here, however, who believe that, yielding to various influences, the president will initiate mediation on his own responsibility before the election next November.

FROHMAN ADMINISTRATORS IN COURT AGAINST CUNARD.

Seventeen Notices of Suits to Recover for Lusitania Deaths Include Those of Three Chicagoans.

New York, May 6.—[Special.]—Administrators of the estate of Charles Frohman, the theatrical manager who lost his life when the Lusitania was torpedoed, gave notice in the United States District court on the first anniversary of the disaster that they intend to file a suit against the Cunard Steamship company, limited.

The Frohman notice, as well as sixteen others, including those of Sarah Lund, W. E. Moundsey, and P. M. Calon of Chicago, filed today, came just within the time limit fixed by federal law for the beginning of actions to recover for deaths at sea.

All together forty-three actions have been brought against the Cunard line.

BRITISH DENY ANY OUTRAGES TO NEUTRALS

Answer German Accusations by Counter Charges; Cite Teuton Acts In Last Big War.

LONDON, May 6.—Declining to comment on the purely American-German questions involved in the German reply to the American note on submarine warfare, Lord Robert Cecil, minister of war trade and parliamentary under secretary for foreign affairs, in behalf of the foreign office gave the Associated Press today a statement dealing with the charges against Great Britain and Germany's avowed desire for peace. The statement follows:

"The reply of the German government to the American note of April 20 respecting submarine warfare is not a communication upon which any general comment can properly be made in this country, as the questions at issue concern the United States and Germany and any interference by a third party would be presumptuous.

Cites Berlin Misstatements.

"Since, however, the German note contains certain misstatements of fact respecting the actions of Great Britain, the following observations may not be thought out of place:

"The German government state that they have so far as is possible instituted a far reaching restraint upon the use of the submarine weapon solely in consideration of neutral interests and in spite of the fact that these restrictions were necessarily of advantage to Germany's enemies.

"It is alleged that no such consideration ever has been shown to neutrals by Great Britain and her allies.

"Do the facts bear out these assertions? So far as is known, the measures taken by Great Britain against German trade have cost no neutral life.

"The Germans maintain that it was owing to the illegal conduct of the British warfare that Germany was forced to resort to her submarine campaign. This is not the first time that the Germans have attempted to justify their submarine warfare on the ground that it is a measure of reprisal against the action of the British government in cutting off supplies from Germany.

Victims of U-Boats.

The following list of incidents, in chronological order, should suffice to dispose of this plea:

"September, 1914.—Dutch vessel Maria from California for Dublin and Belfast, with cargo of grain for the civil population, sunk by the German cruiser Karlsruhe.

"Oct. 26, 1914.—The Admiral Ganteaume, with 2,000 unarmed refugees, sunk by a German submarine.

"December, 1914.—Admiral von Tirpitz foreshadowed adoption of submarine campaign.

"Jan. 27, 1915.—American ship William P. Frye, with wheat from Seattle for Queenstown, sunk by German auxiliary cruiser Kronprinz Wilhelm.

[The William P. Frye was sunk by the Prinz Eitel Friedrich, according to the records.]

"Feb. 4, 1915.—Declaration by the German government of their intention to institute a general submarine blockade of Great Britain and Ireland, with the avowed purpose of cutting off all supplies from these islands. This blockade was put into effect officially Feb. 18, although, as a matter of fact, a merchant ship had been sunk by a German submarine at the end of January.

Not Tender to Noncombatants.

"It was not until March 11, 1915, that the present measures against German trade were put in force by Great Britain. Before the enforcement of those measures the Germans had destroyed cargoes of foodstuffs coming to the civilian population of this country; had declared their intention of instituting a system of submarine outrage, and had actually submarined merchant vessels without warning.

"As for their pretended tenderness for noncombatants, their slaughter of old men, children, women, and girls in Belgium and northern France, not to speak of the unreported proceedings of their honored allies in Armenia, forever prevents them from being heard in such a cause.

Plenty of Food in Germany.

"The German government speaks of many millions of women and children, who, according to the avowed intentions of the British government, are to be starved, and who, by their sufferings, shall force the victorious armies of the central powers into an ignominious capitulation.

"In this connection it is interesting to remember that at the beginning of last month the German chancellor made the following remarks in the reichstag: 'I can understand that in 1915 the enemy would not give up hope of starving Germany, but I cannot understand how cool heads can cling to it after the experience of 1915. Our enemies forget that, thanks to the organizing powers of the whole nation, Germany is equal to the task of the distribution of victuals. Our stocks of bread and grain will not only be sufficient but will leave an ample reserve with which to commence the new year. We have not run short of anything in the past, nor shall we run short of anything in the future.'

"There is a curious contradiction between this statement and the present appeal on behalf of starving women and children.

Recalls Stand of Germans.

"However, presuming that the statement of the chancellor in the reichstag was untrue, it is interesting to recall the opinions of two former German statesmen, Prince Bismarck and Count Caprivi, as to the right of a belligerent to cut off supplies from the enemy.

"In 1885, at the time when his majesty's government were discussing with the French government the question of the right to declare foodstuffs not intended for the military forces to be contraband, Prince Bismarck made the following statement to the Kiel chamber of commerce:

"'I reply to the chamber of commerce that any disadvantages our commercial carrying interests may suffer by the treatment of rice as contraband of war does not justify our opposing a measure which it has been thought fit to take in carrying on a foreign war. Every war is a calamity which entails evil consequences, not only on the combatants, but also on neutrals. The measure in question has for its object the shortening of the war by increasing the difficulties of the enemy, and is a justifiable step in war, if impartially enforced against all neutral ships.'

Starved Paris to Surrender.

"In 1892 Count Caprivi made the following remarks in the reichstag, in the course of a discussion respecting the question of international protection for private property at sea:

"'A country may be dependent for her food or for her raw produce upon her trade. In fact, it may be absolutely necessary to destroy an enemy's trade. The private introduction of provisions into Paris was prohibited during the siege, and in the same way a nation would be justified in preventing the import of food and raw produce.'

"These older German authorities were right. The truth is, all war is cruel—horrible. But those who have drenched Europe in blood, who scatter death and destruction among combatants and noncombatants are presuming too far on the toleration of mankind when they complain of such a comparatively humanely method of warfare as blockade.

Allies to Fight to Finish.

"Of the German peace overtures, if such they are to be called, I will say little. It was only in last December that their chancellor declared that we believed it to be in our interests to attribute falsely to them peace proposals.

"Yet the German government says that twice within the last few months Germany has announced before the world her readiness to make peace. Which is the truth?

"It may be that the Germans want peace. If so, it is so because they fear defeat. It may be only that they want to appear peaceful. For us it matters not. Our attitude, at any rate, is unchanged. We drew the sword unwillingly. We shall sheath it gladly.

"But we should be untrue to our trust; we should be betraying civilization if we abandoned our task until we have reestablished in Europe the supremacy of law, the sanctity of treaties, and the right of all nations, great and small, to live their lives, to fulfill their destinies, free from the intolerable menace of Prussian militarism."

German Papers Laud Reply of Kaiser to United States

BERLIN, May 6.—The German newspapers today generally praised the German reply and expressed the hope that it will satisfy both President Wilson and the American people.

Into the midst of the newspaper discussion Maximilian Harden, noted German publicist, injected another strong defense of President Wilson's stand, closing a bold article in Zukunft, his wekely magazine, with an emphatic denial of the charge that the United States had violated neutrality by actions favorable to the allies.

Harden's editorial, written before any of the German newspapers had commented on the German reply, was evidently for the purpose of forestalling any harsh criticism of the German government's position or of President Wilson.

He roasted unmercifully with shafts of sarcasm the German writers who have attacked President Wilson, charging them with gross ignorance of Mr. Wilson's true character.

He paid high tribute to Mr. Wilson's lofty motives.

Should End Uncertainties.

Discussing the German answer, Georg Bernhard in the Vossische Zeitung, says:

"It will not be expected of us, in view of our attitude toward this question, that we should greet with noisy joy the way which our government takes to avoid a conflict."

However, he says, if it should end the uncertainties and if the hopes pinned on President Wilson's future course should be realized, he will join in the general rejoicing.

The Vorwaerts warmly praises the answer and says that German statesmen could not do otherwise and they have dashed the hopes of Germany's enemies The government, it says, did what "all the commandments of political wisdom required," and the decision will be welcomed in the broadest circles of the German people.

Declaring that a German-American conflict is indeed not yet finally settled, but that its temporary adjustment will give time for a mutual, cool, and objective consideration and further opportunity to reach a final understanding, the Vorwaerts points out that the new orders to submarine cummanders coincides with the demands made by the Socialistic working alliance in the reichstag.

Die Post says Germany's course was dictated by the realization of its own strength. There can, however, be no further concessions, the newspaper adds, for it seems the limit of possibility has been reached.

The Hamburg Nachrichten declares that never before did a mighty state make such a concession in the midst of a struggle for existence. "This must be emphasized," the paper says, "although at this time we pass over in silence the significance in the concessions for carrying on the war, and we cannot, for easily conceivable reasons, express ourselves more fully concerning the limiting of the submarine campaign in such a manner."

The Boersen Zeitung calls the note "a pleasant surprise," in that it dissipated fears lest the government might make too great concessions. It adds that even the circles which are disposed to reject all compromises will not be able to criticize adversely.

Will Disappoint Allies.

The Frankfurter Zeitung expresses the opinion that the German reply to America will have a depressing effect in London and Paris, as a breach with America was regarded as certain in those cities. The newspaper considers the danger of conflict with the United States greatly diminished by the German note, although "the danger of future conflicts is not excluded."

The paper confesses that it appears unfortunately to be a fact that President Wilson was right in maintaining that the Sussex fell a victim to a German attack.

It comments on the fact that the German note does not revoke the intention expressed in the German declaration of Feb. 8 that enemy merchant ships which are armed with guns, would be treated as warships, and emphasizes the fact that the German note does not contain a lasting renunciation of the principles of naval warfare delineated by the German admiralty.

The newspaper adds that if the English blockade continues, according to the new principles, which are a blow in the face for what hitherto has been regarded as international law, then Germany's proposed settlement can scarcely endure.

WILSON DECIDES HE WILL ACCEPT GERMAN PLEDGE

Action Takes Away Immediate Danger of Break Over Submarine Issue.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 6.—[Special.]—President Wilson has decided to accept Germany's reply as a compliance with his demand that illegal methods of submarine warfare be abandoned. The danger of an imminent diplomatic break is authoritatively described as past.

The official text of the German note was decoded and laid before the president today. It will be considered at Tuesday's cabinet meeting, and it is probable that Secretary of State Lansing will soon begin work on a brief reply.

The president and his official advisers take the view that Germany's new orders to submarine commanders meet his demand that the imperial government "declare" an abandonment of illegal submarine warfare. The president's demand that Germany also "effect" this abandonment is something which only the future can foretell, according to officials. Germany's good faith in carrying out the new orders is, to a certain extent, placed on trial, and the United States government will judge by results.

Taken at Face Value.

It would be a mistake to assume that the president is pleased with the status of the submarine issue, according to officials here, or to feel confidence that the German reply has really settled the submarine controversy. But he is going to take the German promise at its face value and trust that the submarine menace to noncombatants will actually be eliminated.

The president was disagreeably surprised today to receive official news of the attacks by submarines on four steamers from Consul General Skinner at London. In none of the cases is there any indication that the "principles of visit and search" were carried out.

May Write One More Note.

The general impression in official circles is that President Wilson will direct Secretary Lansing to prepare another note to Germany setting forth the gratification of the United States to learn that the imperial government has abandoned its present methods of submarine warfare and expressing the confidence that the new orders to submarine commanders will be scrupulously observed.

LLOYD-GEORGE DEFENDS DRAFT

Says Conscription Is Orderly and Consistent Way to Meet War Needs.

MANY WOMEN AIDING.

LONDON, May 6.—Addressing his constituents at Conway, Wales, this afternoon, David Lloyd-George, minister of munitions, defended his demands for compulsion, the necessity for which, he said, arose last September.

Compulsion, the munitions minister said, simply meant that the country was organizing itself in an orderly, consistent, and resolute manner for war, which could not be run as a Sunday school treat. He declared it never had been said that Great Britain could raise as many men in proportion to population as could France. This, he said, was impossible as Great Britain supplied France and her other allies with steel, coal, material, and munitions and maintained the greatest navy in the world.

There, however, still was a considerable margin of men available for war if the need arose for increasing the army. Women more and more were coming to the rescue in the munition works. There were nearly 300,000 women, Mr. Lloyd-George said, engaged on tasks which before the war one never would have dreamed women were capable of discharging. As the result of this, the country had increased enormously not merely the output, but its capacity to furnish munitions of war.

"Today," he continued, "we have command of the sea more completely than we have ever had it. No alliance ever worked more harmoniously than the central powers pooling their forces. We have means. They, too, often have methods. Let us employ their methods to our means and we shall win."

More than 3,000,000 men had been raised for military purposes, added the speaker and there were 1,900,000 munition workers in the country, 40 per cent of the latter being of military age.

"PATRIOTS" WILL SHUN WAR.

Newest Society Would Prohibit Citizens from Entering Danger Zones in Europe.

A propaganda campaign begun several days ago by an organization known as the "American Society of Patriots" resulted yesterday in the distribution of petitions to various railroad and elevated patrons. The petitions state that the object of the society is to "prohibit its citizens from entering the confines of the present European war zone on a ship flying the flag of a belligerent nation, irrespective of whether such United States citizen be aboard such ship as a passenger or as a member of its crew."

ALLIES PLANNING GIANT OFFENSIVE IN NEAR FUTURE

Attack May Be Made Either in Balkans or Along British Front in France.

LONDON, May 6.—Within the next thirty days the allies will begin a great combined offensive against the central empires that will mark the turning point in the world war. This is the belief now held in every capital of Europe.

Where the allied armies will strike first is a matter of speculation. A popular guess is in the Balkans, where the allies have established themselves in the Greek town of Florina, opposite Monastir. Another guess is that the blow will fall on the British front near Lens.

Though the official statement from Paris this afternoon reports another serious attempt by the Germans northwest of Verdun, it is generally believed here that the Verdun battle is over.

French Admit a Loss.

PARIS, May 6.—The official statement issued this afternoon admitted the French have been driven out of part of their trenches on the northern slope of Hill 304, the keystone of the defenses to the northwest of Verdun. This statement said:

The bombardment by the enemy with shells of heavy caliber, accompanied by the use of suffocating gases, continued yesterday and last night. This attack attained an unprecedented violence in the sector embracing Hill No. 304. We had to evacuate a part of our trenches on the northern slopes of this hill which had been completely shattered and made untenable. Our batteries checked the advance of the enemy. Their new troops suffered overwhelming losses.

Last night a German attack directed upon the wood to the west and northwest of Hill No. 304 was repulsed with the bayonet.

There has been a slow and continued bombardment upon our line at Dead Man hill and Cumieres. East of the river Meuse there has been intense artillery activity in the region of Vaux."

The bombardment continued today to be very violent to the west of the Meuse, principaly in the region of Hill 304 and in the neighborhood of the Haucourt Esnes today. There was no infantry engagement.

Tells of Recent Fighting.

The war office issued a statement tonight reviewing the fighting of the week. It said:

On the left bank of the Meuse we enlarged and consolidated from April 29 to May 3 our positions on Le Mort Homme and to the north of Cumieres by a series of successive actions.

On May 4 and 5, after very violent bombardments and the employment of a division of reinforcements brought from another part of the front, the enemy succeeded in occupying part of our trenches on the northern slopes of Hill 304.

One attack was made by us on the 1st of May against a German trench, which we occupied, to the southeast of and near Fort Douaumont.

In addition, various attempts made by the enemy against our trenches in the Vosges (April 30), in the Argonne (May 3), and to the south of the Somme (May 5) were easily repulsed.

On our side we successfully carried out several surprise attacks, notably May 5 in the region of Lassigny and in the Argonne.

Berlin Official Report.

BERLIN, May 6.—The official report issued from the general headquarters says:

Near Givenchy-en-Gohelle a British attack was repulsed.

On the left bank of the Meuse artillery and infantry engagements in the district southeast of Haucourt are in progress. We were again successful. The battles have not been terminated.

A large number of French captive balloons owing to a sudden storm broke loose and were driven over our lines. More than fifteen have been captured.

Austro-Hungarian naval aeroplanes on May 4 bombarded Avlona in the morning and Krindisi in the afternoon. The Avlona batteries, the port establishments, and the aeronautic station were several times effectively hit.

At Brindisi full hits were noticed on railroad trains, station buildings, magazines and in the arsenal, and close to a group of torpedo boat destroyers. Several bombs exploded in the town.

On the return trip fire was encountered from the Marco Polo (Italian armored cruiser). The crew standing crowded on the deck was effectively attacked with a machine gun.

All the aeroplanes returned safely.

Admission of the loss of a Zeppelin at Saloniki is made in the official German statement this afternoon, which says:

One of the German airships has not returned from the raid on Saloniki. According to the British report the airship was shot down and burned.

Save Twelve from Zeppelin.

LONDON, May 6.—A British official statement issued this afternoon says:

A further report has been received from Vice Admiral De Robeck concerning the Zeppelin brought down at Saloniki. It now is stated that survivors of the crew have been found and that four officers and eight men have been made prisoner.

Southeast of Lake Med we captured enemy trenches by a surprise action. Northwest of Kroschine on Thursday the Germans after three hours of artillery preparation attacked Dombrovka with large forces. BRITISH SHOOT BOER WAR HERO AS IRISH REBEL

John McBride Eighth Man Put to Death as Result of Recent Uprising.

DUBLIN, May 6.—John McBride, a Sinn Fein leader and the eighth Irish rebel to be executed, was shot to death today, it was officially announced. Two others sentenced to die obtained commutation of their sentences to life imprisonment. They are Thomas Hunter and William Cosgrave.

McBride, with a number of other Irish sympathizers, fought through the Boer war with the Boers, but escaped to Paris after the Boer surrender.

He later toured the United States in the interests of the home rule leaders. He returned to Dublin under the proclamation of amnesty to Boer leaders.

McBride married Maude Gonne, known as the Irish "Joan of Arc," while he was in Paris and she accompanied him to the United States. Later she obtained a divorce.

The foreign office has not answered Ambassador Page's query about James M. Sullivan, former United States minister to Santo Domingo, who was reported arrested in Dublin. Press reports, however, said that Sullivan was taken into custody on suspicion, and that he will be released if no evidence is found against him.

Method Used in Trials.

Justice is being dealt out to the rebels on the pure facts proved by an incontestible testimony regarding their active participation in the rebellion. Suspicion is not enough for a court martial to condemn any man and vengeance for the killing of soldiers or the destruction of property does not enter the minds of the military judges. There is no "dragooning to death" of the rebels.

As soon as a rebel falls into the hands of the authorities his identity is established. Then a preliminary inquiry is held and lawyers draw up the charge. The next process is the formation of a field general court martial, of which three are sitting, to dispose of cases rapidly. Each court is composed of three superior army officers. Only one of the nine judges participated in the suppression of the rebellion.

Prisoner Informed of Charge.

Before the prisoner is brought before the court the charge against him is read in full, in order that he may prepare to defend himself when facing the judges. He has no legal defender, but should he desire to call witnesses the court immediately calls them to testify in complete freedom. The first proceeding is the reading of the charge. Then comes testimony for the prosecution, after which the prisoner pleads in defense, if he wishes, or admits his guilt.

The judges then deliver judgment. Then the judgment is laid before Sir John Maxwell, the commander in chief in Ireland, for confirmation. The confirmed judgment is promulgated by an army officer and the following morning the condemned prisoner is shot.

FORD SUED FOR $100,000 LIBEL

Navy League Charges He Made Damaging Statements in Ads.

PRESS TARGET ALSO.

Washington, D. C., May 6.—The Navy League of the United States today filed suit in the District Supreme court against Henry Ford for $100,000 damages. The league charges Ford with having published in advertisements in a local newspaper statements of "a libelous and defamatory character."

The suit was filed by Attorneys Henry B. F. MacFarland, former commissioner of the District of Columbia, and Henry Breckinridge, who resigned as assistant secretary of war when Secretary Garrison resigned.

The determination to file the suit was reached at a meeting when the league's attorneys were directed also "in their discretion to file similar suits against newspapers publishing or repeating" the alleged libel.

The Alleged Libel.

The league bases the alleged libel on statements in the advertisements to the effect that "the Navy league has been spending huge sums to tell Americans that it is organized for the defense of the country"; that munition makers and their tools are preaching fear "to get munitions contracts, and that this treason, masked as patriotism, has deluded many who have not thought and will not think."

Coincidental with the filing of the suit a letter was addressed to the automobile manufacturer by Robert M. Thompson, president of the league.

Ask Him to Name Lawyer.

"The league assumes you will want to defend this suit," his letter reads, "rather than confess you have been guilty of making false and defamatory charges against the Navy league, and in order to prevent delay suggests your communicate at once to our attorneys the name of an attorney here whom you will authorize to accept service of summons in this case."

MILITARISM FOR OWN DEFENSE OR UPON CONQUEST?

Nation Must Be Ready to Defend Views or Accept Those of Others.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS.

BY CAPT. HENRY J. REILLY.

Washington, D. C., May 6.—[Special.]—G. N. K. writes: "What do you think of the following, taken from the Boston Tranecript: 'The state of Noodle was inhabited entirely by pacifists. They all believed in Peaceful Persuasion; to provide themselves with guns and armaments they denounced as militarism.

"'When any of their citizens were slain or their property destroyed by a neighboring state the chief Noodle sent a letter to point out, in a manner Very Sincere but Very Friendly, that this was wrong. The government of the neighboring state acknowledged the letter—and went right on.

"'Finally troops of the neighboring state invaded the state of Noodle. All the most influential Noodles instantly argued against the employment of force. "We should meet them," they said, "hat in hand." And they did so. The leader of the invasion requested the chief Noodle to put his hat on again, and to hold out his hands. The chief Noodle complied. This made the adjustment of handcuffs on the chief Noodle a comparatively simple affair.

"The leader of the invading troops then announced that the laws of his state were henceforth the laws of the state of Noodle. One of these laws required universal military service. And it so happened that a few months later the chief Noodle and all of the most influential Noodles, and, in fact, all of the male Noodles, were marching about in foreign uniforms, obeying the rough and impatient commands of foreign drill sergeants. "Why," exclaimed the chief Noodle, "this is militarism." His drill sergeant winked. "It does look that way," he said.'"

REPLY.

Most excellent. It illustrates clearly the fact, overlooked or ignored by the pacifists, that their not wishing war will not prevent it, and that, once it comes, unless they are sufficiently well prepared to successfully resist the enemy, we will have to do what the enemy wants, and not what we want.

In other words, if we wish to continue to govern ourselves as we please and to live as we please, we must be prepared to successfully resist by force of arms any attempt made upon us as a consequence of our opinions differing from those of other nations.

C. E. B. writes: "Please tell me how many Springfield and Krag rifles are now owned by this government."

REPLY.

The government owns 700,000 Springfield rifles, including those in the hands of the regular army, the national guard, and in storage. It owns 340,000 Krag rifles. In considering the number of rifles on hand, it should be remembered that modern war has demonstrated the need of a large reserve to replace rifles worn out, damaged, or destroyed. By some authorities it is claimed there should be at least two rifles in reserve per man per year of war. In other words, 1,000,000 soldiers armed with rifles would need 3,000,000 rifles for one year of war.

A. J. H. writes: "What is the muzzle velocity of the Krag rifle and what distance will it shoot to kill?"

REPLY.

The muzzle velocity is 2,000 feet per second. They are sighted to 2,000 yards. However, if fired at an angle of 45 degrees the bullet will travel a horizontal distance of 3,500 yards and would have velocity enough left to kill a man at that range.

W. R. P. writes: "Can you tell me as to what pay officers of the national guard will receive under either of the new bills? Will they receive any pay outside of their camp pay?"

REPLY.

The Chamberlain bill provides that national guard officers of general and field rank and captains commanding companies or similar units shall be paid $500 a year; regimental and battalion staff officers, aides-de-camp, and first lieutenants $300 a year. The Hay bill provides that captains and officers of higher rank shall receive $500 a year, first lieutenants $240 a year, and second lieutenants $200 a year.

J. B. W. writes: "Can you tell me in a few words some of the advantages which result from military training for boys or young men?"

REPLY.

What you wish is very well expressed in the following comment from the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph on the high school camp to be held at the Culver military academy, May 15 to 20, 1916:

"Whether pacifist or fire eater, every American should be willing to accept the proposition that it is an important part of education for a boy to learn how to stand and how to walk and how to breathe; how to take care of himself and of others on a long march, and in camp, and how to put up his own shelter and prepare his own meals; how to swim and row and shoot; and most of all, how to fear God, honor authority, tell the truth, and do his share of the day's work."

CHURCH WARS ON THE DRUG HABIT AND SOCIAL EVIL

Methodists Vote to Unite in a Crusade to Better Morals of the World.

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Saratoga, N. Y., May 6.—[Special.]—The resolution offered yesterday to the General Methodist conference by Dr. A. W. Harris, president of Northwestern university, concerning the drug habit and social vice was adopted by the general conference today.

This means that official action will be taken against the sale and use of harmful drugs, such as cocaine, morphine, and others of like character, and against commercialized social vice. These evils will be treated under the head of public morals and definite recommendations will be made in this and future general conferences for aggressive warfare on them.

The resolutions presented yesterday disapproving of the use of the cigaret "everywhere and at all times" and recommending to church members "the practice of self-denial, if need be, in abstaining from the use of tobacco for the sake of the influence such a course would have on young people" also were carried by an almost unanimous vote.

As there are users of tobacco among the delegates, some of them holding high official positions, it is presumed the negative votes came from them or their sympathizers.

Protest on Indian Schools.

A protest was ordered sent by telegraph to congress against appropriation to sectarian mission schools among the Indians. The resolution was presented by the Rev. W. R. Wedderspoon of Washington, D. C.

The resolutions call the attempt which is being made to secure an investigation as to whether there are sufficient government schools to educate the children a "subterfuge." There is also a demand for a constitutional amendment "to eradicate this root of bitterness from our religious and civil life by submitting a constitutional amendment prohibiting all sectarian appropriations wherever our flag floats, whether made by national, state, or municipal governments."

Another resolution which was ordered sent to congress was the request that house bill 10924, forbidding, under penalty of fine and the destruction of the original packages, the shipment of intoxicating liquors into Africa be passed. The resolution was presented by the Rev. Dr. J. W. E. Bowen of Atlanta, Ga. It was passed unanimously, accompanied by general applause.

Lively Discussion Held.

Religious work among foreigners brought a lively discussion. The discussion followed resolutions calling on churches everywhere to seek out and help foreigners coming to live in America.

The Rev. F. H. Coman of Buffalo, N. Y., declared we ought to heartily welcome foreigners into the membership of our well to do churches as well as to do missionary work in their behalf.

"The matter of a friendly hand shake will help," said the Rev. Frederick Palladino of Bucksport, Me. "The immigrant," he said, "is no longer a problem but an opportunity."

Charges of "snap judgment" and "star chamber methods" against the committee on the episcopacy were made in the most sensational episode thus far of the conference by Frederick A. Hazeltine, an editor of South Bend, Wash. He charged the committee on episcopacy had made a rule which shut out even members of the committee on episcopacy from having access to the subcommittees.

A half dozen members of the committee on episcopacy secured the floor, declaring that Mr. Hazeltine had entirely misunderstood the rule.

Dr. Thomas Nicholson, chairman of the committee, asserted that not only every member of the committee and every member of the general conference, but any one else who would present his request in writing and state the nature of his inquiry or appeal, would be heard.

Stick to Mexican Posts.

In speaking tonight on the Methodist work in Mexico Bishop Francis J. McConnell said:

"During all of these years of uproar the American workers have remained at their posts except during the few months when they were ordered out by the government at Washington. Almost every worker now in Mexico has at one time or another been under fire from actual battle. In addition all have faced the perils of mobs, starvation, and the plague. Among the native Mexican Methodist workers three have faced firing squads and escaped. Two local preachers were not so fortunate; one was killed outright and one was so injured as to be driven insane. All have been loyal to the Methodist church."

STARTS WAR ON QUACK DENTISTS

State Board Opens Fight to Drive Out Fake Teeth Men—'Tribune' to Aid.

ing 'contract men,' whose duty it is to separate the patients from as much money as they have.

"The board has determined to drive this practice out. Under the law no corporation may practice dentistry, and we intend to ask that their charters be revoked. We further intend to bring all dentists connected with these places before the board to show cause why their license should not be revoked. Dr. George N. West of the Chicago Dental society has joined with us, and with the assistance of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE we hope to stamp out the quacks.

"Many of these firms employ assistants who are not graduates of accredited schools, and who have no licenses to practice. The victim is greeted by an "inspector," who makes an alarming diagnosis. The contract is placed before the patient to sign. One case is on record of a man who signed for $2,900 worth of work before he left the office!

"When the work is completed the victim is presented with a highly decorative guarantee resembling a bond certificate. He is thoroughly satisfied, for in nineteen cases out of twenty he doesn't know the certificate is no more valuable than the paper on which it is printed, and that the work performed, painless though it may have been in a measure, will never permit him to masticate his food properly."

Newsboy Hurt by Auto.

IN THOSE DAYS RELIGION WAS REAL EXCITING

Great Revival of 1800 Co-ed Calls Indecorous, Like Billy Sunday.

Vigorous manifestations of spiritual cleansing, such as enthusing over "Billy" Sunday, hitting the sawdust trail, growling like a spaniel, or otherwise whooping it up, is "rough stuff" and not indulged in by the cultured element in our civilization.

This is the viewpoint of Catherine C. Cleveland of the University of Chicago, who has just written a book for her doctor's degree called "The Great Revival in the West, 1791-1805."

Miss Cleveland finds that persons found salvation in 1800 with the same volcanic boisterousness that animated the Chaldeans of heathenism, the turbulent religionists of medieval times, and the believers in miracles.

The author finds that this furious manner of reform obtains in those that lack will power, and for this reason the "jerks" and tumbling about were used to attract attention and exert a hypnotic influence over those susceptible to a "morbid initiative faculty."

It's Like This.

Citing instances of violent salvation she quotes some of the following:

"The fallen, to prevent being trodden under foot . . . were collected together and laid out in order on two squares of the meeting house, which, like so many dead corpses, covered a considerable part of the floor."

"To see those proud young gentlemen and young ladies dressed in their silks, jewelry, and prunella, from top to toe, take the jerks would often excite risibilities. Their first jerk or so you would see their fine bonnets, caps, and combs fly and so sudden would be the jerking of the head that their long, loose hair would crack almost as loud as a wagoner's whip."

The Old Time Religion.

"On one occasion a young woman began to whirl around like a top. She continued for an hour without stopping, whirling at the rate of fifty times in a minute, complaining of pain and distress when the singing stopped."

"It was common to hear people barking like a flock of spaniels on their way to meeting. . . . There they would start up suddenly in a fit of barking, rush out, roam around, and in a short time come barking and foaming back. Down on all fours they sometimes went, growling, snapping their teeth."

LIFE JUST ONE RUN AFTER ANOTHER FOR THIS ITALIAN.

Guido Bigniami, Soldier of Fortune, Long Pursued, Finds It a Relief to Be Arrested.

Guido Bigniami has been a fugitive from consequences of one thing and another for so long that he was almost relieved when detectives grabbed him yesterday.

Guido once was a captain of the Italian merchant marine, but eight years ago he took the seamen's side in a strike which was lost, and he was forced to flee to America.

"I worked for George Ehrat & Co. at 180 North Market street as a salesman four years ago," he said. "Then I stole some money, and it was for me to run some more. I went to California, and then to Mexico, where I did a little soldiering. After that I took command of a sealing fleet, and later of a fishing fleet, until the statute of limitations should give me amnesty for my crime. I come back to Chicago and I am notified by the consul to report back to Italy for naval service. To top it all off, I am arrested for this old embezzlement."

THE KEEP-GARDNER NUPTIALS

Robert A. Gardner and His Bride, Who Was Miss Katherine Keep, at the Ceremony in Christ Church.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert A. Gardner

Miss Katherine Keep, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Keep, became Mrs. Robert A. Gardner yesterday. The ceremony was performed at the Christ Reformed Episcopal church on the south side.

The romance, it is reported, began on the golf links. Mr. Gardner is the present amateur golf champion of the United States. When he was an undergraduate at Yale he broke the world's pole vault record.

Mrs. Gardner made her debut two years ago. She has been prominent in the Junior league and other of the activities of the younger society set.

After the wedding the bridal party was entertained by three hostesses—Mrs. James C. Hutchins Jr., Miss Anita Blair, and Miss Mildred Blair.

$250,000 PAID TO MRS. BLAIR FOR 14 PAINTINGS

Society Woman Sells Medieval and Renaissance Works; Couldn't Refuse.

Mrs. Chauncey Blair of 4830 Drexel boulevard has sold fourteen paintings from her collection of medieval and renaissance art at a price reported to be $250,000, although Mrs. Blair refused to state exactly what the consideration was. She said, however, that it was so good that she could not refuse it, no matter how much she wanted to keep the collection intact.

The pictures went to the Kleinberger galleries in New York and Paris. Ten of the paintings were French primitives, two were Italian, and two Flemish.

Mrs. Blair has spent many years in making the collection. Two years ago the pictures, with objects of carved stone, polychromed wood, and antiques, were shown at the Art institute. A movement was started at that time to secure the collection for the institute. Mrs. Blair returned from New York yesterday after completing the sale.

"It was like this," she said. "If a dealer came to you with a proposition to purchase something from you and offered such a large price that you couldn't turn him down, you would sell. That is precisely what happened to me. Mr. Kleinberger did not tell me what he expects to do with the paintings or whether they will remain in the United States. At present the collection is being exhibited in the east."

Mrs. Blair usually keeps the greater part of the collection in her apartment in Paris.

BRYAN SCHEDULED TO SPEAK

He Is Expected to Address Peace Meeting at Auditorium Theater Tonight.

William J. Bryan, it is announced, will speak this evening at 8 o'clock at the Auditorium at a meeting to protest against forcing the United States to war over any issue raised thus far in the foreign relations of the nation. The meeting will also urge that the power given the president, to force the country into a war even against its will, be limited. The meeting also will protest against secret diplomacy. Henry Ford may be present.

WIFE PLEADS TO GO TO JAIL IN FEAR OF PERSECUTORS.

Woman, Who Accuses Man Under White Slave Act, Says She Was Followed and Attacked.

Taking refuge in the Mann act and with the aid of Hinton G. Clabaugh of the local department of justice, Josephine D'Amico was freed yesterday from persecutors, who, she said, had dragged her about the country for months.

She was sent to the county jail in Waukegan to be held as a witness against Joseph Andriacchi, the man who, she said, had forced her to leave her husband and children in Mineral Point, Wis., because they owed him money they could not pay.

Jail life was irksome to her and she was given a position in a home. She reappeared before Mr. Clabaugh, however, declaring she had been attacked and followed. She begged to be sent back to jail, which was done.

ALLIES' DEMAND FOR SUGAR DRIVES LOCAL PRICES UP

Wholesale Cost Quoted at $7.95 as Against $7.70 the Day Before—Cane and Beet Both Affected.

Once more is the war blamed for a boost in the cost of living. This time it is sugar.

Wholesale prices on sugar in Chicago went up yesterday. Franklin MacVeagh & Co. quoted a price of $7.95 on beet granulated sugar. The day before it was $7.70. Cane granulated sugar was $8.05 a barrel yesterday and $7.80 the day before. It is said that the large quantities of sugar which are being purchased by the European nations at war is responsible for the raise.

Retail merchants sold at prices varying from 7½ to 11 cents a pound for granulated sugar and 14 cents a pound for lump sugar. The prevailing price after a number of queries at retail grocery stores seemed to be from 8 to 9 cents a pound.

How Many Fish in the Sea?

Every square mile of sea is estimated to contain about 120,000,000,000 fish.

While the cost of gasoline increases the cost of electric current decreases

Detroit Electric

Now the Detroit Electric dominates the "all-year-round" car field

Stop for a moment—if you will—and consider what it means to hold top place in the "all-year-round" car field. Consider what it implies about the Detroit Electric. Consider what improvements we must have made over the old time electric car, in order to win this triumph.

First, we took the electric-powered automobile out of the "merely a woman's car" class. We gave it greater battery capacity. We gave it a mileage of from 80 to 90 miles on a single charge. We gave it greater power. We gave it greater speed.

Today, of course, there are some men who still regard the electric car as "merely a woman's car." But they are men who have never ridden in a modern Detroit Electric.

Next, we increased Detroit Electric efficiency. We improved and refined and developed it, till we achieved an automobile that will give unfailing, unflagging, unfaltering service 365 days in the year, and for 98% of all the trips you will undertake.

Then, we lowered the cost of operation. Owners of Detroit Electrics—men who have driven other types of cars—say they find their upkeep cost 30% to 50% less. In every detail, in every feature, we made the Detroit Electric strong, dependable, powerful and modern.

We retained all of its beauty of line, all of its refinement, all of its luxury, its comfort, its driving safety and simplicity. So that those who buy Detroit Electrics today buy not merely a woman's car, but a car for both men and women, a real family automobile for all-year use.

Strong claims for Detroit Electric performance are easily proved by a practical road demonstration.

Remember—the Detroit Electric is a quality car at a moderate price

OLD GUARD TO RULE CHICAGO CONVENTION

Crowd Which Exiled Roosevelt in 1912 Is to Return, but May Be Wiser.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING.

Washington, D. C., May 6.—[Special.]—The old guard has won control of the Republican national convention, which will assemble in Chicago one month from tomorrow.

Practically the same aggregation that ran the steam roller through the 1912 convention, exiled Col. Roosevelt, and renominated Taft will be on hand and possessed of the same ability to manage the gathering and name the presidential candidate of the party.

The old guard will be there imbued with a deep desire to nominate a Republican entertaining a fellow feeling for their guild, and the old guardsmen will yield to their impulses in this regard if they deem it entirely safe from a party viewpoint. If they nominate a progressive Republican it will be only because they believe a progressive Republican stands the best chance of defeating President Wilson.

MAY HEED ADVICE.

The fight of the progressive faction of the party, the stronghold of which is west of the Alleghenies, now is to crystallize public sentiment and to impress the old guard with the necessity of "listening to reason," relegating standpat influence to the rear and putting forward a leader of progressive convictions.

The old guard, captained by Penrose of Pennsylvania and Crane of Massachusetts, will present pretty much the same appearance as in 1912. Boss Barnes of New York will be among the missing and Penrose will present a somewhat chastened aspect, due to untoward political experiences in Pennsylvania of late, but otherwise the dominant aggregation will be the old familiar figures.

HAVE ROUNDED UP 600.

The leaders of the old guard now figure that they have rounded up a trifle more than 600 delegates, giving them a margin of 100 beyond the number necessary to effect a nomination. They have nearly all of the east, all but some scattering votes in the south and several sizeable blocks of delegates in the west. Frank H. Hitchcock, former postmaster general, working in close harmony with the old guard, has the Kentucky delegation, nominally for Fairbanks, in the hollow of his hand for disposition after the preliminary balloting and has a good many other southern delegates under cover. The other delegates in the east and south have been rounded up by trusted lieutenants of the old guard.

SENSITIVE WESTERNERS.

In the west the old guard will be in a position to deliver scores of delegates after the preliminary balloting unless public opinion deters these willing souls from allowing themselves to be delivered. Throughout the favorite son territory the delegates are a carefully hand picked lot, warranted to stand without hitching and not to stampede under stress of emotion. Much successful proselyting among these seasoned politicians has been carried on by the old guard.

All that remains, according to the calculations of the eastern leaders, is to pick the man to whom the old guard's delegates are to be delivered.

HATE TO TAKE ROOSEVELT.

The situation is such that practically no real effort to select the candidate will be made until the convention meets. The old guard knows what it wants, but it also knows that it may not be able to take what it wants and win the election at the same time, and it knows that events between now and the assembling of the convention may upset all calculations.

The old guard knows that it does not want Roosevelt. Anybody but Roosevelt and anything to beat Roosevelt sum up the views of the old guardsmen. They cannot forgive the colonel for bolting the ticket in 1912 and they asseverate that the great part of the Taft voters never could be induced to mark the ballot for the redoubtable warrior of Oyster Bay. They argue that it would be party suicide to nominate a man who would be knifed not only by the eastern standpatters but by the Americans of Teutonic extraction, 90 per cent of whom are Republicans.

At the same time the old guard realizes that there is a strong public sentiment in the country favoring Roosevelt for a multitude of reasons, that he possesses a rare ability to rouse the people, and that external circumstances might at any time produce an overwhelming demand for his nomination.

VICTORY THE MAIN THING.

It is conceivable that war with Germany or a general blowing up of the Wilson policy of dealing with Mexico might create a demand for a more virile management of public affairs, which would insure the nomination of Roosevelt. The old guard wants to win in November above all things else, and it is not blind to possibilities that would make the acceptance of Roosevelt advisable.

The old guard does not love Hughes and would consent to his nomination only because of the desire to kill off the danger of the selection of Roosevelt, whom it loves less, or because no other possible candidate measured up to the standard of a winner in the election.

Roosevelt and Hughes are the towering figures in the party and there is no doubt of the prevailing sentiment that wisdom dictates a choice between these two for the candidate to be pitted against President Wilson.

With the country prosperous the defeat of the president is likely to be no easy task and Republicans everywhere are saying that this is "no year for pikers" in the selection of their candidates.

Hughes has important elements of strength. He is a man of exceptional ability, a progressives in convictions, and a leader who would be able to unite all factions of the party. It is not improbable that he is today either the first or second choice of close to a majority of the delegates to the convention. His sole weakness lies in the lack of knowledge of his views on the great questions of the hour. If he should become their candidate Republicans would not know till afterward the views on which he would bid for the support of the party.

Would Like to Have Root.

If it were not necessary to consult inconvenient expediency the old guard would prefer to nominate former Senator Root of New York. In the east there are thousands of Republicans who cannot understand any doubt of the ability of Root to win the election. Consequently the Root boom recently has been maneuvered into the limelight and plans have been laid to obtain for the former senator the indorsement of Col. Roosevelt.

The Root boomers figure that Roosevelt could not refuse to support his former secretary of state, particularly since Root took his stand unequivocally on the Roosevelt platform even to the denunciation of the administration for not protesting against the invasion of Belgium by Germany.

The old guard leaders know, however, the antipathy to Root that exists in the west and regretfully concede that he would not make as good a race as either Hughes or Roosevelt. Weeks would suit the old guard, as would McCall of Massachusetts or Fairbanks of Indiana, but they are recognized as less "available" than Root. Sherman, Cummins, and Purton enjoy the disapprobation of the old guard.

The fact is that nothing would please the old guard more than the development of a situation which would stampede the convention with enthusiasm to a "dark horse" of its liking. There are two Republicans who are being talked of considerably as possible dark horses. They are former Senator Knox of Pennsylvania and Senator Harding of Ohio, who will be temporary chairman of the convention.

Harding has gone into training for the dark horse role. He is composing a keynote speech that is expected to be a marvel of reason and eloquence. In appearance he will be imposing—with features reminiscent of McKinley's, his friends say—and in delivery he will be impressive. Nobody will be less surprised than Mr. Harding himself should his keynote speech electrify the convention and win him the nomination just as Bryan talked himself onto the ticket by his "cross of gold" speech in the Democratic convention in 1896.

The Roosevelt men are supremely confident that public sentiment and the influence of the Progressive convention in Chicago at the same time will insure the nomination of the colonel, the old guard to the contrary notwithstanding.

Roosevelt in Pennsylvania.

In regard to public sentiment favoring Mr. Roosevelt there is a good deal of comment here on a poll made this week in Pennsylvania by the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph, a regular Republican organ, which supported Taft in 1912. The 26,420 votes in the poll were distributed as follows:

Roosevelt, 10,783; Brumbaugh, 3,893; Hughes, 3,279; Ford, 2,379; Knox, 1,863; Root, 1,347; Penrose, 832; Wilson, 599; Sherman, 411; Burton, 385; Fairbanks, 217; Cummins, 130; Taft, 129; Weeks, 113; Borah, 59. Total 26,420.

Opponents of Col. Roosevelt say that his attitude toward Germany accounts for his popularity in Pennsylvania, the chief war munitions producing state in which pro-British sentiment is prevalent.

AN UNQUALIFIED DENIAL of An Utterly False Report

—a report that is basely false—to the effect that the Maxwell Motor Company has joined in a merger with several other motor car companies, entailing change in the policies and management of the company, has been published in many newspapers throughout the country. Any foundation for this report is so utterly lacking that we can only attribute it to competitors who are trying to use us as a tool to further their own interests.

To Maxwell Dealers, to Maxwell Owners —and to the Public

—we wish to state that the Maxwell Motor Company has not joined in any merger—that no change in ownership has taken place—nor has there been any change in the personnel directing its policies. Furthermore, no such changes in the Maxwell organization are contemplated. We therefore make an unqualified denial of the ridiculous rumors of consolidations involving the Maxwell name.

Maxwell Motor Co., Inc.

Detroit, Mich., May 6, 1916. WALTER E. FLANDERS, President

ENTRY IN RACE IS ANNOUNCED BY ELIHU ROOT

Former Senator from New York Will Seek Nomination for Presidency.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 6.—[Special.]—Former Senator Root of New York has consented to become a candidate for the Republican nomination for president, and soon will authorize a public announcement to this effect, according to one of his closest friends here.

The Root headquarters have been opened at the Hotel Manhattan in New York City, in charge of former Representative John Dwight of New York. It is said that H. L. Stimson, former secretary of war, Nicholas Murray Butler, Job Hedges, and William Barnes Jr., are among the executive managers of the campaign.

It is claimed that of the eighty-seven uninstructed delegates from New York, forty-four can be counted upon for Mr. Root and that six more are in sight. It is asserted that Roosevelt will have only twelve. The Root managers say their candidate will have a following in many states of the west and south on the first ballot at Chicago.

Statement Made by Friend.

A friend who returned today from a conference with Mr. Root in New York made this formal statement of the matter:

"1. Mr. Root is positively actively, and authorizedly a candidate. The movement now under way in his behalf has his full sanction.

"2. It is national in scope and intent and has no reference to New York local or factional conditions.

"3. It is based on the feeling that he would meet the big issues of the next four years, industrial and international, as no other man could. It is responsive to the sentiment that these four years are to see questions, both foreign and domestic, of tremendous importance, and that in the opinion of his friends he is the best equipped man to meet them. Mr. Roosevelt called him 'the ablest living American.'

Relies on Past Record.

"4. It is a Republican candidacy, not a reactionary one. It assumes that he best represents Republican thought on economic subjects, and on his record as secretary of state is especially qualified to adjust our tariff and trade relations which will follow the world war.

"5. A facing-forward platform is assured, of genuine progressivism, but it also is assumed that the pendulum has swung back to fundamental Republican principles. The candidacy is not antagonistic to favorite sons or other kinds. The definite statement that Mr. Root is a candidate is expected to enable delegates who favor him to declare their preference at the outset, with the certainty that they will not be 'in the air' at Chicago."

Cause Is in Doubt.

Politicians at the capitol have been puzzling over the reported Root candidacy for several days, and, following the authentic announcement of the Root boom, it is expected they will give it close scrutiny.

Some have suggested that it is designed to "stop Roosevelt"; others, that it is to hold back a stampede to Justice Hughes, and others, that it is merely to assemble the New York delegation under one banner, there to rest at arms until something definite looms up.

CHICAGO GERMAN-AMERICANS IN PACT TO DEFEAT WILSON?

New York World Says Middle West Is Well Organized—Colonel Opposed—Socialists to Benefit.

New York, May 6.—[Special.]—The World will say tomorrow: "Political activity among the German-Americans of the middle west is getting down to a systematic basis with the near approach of the national conventions.

"Evidences of this were found during the last week by correspondents of the World, particularly in Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, St. Paul, and Des Moines. These correspondents acted under instructions suggested by the facts uncovered by the World as a result of the appeals made by former Gov. Colquitt of Texas to German-American leaders in New York for support in his race for the nomination to the United States senate.

"Analytical estimates of the situation through the middle west were called for from these correspondents, with special attention to those organizations that might be actually engaged already and those that might become active later. The report shows:

"That in the territory which has Chicago for a center the German-Americans have been organizing for more than a year to defeat President Wilson for reelection, and that there has been no cloak of secrecy about the movement.

"Feeling against Col. Roosevelt seems to be as strong as that engendered against the president, with the possibility that the Socialists may profit greatly should Roosevelt become the Republican nominee.

HOUSE PAYS HIGH TRIBUTE TO 'UNCLE JOE'

All Factions Join in Felicitating Veteran on Eve of His 80th Birthday.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., May 6.—[Special.]—The house of representatives today refrained from doing any public business for more than two hours while it paid tribute to the public services and good fellowship of one of its own members, "Uncle Joe" Cannon of Illinois, who tomorrow will round out the eightieth year of his life, forty years of which he has passed in congress.

Friends and foes of the former speaker joined in doing him honor today. Speaker Clark, Majority Leader Kitchin, and Representative Sherwood of Ohio, the last of whom served in the first congress Mr. Cannon was elected to, but who was out of congress for a number of years in the interim, made speeches in his honor.

On the Republican side, Minority Leader Mann, Representative Rodenberg of Illinois, and Representative Gillett of Massachusetts delivered the felicitating speeches.

All Disputes Patched Up.

Representative Cooper of Wisconsin, one of those who inaugurated the historic fight on the Cannon rules, while "Uncle Joe" was speaker of the house, known in those days as "the king of the insurgents," was called to the chair by Speaker Clark to preside over the proceedings.

Mr. Cannon was visibly impressed by the speeches. When, at the conclusion of Speaker Clark's tribute, he was called upon by Mr. Cooper to respond, he had to hesitate several minutes to gain control of himself. Later he confessed that never before in all of his experience in congress had he felt so overwhelmed.

Alert to Hear "Uncle Joe."

The whole house was alert when Mr. Cannon arose to reply to his colleagues. Mr. Rodenberg had brought the tears to his eyes when he said:

"Uncle Joe! tomorrow will be the eightieth anniversary of your birth. Entertaining, as we all do, the affection which a child feels for its father, we extend to you on this happy occasion the felicitations and good wishes of the entire house.

"We wish you the full measure of life's pleasure and we unite in the fervent hope that it will be many years before the shades of night begin to fall."

Mr. Cannon, in reply, recalled many of the stirring incidents of his early days.

"Some one has complimented me upon my partisanship," he said. "Well, this is a sample of the partisanship of the house. We would not be human if we did not disagree on politics, but we also would not be human if we couldn't love one another despite these disagreements."

"In our partisanship we have not been as keen for party advantage as is often represented. There was Gen. Benjamin F. Butler, who was a stormy petrel of American politics if we have had one; he is remembered as the author of the civil rights bill which caused such a storm of indignation throughout the south. But Gen. Butler was also the chairman of the judiciary committee which reported and put through the house the amnesty bill, which removed the political disabilities from many thousands of southern men.

"I have found the partisanship of this house throughout these forty years sometimes warm and vigorous, but largely mixed with patriotism and much common sense; no barriers in the center aisle to prevent men from crossing that partisan line, and no prohibition against meeting in the lobby or the cloakroom and talking it over in private. It has been to me a pleasant and, I hope, a profitable experience."

"Uncle Joe" told the house he misses his old friends exceedingly.

"There are, so far as I know," he said, "only four of my colleagues in the Forty-third congress which assembled here forty-three years ago, still living. They are my friend and colleague, Gen. Sherwood, now a member on this floor, former Senator Eugene Hale of Maine, former Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson of Iowa, and John R. Lynch of Mississippi.

"All others who sat in that congress have crossed over to the beyond. Many of those who were my associates in succeeding congresses have also answered the last call, and I am here among these of the second generation, following in the footsteps of their fathers, and here giving the best service of which they are capable to the welfare of their country."

While he was speaking Mr. Cannon was handed a telegram from Battling Nelson, the former lightweight boxing champion, congratulating him on his birthday.

"Darn him," said "Uncle Joe" as he read the message, "I believe I could go into the ring right now and clean him up."

STERLING CALLS COMMITTEE TO MEET TUESDAY

G. O. P. Chairman Acts When He Fails to Get Conference with Kinney.

Fred E. Sterling, chairman-elect of the Republican state committee, sent out telegrams yesterday to all members of the new committee informing them that there will be a meeting of the state committeemen at Springfield Tuesday.

Mr. Sterling said that he had taken this course after having failed to meet the retiring chairman, Garrett Kinney, and a consequent slip-up in a tentative arrangement to have Mr. Kinney issue a formal call for the meeting.

Mr. Kinney departed for New York in the afternoon, without having made the call which the primary law provides must be sent out by the retiring chairman, for a meeting of the new committee at the state capital to organize.

Call Not "Official."

Mr. Sterling said that he did not send out the telegrams as chairman of the committee or in an official capacity.

"A majority of the members of the new committee have notified me that they wish to have the meeting held in Springfield on Tuesday, and in deference to that wish I have taken the action that I did take.

"I had expected to see Mr. Kinney here today, but have failed. The wish of the committee members, as reported to me, seems to be that no legal technicality be permitted to stand in the way of proper organization of the state committee."

Action Surprises Deneen.

Former Gov. Deneen said that he was surprised that Mr. Sterling had sent out the telegrams to the committee members.

"There is no purpose on the part of any of our friends to make any trouble for Mr. Sterling or for anybody else," Mr. Deneen said. "Fourteen members of the committee were for Mr. Sterling, and we went into the caucus and made it unanimous for him."

The complication is caused by the delay in issuance of the credentials to the new committee members by the state canvassing board. Secretary of State Stevenson passes the responsibility back to the Cook county election officials, who failed, he says, to get their returns to Springfield in time for more rapid action.

Legislature to Convene.

According to Mr. Sterling's announcement, the new committee is to meet at noon at the Leland hotel. The hangover session of the legislature begins at the same hour.

Two of the Republican candidates for governor get into the active going this week. Col. Frank O. Lowden's headquarters announce that he will open his speaking campaign at Ottawa, Friday night.

Col. Frank L. Smith begins an automobile tour of the state on Tuesday at Mount Carmel, Wabash county, and proceeding through the Twenty-fourth congressional district.

John G. Oglesby, former lieutenant governor, is now an announced candidate for nomination for the office that he held for four years. His campaign is to be inaugurated in Chicago the coming week.

HE OFFERS CURE-ALL

Republican Leaders Don't Know It, but They're to Be Told How to Abolish Poverty.

LEADERS of the Republican national convention may not know it, but they are going to have presented to them a platform which, if adopted, will cure all the country's ills. The platform will be presented by Herman Gladstone of 4729 St. Lawrence avenue, auther of "How to Abolish Poverty in America."

Gladstone approached Federal Judge Landis at the close of court yesterday and asked him to indorse his book.

"Thank you; good-bye," Judge Landis replied without waiting to see or hear more.

"My plan is to abolish poverty," Gladstone said later. "The method is simple —do it with bonds."

He would have congress appropriate $3,000,000,000, with which to secure 600 farm colonies, which would be sold to a million poverty stricken families in eighty acre tracts on a thirty year payment plan.

He favors a bigger navy and universal military training.

Totals	540	6	58	40	74	8	25	48

Delegations are complete in all of the foregoing states. There are contests for the entire states of Georgia and Louisiana; in two districts in South Carolina, in one in Missouri, and in two in Oklahoma. The Michigan presidential preference vote was in favor of Henry Ford. The state delegates were elected in state convention this week and "suggested" that the delegates vote for Justice Hughes, after casting one perfunctory ballot for Ford. The Michigan delegation is not regarded as instructed. Nine states and the District of Columbia have yet to elect their delegates; viz., Alabama, Maryland, Oregon, Pennsylvania, South Dakota, Texas, Vermont, West Virginia, Wyoming, and the District. The delegates from Hawaii, the Philippine Islands, and Porto Rico have been elected. They have no vote on the presidential nomination.

CUMMINS FIRST IN PRIMARY.

Lincoln, Neb., May 6.—The total vote of the Nebraska primaries shows Henry Ford received 26,884 and A. B. Cummins 1,290 in the Republican presidential delegate contest. Justice Hughes' name was written on 15,690 ballots.

ILLINOIS TO STICK BY SHERMAN WITH SOLID 58 VOTES

G. O. P. Factions Get Together; Plan for T. R. Quarters Abandoned.

Senator Lawrence Y. Sherman will have the solidly cast fifty-eight votes of Illinois on every ballot next June at the Coliseum, or until he releases his delegates—if he ever does.

This goes for the two delegates—City Treasurer Sergel and City Clerk Siman—who were elected as "unpledged" and pro-Roosevelt, for Medill McCormick and the known personal friends of Col. Roosevelt in the delegation, and for former Gov. Deneen and National Committeeman Roy O. West and their friends in the Illinois fifty-eight.

There will be no Roosevelt headquarters opened by the Sergel-Siman combination and all the talk about a smashup of the Illinois delegation after a first ballot compliment to Sherman has dissipated into vapor.

Decided at Conference.

These facts were established yesterday, after a series of conferences, in which Senator Sherman's managers met Mr. Siman and Mr. Sergel. Medill McCormick had a conspicuous place in the negotiations.

Mr. Deneen and Mr. West were not parties directly to the conferences. The assurance reached Sherman headquarters, however, that there is no thought in the political minds of any of the Illinois delegates of breaking the pledges that they have filed with the secretary of state at Springfield, nor any disposition to do so.

"Our friends will stand by Sherman throughout," was the flat statement of former Gov. Deneen. "They will carry out their instructions in form and in spirit. I look for the solid and cordial support of the Illinois delegation for Senator Sherman."

As for State Treasurer Andrew Russel the third "unpledged" delegate from the state, he has made a public statement that he considers himself instructed and bound to support Senator Sherman as long as the senator is in the going.

California Names "Regulars."

Two other important developments of the week were the direct primaries in California and the Michigan state convention. In California the "regulars," who had two delegates in the 1912 convention by the steam roller method, had a straight ticket of twenty-six delegates. Gov. Hiram Johnson and the ex-Progressives had a full slate that was supposed to be for Johnson for president, if he had a chance, and otherwise for Roosevelt. The regulars defeated the Johnson ticket by more than 50,000.

The Michigan state convention seems to have disposed effectually of the Henry Ford boom. The presidential primary, in which Henry Ford defeated Senator William Alden Smith, was binding on nobody, it appears. The delegates were elected actually at Monday's convention at Lansing. They are supposed to vote for Ford on the first ballot and after that for Justice Hughes "or some other man of his standing and leadership."

T. R. Gets Two in Colorado.

Col. Roosevelt picked up two delegates in Colorado in a spot where his friends were not looking for anything. In the Denver congressional district Arch Stevenson, remembered as the most vitriolic of the anti-Roosevelt spokesmen in 1912, controlled the convention, named himself as one of the two delegates, and put through a Roosevelt instruction.

799 of 985 Delegates Named.

Up to last night, 799 of the 985 voting delegates to the Coliseum convention had been elected.

The Tennessee state convention named eight delegates at large with one-half vote each, in direct defiance of the rule passed at the session of the national committee's subcommittee on arrangements held last month and over the strong protests of National Chairman Charles D. Hilles. The matter may be adjusted by making four of the Tennesseans delegates and the other four alternates.

GARFIELD SAYS ROOSEVELT IS CHOICE OF ALL VOTERS.

Ohio Progressive State Committee Adjourns Without Indorsing Any Candidate for President.

Columbus, O., May 6.—The Ohio Progressive state committee met and adjourned today without indorsing Roosevelt or any other candidate for the presidency. James R. Garfield, who was elected chairman of the Ohio delegation, addressed the meeting.

"Voters, regardless of party," Mr. Garfield said, "want Roosevelt for president."

Indorsed in Bay State.

Boston, Mass., May 6.—Theodore Roosevelt was unanimously chosen the nominee for the presidency of the United States at the Progressive state convention here this afternoon. Although no longer a recognized political party in Massachusetts, due to their failure to poll a 3 per cent vote at the recent state election, the Progressives met at Faneuil hall and delegates at large, district delegates, and alternates were chosen, all instructed to vote for the colonel.

SUES FATHER FOR SLANDER.

Accusing his father, Julius Liebling, of slander, Abraham M. Liebling, publisher of the Jewish Daily Press, yesterday sued him for $25,000. Only the præcipe of the suit was filed, but Attorney Leopold Saltiel, representing the son, said:

"During Abraham M. Liebling's recent campaign for Republican ward committeeman in the Twentieth ward, his father made speeches for his son's opponent, declaring that, while he lay on a sick-bed, his son had brandished a knife and threatened to stab him unless he turned the Jewish Press over to Abe.

"The elder Liebling has been making such statements for a long time. They have hurt the son's reputation, and he purposes putting a stop to them."

MID-YEAR MODEL
257 CARS IN ONE

Mitchell

$1325 F. O. B. RACINE
With 127-inch Wheelbase

26 Extra Features

All Paid for Through 10,000 Factory Savings Made Possible by John W. Bate—The Efficiency Expert

In this Mid-Year Mitchell we have many new things to show you. All the best ideas which were brought out in 257 New York Show models. And 26 extras, unique to the Mitchell. Don't miss this car.

The construction of the chassis in the Mitchell is uniform. We have spent 13 years in developing it. And we cannot hope to greatly improve it.

But a hundred designers—experts and artists—are evolving new ideas in body and equipment. And our chief effort is to keep ahead of the rest.

Our Composite Car

This year we took a new tack. We brought out this Mid-Year model—our second for 1916.

We held its completion until after the New York Show. There we saw all the new ideas and touches. And we learned what people liked best.

Then we combined in this new model 73 things that folks wanted. Of these, 26 are unique to the Mitchell—either exclusive or very rare.

So you will find this New Mitchell, in scores of ways, the most interesting car on the market.

The Prize Design

This body design stood out first at the Show. It was voted by women—and by men—the handsomest touring model ever created.

Body styles are like women's styles. The designer's favorite is often unpopular. The only way to get a winner is to take a vote—as we did.

As a result of that vote—covering 257 models—we have a design which all will concede first place among cars of this season.

So with every new idea and equipment. They are not merely our conceptions. They are all what people liked best at the Shows.

Exclusive Extras

Then this Mitchell includes 26 extra features—things other cars don't offer.

All are wanted—all are things you'd miss. But they are costly and unusual. So most makers ignore them, or else list them as extras.

We believe that fine cars of this day should embody all known comforts and conveniences. So we add all we learn of or invent.

We will let you decide, when we point out these extras, if you would wish any left out.

John W. Bate Pays for All of Them

These extras don't show in the price of the Mitchell. In fact, no other car of this size and grade sells at the Mitchell price.

All of these extras are paid for by factory savings. And those savings are due to John W. Bate, the efficiency expert.

Mr. Bate built this plant, covering 45 acres. He equipped it with 2092 modern machines. He builds in this plant 98 per cent of this car, under Bate efficiency methods.

He builds it for half what it would have cost, even five years ago. He builds it for less than any other factory could build a similar car. And for 20 per cent less than any factory which buys a large share of its parts.

This is the model factory of America building high-grade cars. John W. Bate has worked out 10,000 savings. That is the reason for all these Mitchell extras.

This is the only car with Bate Cantilever springs, which double the ease of riding.

This is the car which 37 noted engineers have selected for their personal car.

This is the car which holds the world's road endurance record. Six Mitchell cars have averaged 164,372 miles each—an average 30-year service.

Every motor car enthusiast should come and inspect this car.

With high-speed economical six-cylinder engine of enormous power; wheelbase, 127 in.; anti-skid tires on rear; complete equipment, including engine driven tire pump, reversible headlights, etc.

MOOSE SELECT TWO CANDIDATES FOR BENCH JOBS

John T. Richards, Republican, and Russell Whitman, Democrat, Nominated.

Two candidates for Superior court judges were nominated by the Progressive party yesterday and the proper papers were filed with County Clerk Sweitzer before the official lists were closed.

John T. Richards, 5737 Dorchester avenue, and Russell D. Whitman of Evanston are the Moose nominees, both for full terms. The Progressives leave four blank spaces on the ballot for the full term and make no nomination for the Freeman vacancy.

Socialists filed their list for the judicial places shortly before midnight. The candidates on it are Edward M. Winston, Peter Sissman, Louis J. Delson, Samuel Block, William Bross Lloyd, Samuel Holland and Daniel Uretz, the last named to fill the Freeman vacancy.

Want Six Good Men.

The formal Progressive action was taken in conformity with the following document that was filed with the Progressive county committee:

"The undersigned desire to find upon the ballot for Superior court judges at the election on June 5 the names of six men whom the practicing lawyers of Cook county can conscientiously recommend. Acting with other members of the bar, we have asked to become candidates two lawyers of high standing and fitted for the bench by ability, experience, and temperament.

"They are John T. Richards, a Republican, and Russell Whitman, a Democrat. In order to place their names upon the ballot the Progressive organization has agreed to nominate them, although they are in no sense partisan candidates. Both of these men are in general practice. Mr. Richards has been president of the Chicago Bar association and Mr. Whitman is now president of the Civil Service Reform association."

The petition is signed by—

Frank J. Losch,	Fletcher Dobyns,
Frank F. Reed,	W. T. Alden,
Amos C. Miller,	Merritt Starr,
Joseph A. Defrees,	John H. S. Lee,
John R. Montgomery,	F. B. Johnstone,
Stephen A. Foster,	Edgar A. Bancroft,
John M. Zane,	Horace H. Martin,

Blow at the "Bosses."

At the session of the Progressive county committee at which the Richards-Whitman nominations were made, the decision was unanimous that the party would not support the Republican judicial ticket.

"In a way, the Progressive nominations serve as notice to the bosses of the two machines that the people will not stand for the tactics that have been used," Harold L. Ickes said.

The Republican slate in the order in which the names were filed follows: Judge Robert E. Turney, George A. Dupuy, Hosea W. Wells, Robert E. Crowe, Henry Utpatel, and Edward J. Herdlicka for the long term and Andrew J. Redmond for the short term.

The Democratic ticket, in its order, is: Judge Richard E. Burke, Judge Charles A. McDonald, Judge Martin M. Gridley, Judge William Fenimore Cooper, Judge William E. Dever, and John J. Sullivan for the full terms and Joseph B. David for the unexpired term.

LOAN VICTIM

This Veteran of Michigan Fighting Seventh Cavalry Caught by Need.

Ernest Von Daniel

NURSERIES FOR SUFFRAGE BABES

To Be Established All Over City That Mothers May Have More Freedom.

Just because a woman has a number of small children she is not going to be prevented from marching in the suffrage parade. Day nurseries are to be established at a number of points throughout the city on June 7, so that mothers anxious to march may check their children with a nurse secured for the occasion.

The plan was started by the women of the Twenty-fifth ward, who will open tomorrow headquarters at the Plymouth hotel. The women of the ward anxious to march may make arrangements there and purchase their marching outfits. Mrs. James F. Presnell and Mrs. Martin K. Northam are in charge of the headquarters.

While the suffragists loyal to the parading contingent will wear straw hats with yellow ribbons, which will cost them exactly 15 cents, their rivals of the Congressional union, who will hold a convention at the time of the parade, will adorn themselves with $5 hats, called the "Woman's party hat," in honor of the party that is to be formed at the convention. According to the description given out, it is to be a creation of silk, straw, and braid, adorned with rosettes of purple, white, and gold, which are the union's colors.

The hats will be sold in every large city in the country.

ROLLS UNDER TRAIN WHEELS

William Gordon, 1613 North Winchester avenue, lost his left arm last night when he rolled from a sand pile, on which he was sleeping, and stopped under the wheels of a Chicago, Milwaukee, and St. Paul train at North Branch and North Halsted streets.

G. A. R. MEMBER BECOMES VICTIM OF LOAN AGENCY

He Mortgaged Furniture to Pay Bills for Wife's Last Illness.

Private Ernest von Daniel is 72 years old now. Therefore he is not as spry and full of zip as when, a member of the Seventh Michigan cavalry in '61, he fought for the union.

"But," said he last night in his home, 1749 Lake street, "I never got up against as tough a battle as I am having now with the loan sharks."

And the frail old man, infirm and weary, his hair as white as snow, shuddered for the trials that have come upon him in his declining days.

Wife Just Died.

Last Sunday Von Daniel saw his wife close her eyes in death. For six months he had nursed her with the tender care that mothers bestow upon children. She was his last relative. Now he is alone in the world except for a few old cronies.

When Mrs. Von Daniel fell ill funds were low in the house. There was only the old man's pension, and it wasn't enough. There was the physician to pay and medicines to buy and the little things to make comfortable the last days of the little old lady who for twenty-five years had been his companion.

Mortgaged His Furniture.

He went, without the knowledge of his friends, to the State Loan association and borrowed $100. For this he gave a mortgage on his furniture; he turned over the mortgage on the furniture and agreed to pay $35 in addition to the principal for its use for one year.

Mrs. Von Daniel died. Her affairs were settled and some $300 insurance fell to her aged husband. He went straightway to the loan office and asked permission to pay back the loan and interest for three months. He was refused.

Then he consulted Henry Kramer, an attorney. Kramer went to the loan company with a witness and repeated the offer. It was not only denied, but Richard Miller, a clerk, threatened to whip the lawyer for his effrontery, the lawyer says.

There Might Have Been Trouble.

"But he shouldn't have talked like that," said a sturdy young friend of Von Daniel, "because I was there, too. I don't like fighting, but the clerk did very well not to start anything."

Now Mr. Kramer will take the matter before Judge Landis and get a settlement.

"The old man hasn't eaten for several days," said the lawyer. "He has been so worried because of the death of his wife and because he fears the loan sharks will take his last remaining property—his small furniture—that he is rapidly growing ill."

Last night Private von Daniel went out for an airing with an old crony and he felt a little better when he was told of the work that Judge Landis is doing to clear out the loan sharks.

TOO OLD FOR BIRTHDAYS.

Veteran Politician to Let 76th Pass Without Any Sort of Celebration.

Birthdays when one reaches the age of 76 are a matter of small moment, according to David W. Clark, 3125 Warren avenue, the Republican ward committeeman from the Thirteenth ward and a member of the board of public improvements. This is Mr. Clark's birthday.

"No, there's not going to be any celebration," he said. "When a man gets as old as I am the best thing to do is to forget birthdays.

"I am going to celebrate by going home this afternoon and flirting with members of my family."

THIS LOAN AGENT CAN'T FIGURE UP HIS CHARGES.

He Tells Judge Landis He Couldn't Calculate Rate of Interest Before Doomsday.

Luman B. French, owner of the Federal Loan company, told Judge Landis yesterday that if he "figured until doomsday he couldn't calculate the rate of interest he had charged Stephen Harrison, a collector." Harrison went before Judge Landis several days ago and complained through his attorneys, Callahan & Callahan, that he was in the clutches of loan sharks and that his salary had been stopped.

Judge Landis haled a dozen sharks into court and each one agreed to cancel his claims against Harrison, who testified that he had repaid the original loans several times over in interest.

French was one of the agents who was asked to calculate the rate of interest he charged. One of his assistants told the judge that the best he could figure was 181 per cent.

HELD FOR MOVING TENANT.

Real Estate Dealer Accused of Larceny for Taking Delinquent Renter's Goods.

Richard T. Race of 4035 North Kedvale avenue, a real estate dealer, was held to the grand jury yesterday on a charge of larceny for having removed the household goods of Albert R. Behrheine, 7009 Overhill avenue, formerly a tenant of Race. Behrheine admitted he owed Race $110 rent and was preparing to move when the landlord sent two men to spirit away the goods.

DRAWS LIFE SENTENCE FOR MURDER OF SALOONKEEPER

George Ely Saved from Death Penalty by Recommendation of the State's Attorney to Judge.

George Ely was sentenced to life imprisonment by Judge Turney yesterday for the murder of Steve Zborel, a saloonkeeper, who was shot and killed in his place of business at 9301 Vaughan avenue in an attempted holdup Sept. 22, 1915.

Several weeks ago Judge Turney announced that he was going to sentence Ely to death after he had pleaded guilty. The court did not impose the extreme penalty as the result of recommendations for life imprisonment made by State's Attorney Hoyne and his assistant, Michael F. Sullivan. He also was of the opinion that some promise had been made to Ely for him to take the witness stand against his co-defendants, John Halicki, who was sentenced to thirty-five years' imprisonment, and Joseph Sheahan and Victor Block, who drew twenty-five and twenty years respectively some time ago.

ASYLUM NURSES CLEARED.

Attendants in the Chicago State Hospital for the Insane were cleared of any blame in connection with the death of Pecicardo Petri, 1110 Fulton street, at an inquest yesterday. Petri was found to have died in the asylum on April 29 of paresis. His widow, because of bruises found on the body, suspected he had met with brutal treatment, but the jury found he had sustained the bruises in falling when he attempted to escape from a window.

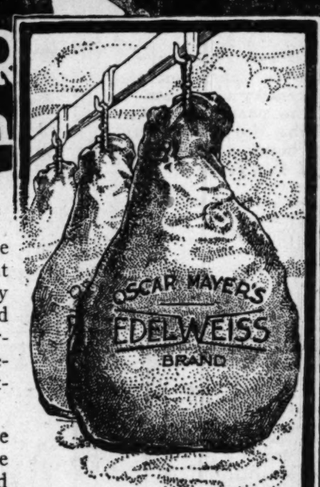
How OSCAR MAYER Smokes Ham



IF your mouth ever watered at the sight of food, it will when you sit down to a meal of Oscar Mayer's juicy Sugar-Cured and Hickory-Smoked Ham. You will appreciate what a difference there is in hams, and you will regret that you have not had this Hickory-Smoked delicacy sooner.

You may ask, "What is the difference in hams?" The difference is (1) in the selection of hams, (2) the curing, and (3) the smoking.

We select the best young porkers. We sugar cure our own way—the painstaking, old fashioned way.

Nothing but genuine hickory sticks smolder their fragrant blue smoke in the smoke house of Oscar Mayer. It is the only smoke which can impart that deliciously rich and dainty flavor peculiar to Oscar Mayer's Hams.

A meal of this sugar cured, hickory-smoked meat delicacy will cultivate in you a new appreciation of ham. If you have never eaten Oscar Mayer's Sugar-Cured, Hickory-Smoked Ham, do so now. They cost no more than others.

"Edelweiss" is our best brand of Ham—also the name of our best grade of Bacon. You should try both. They are two of Oscar Mayer's Meat Delicacies.

LUSITANIA SUNK YEAR AGO TODAY, BRINGING CRISIS

Survey of Disaster Which Put U. S. Near War and Notes That Followed.

Today is the anniversary of the event that "brought the war home to the United States."

One year ago this afternoon the great Cunard liner Lusitania was torpedoed by a German submarine off the Irish coast. The vessel sank in less than half an hour. Among the 1,198 persons who lost their lives there were 114 American citizens, including half a dozen of the best known men in the United States.

No other happening of the war has caused such a sensation among Americans. As the details of the thrilling catastrophe came over the cables a wave of horror and indignation swept the United States. The action of the submarine was variously characterized as murder and piracy. For the first time there was open talk of war with Germany. The stock market, a most sensitive barometer of public feeling, slumped to the lowest point since the panic of 1907.

Subsea Issue Grows Tense.

Germany's submarine policy had been a subject of tense anxiety for many weeks before the Lusitania sailed from New York on May 1. Early in February Berlin had issued a proclamation declaring a certain area around the British Isles a zone of war, in which submarines would attack enemy merchantmen beginning Feb. 18. On Feb. 10 the United States warned Germany that it would be held to "strict accountability" for any loss of American lives that might result from this decree.

Germany replied that the proclamation would remain in force. On March 28 an American was lost on the torpedoed British steamer Falaba. On May 1 the American tank steamer Gulflight was torpedoed and its captain and two members of the crew killed. Washington was silent, but the people were beginning to murmur.

Warned to Keep Off Vessel.

A few days before the Lusitania sailed the German embassy inserted advertisements in some of the metropolitan papers warning travelers bound for the war zone on British ships that they "embarked at their own risk." The warning was repeated on the day of the ship's departure, and twenty or more telegrams, bearing a like message, were sent to prominent persons booked as passengers. So far as could be learned, no one heeded the warnings.

The voyage was uneventful until the Lusitania arrived off Old Head of Kinsale at 2 o'clock in the afternoon of Friday, May 7. Many of the passengers were still at luncheon. Those who were on deck saw the periscope of a submarine about half a mile away on the seaward side.

The periscope had hardly been sighted when the watchers saw the trail of a torpedo approaching at high speed. An instant later it struck the side of the ship with a terrific crash. Within a few seconds there was a second explosion, supposed at the time to have been caused by another torpedo.

Heads Vessel for Land.

Capt. Turner, who was on the bridge, ordered the bulkheads closed and the ship's course changed toward the shore. The lifeboats could not be lowered at once, for while the ship was under headway they would have been swamped. As the vessel listed sharply to starboard the captain gave order to stop, but the engines had been put out of commission and nothing could be done with them.

The slope of the deck made it almost impossible to handle the boats on the port side. Fewer than a dozen boats, all told, reached the water, and these were filled for the most part with women and children. Survivors told afterward of many acts of heroism among the men and women who were left behind.

At the last moment a few of the passengers buckled on life preservers and jumped overboard. Some abandoned hope entirely and went down with the ship.

In less than half an hour the Lusitania was gone, sinking rapidly with her stern in the air.

Coast Guard Calls Help.

The catastrophe had been seen by members of the coast guard stationed on the cliffs of Kinsale Head. They immediately sent messages to Queenstown and the admiralty telling of the disaster, and the work of rescue was begun. Trawlers, motor boats, and tugs from Queenstown picked up the survivors in the boats and those who were still alive in the water.

Then, bit by bit, the story reached the American newspapers. Each message told of distinguished men and women who had lost their lives. Charles Frohman, the theatrical manager, had last been seen on the deck, calmly awaiting the end. Elbert Hubbard, the picturesque "Fra" of East Aurora, was gone, as were Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, Charles Klein, the playwright; Justus Miles Forman, the novelist.

"Why fear death? It is the most beautiful adventure in life," were Mr. Frohman's last words, as reported by Miss Rita Jolivet, an actress with whom he was talking just before the end came.

Chicagoans Lose Lives.

Chicago felt the shock of the tragedy in the deaths of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Plamondon and of Mme. Marie De Page, widow of the surgeon general of the Belgian army, who had been here in the interest of Red Cross work and was hurrying back to see her 17 year old son before he took his place in the trenches. Herbert S. Stone, son of Melville E. Stone of the Associated Press, was a victim. He was a former Chicagoan, with a wide group of friends here.

The nation was horror stricken. Everywhere the torpedoing of the big liner was denounced in the bitterest terms. Theodore Roosevelt led the outburst with a characteristic series of interviews and articles. The most moderate expression of opinion was that Germany had lost heavily in the sympathy and respect of neutrals.

Wall street was in a panic. Stocks broke, 10, 15, and 20 points. Bethlehem Steel slid in little more than an hour from 150 to 130. United States Steel was quoted around 50.

Nation Regains Poise.

The Monday following the disaster found public opinion in America steadying itself. From Washington came assurances that action was to follow the deliberation with which the Falaba and Gulflight cases had been considered.

"We'll leave it to Wilson," was the burden of the expressions.

On Tuesday stocks began to recover. That night the president made his "too proud to fight" speech in Philadelphia, urging the nation to be calm and trust the administration to meet the crisis wisely.

Men talked of "strict accountability" and waited. Berlin had issued a statement expressing "deepest sympathy" at the loss of lives on the Lusitania, but declaring that the ship carried munitions and that the British "starvation blockade" had made retaliatory measures necessary. As a matter of fact the Lusitania's cargo included 5,000 cases of ammunition from America for the allies.

Wilson Assured Support.

The problem now centered President Wilson's entire attention. He was deluged with messages assuring him of support in any action he might take.

The first "Lusitania note," which referred also to the Falaba and Gulflight cases, went to Berlin on May 13. It demanded an immediate apology for the attack on the Lusitania, an offer of reparation and assurances that such attacks without warning would not be repeated. These things, it said, the American government "confidently expects."

Germany's reply was sent on May 28. It was not final, but suggested further parleying. Practically all British merchantment, it said, were known to be armed. The Lusitania "undoubtedly" had masked guns. The British admiralty had ordered merchantment to attack submarines [copies of these orders were long afterward made public]. The Germans contended that the Lusitania carried troops and munitions and, anyway, the ship's destruction was due primarily to an explosion in its own cargo. It was suggested that these things might not be clearly understood.

Bryan Quits Cabinet.

There were further cabinet sessions and a rejoinder to this note had been virtually framed when William Jennings Bryan resigned as secretary of state. He withdrew at the height of the crisis, he explained, because he could not sign the note that had been prepared. He did not believe, he said, that Americans had any business on the vessels of belligerent nations.

Bryan's resignation was taken as a forecast that the second note was to be more firm in tone than the first. It was.

The German contentions as to mitigating circumstances were swept aside with the declaration that the only vital fact about the affair was that a great passenger steamer "was torpedoed and sunk without so much as a challenge, and that men, women, and children were sent to their death in circumstances unparalleled in modern warfare." The presence of ammunition in the cargo, the note said, did not excuse the attack. The rights of American citizens, even on merchant ships of belligerents, must be protected.

Berlin Gives Assurances.

Germany's reply to this, which came on July 8, gave assurances of safety for neutral vessels, but did not yield the vital point. The presence of Americans on belligerent ships, it declared, would not and could not insure such vessels from submarine attack.

"Unsatisfactory and evasive" was the general comment on this communication. Popular indignation began to rise again. But the president's advisers said "Wait."

The country waited, and waited what seemed a long time. It was two weeks before further word was sent to Germany. But when it came it was final.

"The rights of neutrals in time of war," said the last note, "are based upon principle, and the principles are immutable. The government of the United States will continue to contend (for the freedom of the seas) without compromise and at any cost. Repetition by the commanders of German naval vessels of acts in contravention of those rights must be regarded by the government of the United States when they affect American citizens as deliberately unfriendly."

Arabic Sent to Bottom.

For a month after that there was silence—and no more Americans were killed. On Aug. 19 the Arabic was sunk and two Americans died. Two weeks later Ambassador von Bernstorff transmitted this statement to Secretary Lansing:

"Liners will not be sunk by our submarines without warning and without safety to the lives of noncombatants, provided that the liners do not try to escape or offer resistance."

That was the end of the Lusitania's story except as it lives in the memories of bereaved Americans. Later attacks and the coming of another crisis constitute a separate chapter of world history.

Hold Services Today.

Formal and informal memorial services will be held in churches and homes of Chicago Lusitania victims today. Requiem high mass in the Holy Name cathedral will be said for Mr. and Mrs. Plamondon, while at the East Pearson street home of the two sons and the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Plamondon there will be a quiet family observation of the anniversary of the parents' death.

Mrs. C. H. Lund of 4420 Laporte avenue, who lost her husband and father in the disaster and was herself a survivor, declared there would be no formal observation of the day, but that of the anniversary's quickened memories of the lost ones.

Sarmast Baba, who lost three cousins, George, Frank, and Abram Baba, in the sinking of the ship, reported that there would be a quiet home observance of the day at his home, 731 North Clark street.

In memory of those who lost their lives on the Lusitania the Cunard line will half-mast flags on all offices and vessels today, in accordance with a cabled order sent out from Liverpool and received yesterday by the Chicago offices.

BURGLAR FORCES MOTHER TO GIVE UP BABY'S BANK.

Night Thief Drives Winslow Hage Into Closet and Compels Wife to Bring Out Child's Savings.

Stealing candy from the baby doesn't mean anything to the burglar who robbed the apartment of Mr. and Mrs. Winslow Hage, 4058 Sheridan road, at dawn yesterday morning.

Mrs. Hage discovered the thief and screamed. Mr. Hage awoke and started for his revolver, but the burglar, pressing a revolver against his side, forced him into a closet.

"Keep quiet," he ordered Mrs. Hage, and she did.

"We haven't a thing in the house but the baby's bank," said Mrs. Hage, "you wouldn't take that, would you?"

"Go and get it," was the order, and Mrs. Hage brought out the bank, which contained $20. Then the burglar was off.

KELLY GOES TO CANADA.

Thomas Kelly appeared in Judge Landis' court yesterday and asked to be sent back to Winnipeg without waiting until May 17, the day upon which he was to have been extradited. Judge Landis issued an order granting his wish. Kelly is a millionaire contractor and is to be tried in Winnipeg on charges of embezzling more than $1,000,000 from the government of Canada in his work of constructing public buildings.

GREATEST LIBRARY IN WORLD URGED FOR ILLINOIS SCHOOL

President E. J. James Starts Campaign for Gaelic Section in Talk to Irish Fellowship Club.

Campaigning for the greatest library in the world, incidentally to contain a section of Irish literature and history that shall be unique, President Edmund J. James of the University of Illinois yesterday urged the Irish Fellowship club to aid in the movement.

It is proposed that one section of the University of Illinois library shall contain American history and the subsections of this shall be devoted to the races that make up American nationalism. Dr. James is confident that by building up a vast library Illinois will force itself into the position of a world educational center.

"I am anxious to make our collection of Irish manuscripts so comprehensive," said Dr. James, "that no one will think of writing of the history or customs of the Irish people without first consulting the library of the University of Illinois."

Dr. Gertrude Schoepperle, professor of literature of the university, explained that the collection of Irish works has been growing steadily and the university is enabled each year to send out something in the way of an article, a book, or a review dealing with Celtic subjects.

Cadillac Words Are Backed by Deeds

Every careful statement we make about the Cadillac performance—every fact of Cadillac perfection—can be told to you only in words.

We have no patent on these words, no corner on the ability to use them. Everything we say about the Cadillac can be said about any other car. Every truth of Cadillac performance can be claimed for any other car. And it is not strange that this is being done today.

The hopes, the dreams, the ambitions of every motor car designer are realized at last in the Cadillac Eight. So amazingly has the charm of the Cadillac influenced the public mind that the only impressive words in motordom today are those which describe the Cadillac performance.

What more natural than to claim equality with the Cadillac, since lesser claims will not impress buyers? So you read about "wonderful" motors, amazing pick-up, easy handling in traffic, velvety action, twin cylinders, "shattering traditions" and "leaders" of progress.

But remember, most of these words and phrases which mean so much today would never have been used at all except for Cadillac progress compelling them. Cadillac deeds first necessitated these Cadillac words. And Cadillac deeds are still the only deeds which justify their use. And we are proving it.

The bare truth is that no car comparable to the Cadillac Eight has yet been developed. In test after test the Cadillac Eight has proved its mastery of every situation yet devised to beat it. It still stands the only up-to-date car which any important number of owners have driven long enough to prove its mettle.

It is what the Cadillac does—what everybody knows it does—that suggests these exaggerated claims for other cars—claims which are already reacting on those who hope you will take words for deeds. Will you?

The Murphy Canopy Bed

will save space in Bed Chamber

Sleeping Porch
Hotel Room
Summer Cottage

WHEREVER it is desirable to save space or wherever it is necessary to use a room for some other purpose during the day as well as for sleeping at night, the Murphy Canopy Bed is splendidly efficient.

It is often inconvenient to install the famous Murphy In-A-Dor Bed in a house or apartment already constructed, because the necessary closet space may not have been provided in the particular room where the bed is to be used. But the Murphy Canopy Bed will go in any room in any house and thereby practically double the usefulness of that room.

This cut shows the bed on the floor. It is a regular, full-sized bed, quite as comfortable as any you ever slept in. It is equipped with standard springs and any ordinary mattress may be used.

It is the most economical bed of its kind to install, since we offer it complete with canopy frame (but without hangings), for

This cut shows the same bed when out of the way, during the day, permitting the floor space to be devoted to other uses. Please note that the bed itself does not fold—only headboard and legs. Friction clamps at the foot of the bed keep the bedding in position during the day (loosely hung and aired), so that it is all made up and ready for use when lowered at night.

Like the Murphy In-A-Dor Bed the Murphy Canopy Bed is mechanically perfect and can not get out of order. It is so perfectly balanced that it can be raised or lowered without effort even by a child.

If you want to save space in your hotel, rooming house, apartment, summer cottage or sleeping porch, write us for more detailed information about the Murphy Canopy Bed.

STOCKS RECOVER AFTER TIMES OF NATIONAL ALARM

History of Market During Year Shows Steady Rise to Last October.

One year ago today, as the calendar runs, the Lusitania was sunk, causing the loss of 1,153 lives, of which 114 were American. The effect on the stock market was instant. The news reached Wall street at a time stocks were daily advancing, led in their upward course by Bethlehem Steel.

On that morning this stock had touched 130, the highest price attained at that time. Within an hour it had dropped to 120. All the active issues felt quick declines, ranging from 3 to 30 points, as noted in the case of Bethlehem Steel.

With the sinking of the Lusitania there was inaugurated a controversy between the United States and Germany, which has continued to date, and which has three or four times caused breaks in the market. The intervening period between "crises" has, however, witnessed a gradually ascending level of prices for stocks, so far as affected by diplomatic relations between the two countries. The peak of the upward movement, however, was reached last October, when Bethlehem Steel touched $600 per share.

Quick Break, Recovery.

The reception of the last German note on last Friday caused a quick break in prices, but the recoveries were over before the close of the day. This was not the case on May 7, 1915. The jar which the market then received continued for weeks.

Within the last twelve months and to date the low prices made on May 7 have in some instances doubled; in the case of war stocks 50 per cent advances have been common.

The railroad list has not shown such improvement. In fact, the gains have been relatively small compared even with the low prices of one year ago.

In part this has resulted from the unloading of American securities owned in London and Paris. A round estimate has placed the par value of such sales at $1,000,000,000.

Here Is Table.

The appended table shows the high price of a number of leading stocks on May 7, 1915, and the low price recorded the same day following news of the Lusitania. There are also presented the closing prices of yesterday, the compilation affording a record of the advance in the price of stocks which has taken place within twelve months.

FRONT! TAKE THE GENTLEMAN TO——

Here are some of the requests for rooms received at the Progressive national convention headquarters:

A delegate from Texas, who writes he wants "a large room with several beds and a private bath in one of the best hotels, with a good view of the lake and three windows; would think $1.25 a day about right."

A delegate from Missouri writes he must have a room with a bathroom window. He says he has to shave every day and he can't do it creditably without a strong light over his shoulder.

A man from Utah wants a room together with "that rather fat fellow from Illinois" whom he used to see so much of at the 1912 convention. Can't remember his name, but recalls that "he could always fill a flush."

A man from Oregon is bringing his 3 year old daughter and wants a room "where there will be neither noise nor smoke, and a nearby park—somewhere in the heart of the business district."

DOCTOR SUED BY HIS WIFE.

Neither of Her Two Marriages to Dr. F. J. Hobbs Is Legal, She Says.

Dr. Frederick J. Hobbs of 3506 Indiana avenue is being sued by Mrs. Marion Taylor Hobbs, who desires annulment of their marriage. It is asserted that Dr. Hobbs was married to Mrs. Hobbs while he was yet the husband of Mrs. MaryJane Hobbs. On Dec. 17, 1913, it is declared, he obtained a divorce from his first wife without revealing to Judge Baldwin, who granted it, his marriage to Mrs. Marion Taylor Hobbs. Within the prohibited year after the divorce, she adds, he was remarried to her.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot-Ease to Be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide.

The Government's foot powder order is regarded as the last word in the scientific outfitting of the defenders of the flag."

The English, French and Allied Troops constantly make use of Allen's Foot-Ease. It takes the friction from the shoe and rests the feet. Foot Powder, shaken into the shoes of soldiers, has long been in use in the German army, and Uncle Sam's adoption of this form of treating and easing the feet, emphasizes the testimony of the millions of people the world over, who are shaking Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic powder, into their shoes, and using it in the foot bath, as the only practical and lasting treatment to ease and prevent sore feet. PHTHISIS PLANT IN NEW HANDS

Gekler Takes Firm Stand for Civil Service When He Assumes Reins.

STAFF STICKS TO POSTS.

The official termination of the Sachs regime in the municipal tuberculosis sanitarium was brought about yesterday when Dr. W. A. Gekler assumed the office of medical director and Charles J. Happel became business director. They succeed Dr. J. W. Coon and Frank E. Wing, who were the operating heads of the institution while Theodore B. Sachs was president of the board of directors.

Dr. Gekler, formerly associate medical director at the sanitarium, decided to accept the place after a conference with the new president of the board, Dr. Charles P. Caldwell, who spent the morning at the institution. Dr. Caldwell is said to have assured Dr. Gekler that it is the intention henceforth to observe civil service to the letter.

Wing Not Decided.

Mr. Wing has not yet determined whether he will accept the new position of social director that has been offered him. He will remain at the institution for a few days to familiarize Mr. Happel with the work.

"I called a conference of all sanitarium physicians except those who are in charge," Dr. Caldwell said, "and assured them that their positions are safe under civil service and that all they need to do is their duty.

"I told them I would not stand for any other method of conducting the institution. I told them that those in charge had promised me to give their best efforts toward making the sanitarium the greatest institution of its kind in the United States and I asked them to do likewise.

Quit Now or Stick!

"I informed them that I had heard rumors that many resignations were impending, and I said that it would be best for the sanitarium and for all concerned if resignations were made then and there. No one seemed ready to resign. Then we all had dinner together, and I think the sanitarium is due for a prosperous era."

Dr. Caldwell will visit the sanitarium again today, when he will probably ask Mr. Wing as to his plans.

PETTY GRAFTING SCHEME BARED

Old City Employe's Charging Small Sum for Furnishing Bonds Under Fire.

HE ADMITS PRACTICE.

Wilson O. Stahl, a civil war veteran and a city employé for nineteen years, yesterday was accused by Health Commissioner Robertson of being involved in petty grafting. Mr. Stahl admitted it. The fact that the practice has been in vogue in the department for fifteen years has induced Dr. Robertson to be lenient in disciplining Stahl and his associates.

According to the health commissioner, Stahl was commonly on hand when applicants for restaurant licenses appeared. He would provide the $500 bond required and charge a fee of 25 cents. Issuance of the bond involved no risk practically, as the city never started suit on any of them.

Those who went surety on the bonds included Harry Stahl, said to be a nephew to Mr. Stahl; T. J. Rodney, ambulance attendant at the Iroquois hospital; Howard Cartwright, W. P. Burnett, and W. S. Hawthorne, clerks in the health department.

"Stahl was a colonel in the civil war," Dr. Robertson said. "It was just a little lunch money for the old man, I guess. I will probably suspend Stahl and the other clerks for five or ten days. The investigation is not complete, and charges may be preferred against all of them."

Cuts Head After Seizure.

An unidentified man, about 42 years old, 6 feet tall and well dressed, was the victim of a seizure of illness yesterday and fell against and shattered a window of Garber Bros.' tailor shop, 1358 North Clark street. He cut a three inch gash in his head. The police took him to Alexian Brothers' hospital.

HERE'S WHERE WIDOWS AND DIVORCEES HAVE BEST OF IT.

Women with Husbands Refused Permission to Take Examination for Postoffice Clerks.

A number of attractive women dropped into the federal building yesterday and timorously asked the secretary of the Seventh Civil Service district if they could take the examination for postoffice clerk.

"Are you married?" they were asked.

"I'm married," piped up a blonde, "but my husband isn't worth a nickel, so I don't live with him. I support myself."

"Nothing doing. No married women can take this examination."

"I was married," said a nervous brunette, "but I got a divorce. Can I take it?" She took a place at one of the desks.

Several other women admitted they were divorced and were permitted to tackle the examination.

Three stout women with red hair confessed that they were widows. They were eligible to take the examinations.

HIGH WAR WAGE BRINGS UNREST, AVERS ARMOUR

Hints Munition Corner on Labor as 300 Men Quit at Stockyards.

TWO OTHER STRIKES ENDED.

Industrial unrest, brought on generally by the high wages that munitions factories and other exporters dealing with European belligerents are paying for labor, is fundamentally responsible for strikes that have been started in Chicago, in the opinion of A. Watson Armour.

Just as the labor situation of Chicago had been clarified by yesterday's settlement of two of the chief wage disputes—one ending the strike of 5,000 of 7,000 workers of the International Harvester company, and the other the averting of a general strike of milk wagon drivers—there came the news that some 300 men employed in various departments of Armour & Co.'s plant at the stockyards had walked out.

Nineteenth Firm Affected.

Armour & Co. becomes the nineteenth large concern, exclusive of the milk dealers, either to have faced or undergone a strike in Chicago during the last few weeks. Some 10,000 to 15,000 persons are estimated to have been out of work temporarily during that time.

While Mr. Armour did not state that the "munitions crowd," is trying to get a "corner" on labor, he intimated such is the case in an interview given THE TRIBUNE.

"It is my opinion that the walkout of 300 of Armour & Co.'s employes, in common with many other strikes now taking place, is due to a spirit of unrest caused by the enormous wages now being offered and paid for labor by the munitions people," said Mr. Armour. "A large manufacturing concern in Chicago, producing war materials, is offering 10 cents an hour to workers simply to have them on call when they shall be wanted.

Labor Agitators Busy.

"Such tactics naturally cause unrest among the workers in other lines of business. Agitators have seized the opportunity, and are doing everything they can to foment strikes.

"The lowest wage paid for unskilled labor by Armour & Co. is 20 cents an hour. A voluntary wage increase, without any demand being made by the men, was made by the company last February. One reason that this action was taken was that officials of the company had the foresight to see what was coming with regard to the munitions factories."

Mr. Armour added that he did not anticipate serious trouble developing from the strike now on. Many of the strikers, he stated, "have returned to work after refusing to be intimidated further by agitators."

Harvester Men at Peace.

Five thousand of the 7,000 workers on strike at the McCormick plant of the International Harvester company voted unanimously to return to work tomorrow morning. It was also announced that a majority of the 2,100 on strike at the Deering plant had agreed to return following the posting of a notice by the company that the minimum wage would be 25 cents an hour, and that time and a half would be allowed for overtime in both day and night departments.

Employés of the twine mills at the McCormick plant are the only ones now whose grievances have not been satisfactorily adjusted.

Following the lead of the Bowman Dairy company, which capitulated at the end of a three hours' strike, the other milk dealers, at a meeting at the Hotel La Salle, fell into line and also granted a $2 increase per week. They also agreed to do away with solicitors, whom the drivers termed "spotters," and leave the work of getting new business entirely to the drivers themselves.

That the consumer will have to pay this was intimated by Ira J. Mix, chairman of the meeting.

The sixty men who struck at the Northwestern Terra Cotta company at 2525 Clybourn avenue Monday morning were joined during the morning by 465 more workers.

A pestiferous squirrel that has been bothering the Chinese chow dog belonging to Edward Schultz of 659 Wrightwood avenue must die.

The squirrel realizes this, but he is trying to stave off the final obsequies as much as possible. This determination made it tough on a large policeman with a large gun yesterday.

Mr. Schultz telephoned to Assistant Chief Schuettler that the squirrel has been annoying the chow. Also he has been annoying other dogs in the vicinity. So Deputy Schuettler sent a policeman with orders to exterminate the squirrel.

The policeman whanged away with explosions like that of a 42 centimeter and woke up all the night workers in the vicinity, but the squirrel just flitted from fence to bough and vice versa and winked at the policeman.

Finally, having exhausted his ammunition, the policeman retired and the squirrel was left again to the uninterrupted pleasure of annoying the chow.

WIDOW WILLED $3,000,000 ESTATE OF A. J. GRAHAM

Banker Leaves Nothing to Charity or to His Children Because of Confidence in Wife.

The will of Andrew J. Graham, west side banker, was filed in the Probate court yesterday and his widow, Mrs. Minnie P. Graham, is the sole legatee. The estate consists of $1,000,000 in personal property, $1,500,000 of real estate, and $500,000 in life insurance, in addition to his interests in the banking firm of Graham & Sons.

The banker left nothing to charity. Neither are his children named as legatees, but Mr. Graham makes mention of his faith and confidence in the ability of his wife to care for them the same as if he were living. The will is short, consisting of one typewritten page.

Mrs. Graham gave the names of Joseph W., John B., Jarlath, Ralph, and Frank J. Graham, 13, 21, 26, 29, and 30 years old, as surviving sons.

Andrew J. Ryan, attorney for Mrs. Graham, said that he believed Mr. Graham left nothing to charity because of his confidence in his wife, who, Mr. Ryan said, has at all times supervised the giving of donations by Mr. Graham for charitable purposes.

"Whatever Mr. Graham intended to do for charity, Mrs. Graham will carry out," Mr. Ryan said. "Mr. Graham was not the kind of a man to make a will containing bequests for charity for the purpose of self-aggrandizement."

SLAYER ON BOND FIRES AT WIFE; WOUNDS SELF

Cobbler Who Stabbed Woman Halts His Career with Gun and Knife.

OFFER TO MAKE UP REFUSED.

Meyer Brandt, 68 years old, halted, temporarily at least, his recent career of knife and gun when he attempted yesterday to kill his divorced wife and then wounded himself. He is in the county hospital and in a critical condition.

Three months ago Brandt, who owned a shoe shop near the jewelry store of Morris Epstein, 1817 West Division street, entered the Epstein living rooms in the rear of the store and offended Mrs. Epstein. This was resented, and Brandt seized a large knife and stabbed Mrs. Epstein fatally. Then he wounded her husband.

Free on $10,000 Bond.

He has been free on $10,000 bonds. Some time ago his wife obtained a divorce and he sought reconciliation. Mrs. Brandt was at home at 2117 Haddon avenue, where she lives with her sister, Mrs. Henrietta Carson, when Brandt came in.

Mrs. Suele Niget, Mrs. Bessie Kasper, and Mrs. Bertha Schlitlin were visiting, and all the women were sitting at the dining room table when Brandt, unannounced, came in.

"I'll give you $10 and we'll call it off," he announced.

His Wife Refuses.

Mrs. Brandt refused, saying she was glad to be rid of him. Brandt drew a revolver, but in his fury his aim was bad and he missed four shots at his wife. Meantime the other women ran screaming down the stairs. Neighbors came in and police calls were sent to the West North avenue station.

Brandt also ran, and as he did so, shot himself in the abdomen. The police took him to the county hospital, and he was placed on the operating table at once. Physicians said he had small chance to recover.

BURNHAM DIVES CLOSE WHEN RAID IS RUMORED.

Five Disorderly Houses Quiet When Tip That Sheriff Plans Cleanup Is Received.

An underworld tip caused the dives of Burnham to lay low last night and in the five houses of ill fame maintained in the little "open town" there was darkness and silence.

Someone had told the keepers of the brothels that the sheriff was preparing a raid.

Frank Hitchcock, partner of Johnny Patton, the mayor, in operating a saloon, dance hall, and cabaret, said he didn't expect to close up.

GUY MAY YET COME BACK.

Gov. Dunne Sets Tuesday Morning for New Hearing in Biddinger Case.

Springfield, Ill., May 6.—Guy Biddinger, Chicago detective, may be brought back to Chicago for trial, despite the fact that a recent requisition was canceled. A new application for a requisition was filed today by Attorney Harry Berger of the Cook county state's attorney's office. The governor set 10 o'clock Tuesday morning as the time for the hearing on the petition. It is understood Biddinger's return will be asked on new indictments found against him in Cook county.

Lake Forest Men Fight Over Mule at $200 a Day

Friendship Ends in Court Feud Over Hybrid in Pasture.

END IS NOT YET

This is about a mule and Joseph R. Morris and James Doyle.

The mule is just a mule; Mr. Morris is a director in the Peoples Gas, and Mr. Doyle is a retired Chicagoan.

Messrs. Morris and Doyle have been friends of bosom and lifelong sort and they own adjoining country homes in the vicinity of Lake Forest and Waukegan.

Now Mr. Morris had a young mule. Mr. Doyle had sixteen. Whereupon Mr. Morris said:

"I'm going to get rid of that brute, he's lonesome."

"Send him over to my pasture," said Doyle. "He will he happy with lots of company." It was done.

One day Morris said he guessed he'd take his mule home.

"All right," said Doyle. "Pick him out and take him home."

Morris looked over the herd, picked out a good looking mule and said, "That's the one."

Doyle smiled and gently said: "I don't want to hurt your feelings, but might I suggest that your mule was a er—um—gentleman mule?"

Mr. Morris haughtily sought an attorney and the result was a replevin suit. Then Mr. Doyle balked and had the verdict in favor of Mr. Morris set aside. Now there is to be a new trial. Thus far there have been two trials at a cost of $200 per day to Lake county and a score of veterinary experts have been called to testify to the character of the teeth of a 2 year old mule.

And there is to be more of it, for the loser is bound to appeal.

EUGENIA KELLY DAVIS HURT; THROWN FROM HER HORSE.

Found by Physician, Who Takes Her Home—Condition of Heiress Is Pronounced Critical.

New York, May 6.—[Special.]—Eugenia Kelly Davis, wife of Al Davis, was badly hurt this morning at Mineola. She was thrown by her hunter and lay for hours. It is still uncertain whether she has a fracture of the skull or only a severe concussion. She is reported in a critical condition.

Mrs. Davis left home unattended. It is thought the horse shied at something in the road and unseated her. She was found lying in the road with her head close to an electric light pole, which she apparently had hit.

She was found by Dr. J. S. Malcolm, who lifted her into his car and took her to her home and treated her there. Mr. Davis is at his wife's bedside.

TWO HELD AS SAFEBLOWERS

Police Take Armed Couple Carrying Fuses and Waiting for the Man with the Nitroglycerin.

Two alleged safeblowers were arrested last night at Van Buren street and Marshfield avenue. One of the men, police say, was carrying a revolver and cartridges, while the other carried a flashlight, fuses, and an electric sparker. They gave the names of Joseph Burton and Joseph Tuohy. The men, according to the detectives, were to meet another man who carried nitroglycerin, but he failed to appear.

HER PHONE CALL SAVES WOMAN

Because Her Children Were Burned to Death She Wished to Die.

Before turning on the gas to kill herself a woman, grief crazed, called the Maxwell street police station last night and said:

"I am going to kill myself. There is no happiness for me since my children died and never will be."

Operator Traces Call.

Before Detective Sergeant Michael Sullivan could interpose a question, she had hung up. Sullivan called out the patrol and asked the telephone operator to trace the call. The girl found it was on a four party line, and two visits were made before the police arrived at 1432 Hastings street.

The door was broken, and in a rush of escaping gas the police found Mrs. Lena Capolivitz, 40 years old. She was almost dead. A few minutes' delay would have been fatal, the surgeon said.

Children Burned to Death.

After she had been revived she told the police her four children were burned to death three months ago in a flat at Thirteenth street and Blue Island avenue.

"Since that time I have not cared to live," she said.

Neighbors were called in and she was left with them after they had been advised to guard her against any more efforts to take her life.

Jury Returns Suicide Verdict.

An inquest was held yesterday into the death of Robert MacDonald, 14 years old, step-son of Dr. John H. MacDonald, 3100 West Congress street, who turned on the gas after writing a note saying he wanted to die because his parents had not bought him a bicycle. The jury returned a verdict of suicide.

MIDWAY CO-EDS PAY TRIBUTE TO MRS. IDA NOYES' MEMORY.

One Hundred and Twenty Luncheon Guests at Home of Former Patroness of University.

Co-eds of the University of Chicago, 125 of them, paid a tribute to the memory of Mrs. Ida Noyes yesterday when they were guests of La Verne W. Noyes at luncheon in the Noyes residence in Lake Shore drive.

Among other things it was an opportunity for the co-eds to praise Ida Noyes hall, the $500,000 structure at the university which is to be devoted to women. Ida Noyes hall is to be dedicated soon, and its equipment of every modern convenience thrown open to the women of the university.

The art treasures gathered by the late Mrs. Noyes have not been disturbed in the mansion at 1450 Lake Shore drive, and the young women were permitted to view these at will.

"I could not improve on them," said Mr. Noyes, "so I have left them as Mrs. Noyes placed them."

PEDDLER GAVE HUMAN SKULL TO LAPORTE 'VOODOO' NEGRO

Laporte, Ind., May 6.—[Special.]—The mystery surrounding the skull found in the shack of Jennie L. Smith, an old "voodoo" Negro woman in Laporte, may be cleared through a story told today by Charles F. Russell, a peddler.

Russell says he gave the old woman a skull fifteen years ago. She wanted it, he said, to work charms with. He said the skull is that of an Indian and that he picked it up on a prairie during his wanderings in the west years ago.

CLYNE'S OFFICE TO ESCAPE INQUIRY BY WASHINGTON.

Attorney General Announces He Does Not Contemplate Investigation Following Expose of Friction

Dispatches from Washington last night stated that the attorney general does not contemplate an investigation of United States District Attorney Charles F. Clyne's office following the row between Mr. Clyne and his assistant, Albert L. Hopkins. Mr. Hopkins left Washington last night.

Additional light was thrown on the difficulty between Clyne and Hopkins when it was declared that the latter had been "fired" because he could not agree with Clyne's policy in conducting the affairs of the office. Friction has existed for a year.

It was stated that Mr. Clyne gave out the announcement that Mr. Hopkins had "resigned" to prevent the squabble becoming public. Mr. Clyne refused to comment on the affair, except to say that he will not make a statement until the proper time.

"SAFETY" CATCH FAILS; WIFE SHOT BY HUSBAND.

Ove Pederson of 2878 North Clark street shot and probably fatally wounded his wife yesterday while showing her how the "safety" catch worked on his new revolver. The victim was taken to the German-American hospital. Dr. H. J. Haiselden said she had an even chance for recovery.

Mrs. Pederson made a statement to the police which cleared her husband of blame.

HIBBEN WATCHES PRINCETON MEN 'SPOOF' DANIELS

Wilson's Successor Urges Preparedness and Sees Grads Ridicule Navy Head.

SATIRE ALSO HITS BRYAN.

Preparedness, introduced by a stinging satire on Josephus Daniels and William Jennings Bryan and fervently advocated by "Prexy" John Greer Hibben and two well known graduates, was the theme last night at the banquet of the Western Association of Princeton Clubs at the University club. Interpolations in the form of a demonstration by cadets from the Lake Bluff naval training station and the singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" furnished brief interruptions to the program.

The satire on the secretary of the navy and the late secretary of state under the administration of the one time president of Princeton university was presented by Princeton graduates just before the after dinner speeches. There were several gasps at the broadness of the satire; but a burst of applause and cheering at the close of the performance proved the spirit of the 700 graduates present.

Cards Presage "Something."

While the banqueters were engaged in making way with the fish course cards distributed at the various tables gave the first hint that "something" was coming. The cards read:

A PLAY entitled
NOT PREPARED.
CAST.
A Secretary of the Navy.
A Former Secretary of State.
A Sailor.
A Marine.
A President of a University.
SCENE.
Office of Secretary of Navy.

The diners puzzled over these cards until just before the final course of the banquet, when the musicians were chased from the stage in one corner of the room. A table and three chairs appeared on the stage. On the table were placed several glasses, a carafe of water—and a bottle of grape juice.

Tar with Feather Duster.

Lights out! From one wing entered the sailor with a feather duster. Later came a ministerial person of would-be severe demeanor. The banqueters cheered the appearance of "a secretary of the navy." The secretary greeted the sailor affectionately and seated himself. He poured two fingers of grape juice from the bottle into a glass, shook his head, poured a bit back into the bottle, and then mixed the remainder with water from the carafe. The mixture he drank.

Then came a farcical conversation between the secretary and the sailor which wound up with the secretary's request for somebody "not an admiral, but some Democratic person" to receive orders for handling the department during the absence of the chief. The sailor left the stage and reappeared with the marine.

The marine strode to the secretary's table and stood erect with hand to cap in a stiff military salute.

So Fearfully Warlike.

"No, no, my boy," exclaimed the secretary as he observed the pose. "Nothing so warlike. Mercy, no."

A roar of laughter went the rounds of the banquet hall as the marine abruptly ended his salute and took a chair. In a high pitched voice the secretary informed the marine that he was going away for

WILSON VISITS "PREPAREDNESS" CAMP.
President Wilson recently inspected the National Service school preparedness camp at Chevy Chase, Md., and evinced much enthusiasm. This school has an enrollment of 1,000 young women from all parts of the United States. Recruits are Mrs. George Dewey, Mrs. Scott, and Mrs. Robert Lansing, wife of the secretary of state.

AT THE ROCKAWAY RACES
Society in all its new spring feathers attended the spring opening of the amateur racing season at the Rockaway Hunting club of Hewlitt Bay Park, L. I. This is one of the events of the season and is eagerly looked forward to by all. This year the entries were unusually well worth while.

GEN. OBREGON IN CONFERENCE.
While soldiers and scouts and spies scour the Mexican country for Villa, the men at headquarters have their heads together discussing ways and means. Gens. Scott and Funston have been conferring for days, and now there has arrived on the scene Gen. Obregon, who will bring his brain to work on the weighty subject.

WHAT ABOUT OUR SUBMARINE CHASERS?
That's what Assistant Secretary of the Navy Franklin D. Roosevelt wanted to know, so he boarded the P S 1, flagship of the volunteer power squadron at Boston, Mass., and inspected the fleet of submarine chasers.

a while and wished to put the sea soldier in charge of the office.

"I have here some orders which I wish you to enforce while I am away," the secretary said, picking up a paper. "The first of these concerns the doing away with those silly colored lights which are carried on the sides of our ships. They are not at all proper—especially the red one. Ugh!

"Instead of these light I want the ships to carry automobile headlights. They can be used to see the rough places in the ocean. Then I don't like the idea of calling the left side of the ship 'port.' It reminds me of some awful intoxicating liquor. I have decided that it shall be called 'nut sundae.'"

Prince of Peace Comes.

At this stage of the proceedings, the sailor announced that a caller was waiting.

"No admiral or any such person, I hope," exclaimed the secretary.

"O, no," the sailor replied. "It is the former secretary of state.'

Whereupon entered a caricature of Bryan bearing an Easter lily.

"God bless you!" exclaimed the caricature.

"Welcome, William," was the secretary's greeting as he accepted the proffered flower. "Do you welch?" he added, offering the grape juice.

"I have never done anything else in my life," the visitor said, bowing as he accepted a few drops of grape juice in a glass filled with water.

The secretary told how he had just been outlining the new rules suggested by William. The one about changing "port," to "nut sundae," he said, met his approval especially. William interrupted frequently with a "God bless you."

That's the Answer.

"I want to hear this sailor recite his lesson," the secretary said, and then, turning to the sailor, "My boy, what do you say when an admiral comes in and says he has some new plan?"

The sailor hesitated. He shifted from one foot to another, and then blurted to explain his behavior. "I'm not prepared."

"Fine," approved the secretary. "That's it."

The two then discussed a plan for making the colleges more peaceful. They proposed that as a last step in their pacifist program they take the wind out of the footballs and eliminate bats from baseball games. This plan was under animated discussion when a likeness of President Hibben, armed with a baseball bat, appeared on the scene and drove out the two advocates.

Prolonged applause and loud cheering greeted this climax to the satire.

President Hibben, Job Hedges of New York, and W. Marshall Bullitt of Louisville were the three speakers of the evening, and preparedness was the universal subject.

Cheers for Prexy.

An enthusiastic demonstration greeted President Hibben when he was introduced by Toastmaster Calvin Fentress. The president devoted himself to the call for college men, and especially the men of Princeton, to join in the campaign for preparedness. He said he was proud that Princeton had a larger delegation at Plattsburg last year than had any other college. He asked that this delegation be still larger this year, and urged all Princeton men to attend the training camps nearest their homes.

"There has been too much talk about the rights of American citizens during recent years," President Hibben said. "What we need is a deeper realization not of our rights and privileges but of our duties."

AMERICANS TRY A BIG BLUFF TO SAVE SERB FOOD

Bulgarians Threaten to Seize Supplies Left in Monastir for Civilians.

This is the fourth of a series of articles by Mrs. Mildred Farwell. Another will appear tomorrow.

BY MILDRED FARWELL.

[Copyright: 1916: By The Tribune Company.]

The second Bulgarian army came into Monastir on Dec. 5. Line after line of stolid, chunky soldiers. Their faces distinctly oriental, heavy and rusé at the same time—marching as well as Europeans (a thing I've never seen since).

The officers, decorated with flowers by the girls who made eyes at them from the windows and balconies, were only too delighted to be photographed and posed as they passed my camera. Like a brown wave the army flowed through and over the narrow, twisted streets.

We had been trying all day unsuccessfully to see the authorities about the Serbian stores. Miss Mitchell and I held up the cavalry as it progressed in state down the main street to force into an officer's hand one of Dr. Forbes' precious stock of four visiting cards, to be given with his compliments to the Bulgarian general. That evening we were commanded, not requested, to go to the division.

Interview with Bulgar.

A neutral consul beforehand had seen the paper the Serbians had given us, and told it was en regle, but I for one confess that my knees shook as we three filed into headquarters. Our dignified progress was slightly impeded by chilblains. We found Col. Popoff, the general's aid, with an air of military severity, ensconced behind a huge desk. Throughout the rather heated interview he leaned on his sword as if it were to be the instrument of our instant execution.

Col. Popoff gave us a message from the commandant. That as all stores in Monastir now belonged to his government we were immediately to hand ours over to the authorities, that we might have twenty-four hours' respite in which he would telegraph Sofia for further orders, but if the answer was unfavorable, they would be taken by force.

Play Game of Bluff.

I am afraid we were guilty of eagle-screaming—a bad habit. We told him to come and take them. Then we asked permission to communicate with our consul or a safe conduct for one of us either to Sofia or Saloniki. Regretfully (?) both requests were refused.

For the next week we and the military played a Balkan game of poker. (Give a Bulgarian two days' practice and he would outbluff the most hardened card shark.)

We locked and barred the ambulance gates and the general posted guards outside. Many of them had been in America and were a little dubious about such behavior to her citizens.

Try Entreaties, Threats.

We had visits from the commander, from the doctors of the Bulgarian Red Cross, from officers of varying rank. We unlocked the gates, ushered them in, and heard what they had to say, ushered them out, and locked the gates again. They offered to buy the supplies to return them later. They tried entreaties, they tried threats.

Dr. Forbes had only one answer—the stores are for the hungry civil population. We did not feel it right to sell or give to a hostile government to be used for military advantage, what the Serbs, though they had plenty of time to either transport or destroy, had at our earnest entreaties left for another purpose.

Dr. Forbes finally wrote to the general that out of courtesy he had delayed the distribution several days, but as the people were literally starving, he could do so no longer. The answer to this was that the general's representative would take the stores next day. In the morning the usual miserable creatures were hanging around the gates.

We went outside and in fear and trembling began to distribute hard-tack with one eye fixed on our guard, a small Bulgarian soldier in an overcoat much too long and too large. He made a motion with his bayonet, surprisingly not at us but at the crowd. With the greatest importance he hustled and poked them into line, then turned to us for approval.

O, delightful Balkans, our jailer was helping us. He kept the people back while we gave out the hard-tack, and until another soldier sauntered reluctantly through the crowd. He was trying to look fierce, as he came over to Dr. Forbes and laid one hand feebly on his shoulder. The doctor gave away another piece of hard-tack, just to see if he meant it or not, and the soldier, obviously frightened but obeying orders, took hold of his shoulder again.

Officially we were stopped. We took our bag of hard-tack and retired inside the fortress, locking the gate again.

WEEKLY REVIEW of the WAR
by Capt. Henry J. Reilly

GENERAL.

The general compulsion bill has passed the second reading in the British house of commons. It extends compulsory service to married men and includes all males from 18 to 41 inclusive. On reaching his eighteenth birthday each boy is to be given one month's grace in which to volunteer. If he does not do so in that month he will be taken anyhow.

The revolt in Ireland has been suppressed and eight of the leaders executed. As soon as the British brought field artillery and the guns of small cruisers to bear on the rebel positions their case was hopeless, as they had no guns with which to reply.

FRENCH FRONT.

During the greater part of the week small local attacks were made by both the Germans and the French on both sides of the Meuse in the Verdun region. In these the French had the advantage. The last of the week the Germans, by means of a heavy attack, succeeded in driving the French from some of their trenches on the north slope of hill 304. There has been no action of importance along any other portion of the western front.

RUSSIAN FRONT.

There have been small local German attacks in several regions, but nothing of importance.

ITALIAN FRONT.

There have been small local Austro-Hungarian attacks) but nothing of importance.

BALKANS.

The situation remains the same as it has been for a number of weeks, the Italians in possession of Avlona on the Adriatic and the British and French in possession of the Saloniki district of Greece, to which they have transported the remnants of the Serbian army.

ARMENIAN FRONT.

The Russians have made a number of local attacks which have proved successful. There has been no general engagement. The indications are that the Russians are preparing to renew their advance.

MESOPOTAMIA.

There has been no news to indicate whether or not the relief expedition is holding its position or has retreated, now that the British force at Kut-El-Amara has surrendered.

EGYPT.

It was reported from German sources that the Sudan tribesmen had revolted against the British.

SUMMARY.

The action in the Verdun region remains the event of chief importance, as it is still the point at which the Germans are on the offensive and the entente allies are unable to take the offensive elsewhere. The indications are that the allied general offensive predicted for this spring will not take place, as the allies could have no better opportunity than they have had since the beginning of the German attack on Verdun.

BOY HELD FOR SHOOTING

A coroner's jury yesterday recommended George Bent, 10 years old, 10820 Avenue G, South Chicago, be held to the Juvenile court in connection with the shooting of James Sutton, 11 years old, 10810 Avenue G. Bent shot Sutton in the head with a rifle. The Bent boy insisted the shooting was accidental.

OPEN HOSPITAL FOR STAGE FOLK AFTER 5 YEARS

Benefit to Be Given Next Week by Theatrical Association.

About five years ago an old man who had in his young and palmy days been a big theatrical favorite was taken seriously ill in Chicago. From being a headliner he had come down the ladder until he was glad to get even the smallest parts.

Medical attention at a small hotel failed to bring any improvement and the attending physician recommended that he be taken to a hospital. But the old man had no money.

For Residents Only.

Some one suggested the county hospital, and when admittance was sought for the old man his friends went up against a stone wall. They were asked:

"Has he been a resident of Chicago, or of Cook county, for one year?"

"No," they replied.

"Then he cannot come here," was the positive reply. "That is an unbreakable rule. This hospital is only for residents of Cook county."

Theatrical friends took up a collection and managed by hook or crook to make easier the old man's last days, for he died at another hospital.

Out of that incident sprang the American Theatrical Hospital association, the first of its kind in the United States, composed at the start almost entirely of theater "fans."

Opens in October.

Next October, after five years of hard work, a new hospital for the especial benefit of sick and injured theatrical folk, will open its doors on Irving Park boulevard, between Sheridan road and Broadway. Virtually the whole fourth floor will be reserved for their exclusive use free of charge.

Next Sunday, May 14, there will be a program of twenty numbers given for the benefit of the association at the Auditorium theater.

SOCIETY MOVIE THRILLERS MUST BE ACTED SECRETLY.

The High Bridge Scene in Lincoln Park Wasn't Taken Yesterday Because Reporters Were There.

A half dozen "connect up scenes" for the Casino civ\'s all-society photoplay were filmed yesterday in and about the Spaulding residence before J. Allen Haines, the super-director, took alarm at the appearance of newspaper men and began a wild auto race to get rid of them.

The unwanted scriveners and photogs stuck along, however, as cheerfully as if they had the R. S. V. P. and other credentials right in their pockets.

"Really, you know, I am not at all glad to see you," inflected Mr. Haines in something of a pet. "Indeed, I can't say that I am."

However, the reporters chugged up to the suicide bridge in Lincoln park just as the company was about to put on the death struggle for the cinema. J. Allen Haines seemed even more hurt than ever to observe the literary bounders, and, placing his company back in the cabs, took them off to the Casino club, where inside work occupied the rest of the afternoon.

RING PHONY; $25 AND COSTS

Man of 62, Who Said He Had to Make a "Living Some Way," Draws Fine.

Thomas J. Delaney, 62 years old, who says he is a telegraph operator, without a home, was fined $25 and costs by Judge Dolan yesterday. Peter Vassilos, owner of an ice cream parlor, caused Delaney's arrest when the latter tried to sell him a "gold" ring for $5 that, he said, was worth $15. A jeweler said there was no gold in it. Delaney testified he was out of work and had to "make a living some way."

(Reprinted from Goodrich BALANCED TIRE Campaign of July and Aug., 1915)

Built like—
—"The Deacon's One-Hoss Shay"

"THE best Pneumatic Tire is only as strong as its weakest part.

Strengthening its strongest parts is as useless as putting a fifth Wheel on a Wagon.

Yet this is often done to provide "Selling-feature" and "Talking Point."

The weakest part of every Pneumatic Tire is its Walls or Sides, not its Tread,—its Cotton Fabric or "Stocking," not its Rubber "Sole."

No price would be too high to pay for a material that, replacing Cotton in the Walls of Pneumatic Tires, would last as long as the Goodrich Rubber Tread could be made to wear.

Neither Silk, nor Linen, nor any other known Fabric, yet discovered is so good, for this purpose, as Cotton,—and choice long-fibred Cotton is the best material that money can buy for Tire Fabric.

"WE use nothing less in Goodrich Tires, and test every foot of it up to 200 lbs. to the Square Inch, before we percolate it with the most adhesive Rubber Compound ever made for this purpose.

We then shape this rubberized Long-Fibred Fabric into Tires, with scrupulous care to have the tension on each square inch of fabric precisely the same.

That tension is controlled by a machine as sensitive as the eye, and infinitely more precise than the handwork of the most skilled Operative could make it.

To do this work we have the most highly-trained men in the Rubber Industry,—trained in the Precision that practice and our 45-year EXPERIENCE make perfect.

"NO Tire Manufacturer, if he received a price of $200 per Tire, could put better Fabric into the Walls of his Tires, use greater care, more sensitively adjusted Tension devices, or more adhesive Rubber between each layer of fabric.

Because, we know the vital importance of THE BEST in this part of the Tire, and use it there unsparingly.

But,—notwithstanding all this,—the FABRIC is the part of the Tire which goes first.

Because the sides of the Tire do most of the work in running,—bending and stretching a million times an hour, in scores of different directions.

This bending of the sides causes Friction between the layers of Canvas working against each other,—Friction causes Heat—the Heat over-cures and dries out the Rubber Adhesive between layers, which then separate from each other, in spots, the threads weakening or wearing out chafing against each other.

Then you have, in due time, the incipient blow-out, or other form of Tire-Death.

"PUT more layers of Fabric than we do in the walls, to strengthen them, and the friction increases, with faster deterioration of the Rubber through the greater heat engendered.

Put fewer layers, and the walls would not be strong enough to carry the load of the Car.

So there you are—Mr. Tire User!

Why put MORE layers of Fabric in the Walls of the Tire than will properly carry the load, when each additional layer is an additional developer of that FRICTION-HEAT which is to Tires what Old Age is to Man?

"THAT is the reason we build (and have built for more than a year), in the Goodrich Tire, a carefully BALANCED Tire, emulating the famous example of "The Deacon's One-Hoss Shay" in which "the Sills were just as strong as the Thills and the Thills as strong as the floor."

The Maximum Fabric efficiency and THEN,—the rest of the Tire built up to that.

Result,—

—The most RESILIENT Tire that can be made with Fabric Walls,—at the fairest price per Mile of performance.

Why pay more for any Tire?

INTERIOR TOWNS OF GERMANY ARE QUIET, PEACEFUL

Prisoners and Captors Are on Friendly Terms—War Becomes Routine.

BY JAMES O'DONNELL BENNETT.
[War Correspondent of The Tribune.]

WITTENBERG, Germany, April 7.—A garrison is quartered in Wittenberg and 16,000 prisoners of war are also sojourning there. Whenever I woke up last night I could hear the tramp and clink of armed men on the sidewalk under my window.

In the daytime the soldiers are principally engaged in cleaning high boots and whistling, though there are intervals when there is a feverish carrying of pails of hot soup and stew from the kitchens at one end of the castle barracks to living quarters at the other end. Nowhere can I discover any sign of the real rigors of war, though there are plenty of signs of its existence.

In all these thriving German provincial towns the war has become a matter of routine and that, perhaps, makes it more desolating to the spirit than if it still were in the exciting stage. The people say there is plenty to eat and every time I go into a restaurant I have proof of that, as well as of the fact that prices remain moderate—much lower, indeed, than in Berlin.

Russians Prisoners Cheerful.

Not the least cheerful faces we see are those of the Russian prisoners. Hundreds of them are working on new railway embankments and sidings. They are stocky, broad faced men, without the grace and stateliness of bearing of their officers, and they look up with cheerful grins whenever a passenger train rumbles by them.

There is no evidence of rancor between the prisoners and their captors. More and more I am convinced that all that kind of thing is left to civilians.

Those among the townspeople whom the war has hit hardest in a financial way are the proprietors of little shops where the thousands of pilgrims who used to come to Wittenberg bought souvenirs of their visits.

Soldiers sent to the town for garrison duty and for the training which goes with it eagerly make the rounds of the Wittenberg shrine places and display an intelligent interest in the memorials which many of the places house, especially in the rich collection of autograph letters of European sovereigns in the Luther house.

They do not buy souvenirs these times, or if they do the souvenir takes the form of a postal note for 10 marks, which is sent home to the family. The soldiers are uniformly cheerful.

Travelers Closely Watched.

A journey to any German town, especially if it is a garrison town, involves the observance of strict formalities these days. Twenty-four hours before we left Berlin for Wittenberg we had to "abmelden" (report out) ourselves at the police station of the district in which we live.

There our passports were examined, and a police officer wrote on the back of each document the date of our appearance before him and the destination of our journey. These indorsements he stamped with the municipal seal. Arrived at Wittenberg, the same formality was repeated, but it was much more elaborate. Birthplace, date of birth, citizenship, occupation, present residence, reasons for traveling, probable length of visit, and name of hotel at which we purposed stopping were all entered in a big book.

Passports Closely Scrutinized.

On the back of the passports the date and hour of our arrival were written and those statements were made valid by the thump of a purple seal engraved with the arms of the city. The officer was polite and patient and overlooked no details.

How difficult it must be for suspected persons to travel in Germany was indicated by a remark the castellan at the Schloss-Kirche made the next day.

"You are the Americans?" he said.

"Yes," I answered, "Americans from Chicago."

"Yes, I know," he said, "I heard about you yesterday."

After the half hour session with the police officer I asked him whether he would give me a permit to use a camera in Wittenberg.

"In war time that is a matter for the military commander of the town," he replied. "I am sorry, but we cannot help you, and I doubt whether the commander would. You know we are a garrison town."

More Stamps on Passports.

Having had some experience of the attitude of soldiers toward photography, I did not think it worth while to take my request to the commander. In connection with reporting ourselves in and out of German cities I may add that within twenty-four hours after my return to Berlin I shall have to report myself back to the officers of the police station in my district and they will write the fact of my return on the back of my American passport and stamp the document again.

Everywhere save in the actual war area, which is a small part of Europe, people are going placidly about their business. Thousands of villages don't have a war thrill a day until the afternoon papers reach them in the evening with the fifty word bulletin from the supreme army command, and even then that thrill is more often than not a mild one.

The war has become routine. The soldiers not on the front go to church and go to the museums.

CONVICT HURLS IRON CUSPIDOR AT JUDGE'S HEAD

McDonald Assists the Bailiffs in Quelling Prisoner Found Guilty Twice.

Judge Charles A. McDonald leaped from the rôle of jurist to that of bailiff yesterday and aided in subduing Daniel Riley, a convicted prisoner, after the latter had attempted to brain him with an iron cuspidor. The heavy receptacle missed the judge's head by inches and a large dent in the wall back of the bench bears evidence of the force with which the missile was hurled.

The courtroom, which is on the sixth floor of the Criminal court building, was crowded at the time of the attempted assault. Many of the spectators stood up on their seats and watched a lively battle of fisticuffs between Riley, the judge, and three bailiffs before the prisoners was dragged out, still kicking and clawing, into the corridor.

Guilty of Murder.

Riley, who is only 18 years old, was found guilty some time ago by a jury in Judge Thomson's court of the murder of John Mozier, who was shot by two holdup men in his saloon, at 4622 South Western avenue, on July 5. Judge Thomson at that time rebuked the jurors for their leniency and readily granted the motion of Riley's counsel for a new trial. Assistant State's Attorney James C. O'Brien, who had asked the death penalty, did not oppose the motion.

At the end of the second trial several weeks ago, before Judge McDonald, Riley was found guilty and his punishment was fixed by the jury at thirty-five years. A motion for a third trial was entered. It was following a hearing on this that the attempted attack on the court was made.

Who Wrote Letter?

In the morning's mail Mr. O'Brien had received an anonymous letter full of obscenity and threatening death to him, State's Attorney Hoyne, and the jurors in the case. It was also stated that the Criminal court building would be blown up unless Riley was acquitted. Mr. O'Brien declared he believed Riley had written it.

A few minutes after Riley had been brought into the courtroom Judge McDonald announced the motion for a new trial was denied.

"Have you anything to say as to why sentnce should not be imposed on you?" he asked, turning to the prisoner.

"Yes," replied Riley. "I'm not guilty—I want to tell you that. You listened to a lot of hearsay evidence."

Lucky to Escape Gallows.

"You are lucky you weren't sentenced to be hanged," returned the court.

Bailiff Nicholas Frank then started for the door with Riley, walking a few feet ahead of him, as is customary.

When about ten feet from the bench the boy stooped suddenly, picked up the cuspidor, and swung it at the judge's head. Judge McDonald, who had been watching the prisoner's exit, threw his head to one side as it shot over his shoulder, close to his ear, and banged against the wall.

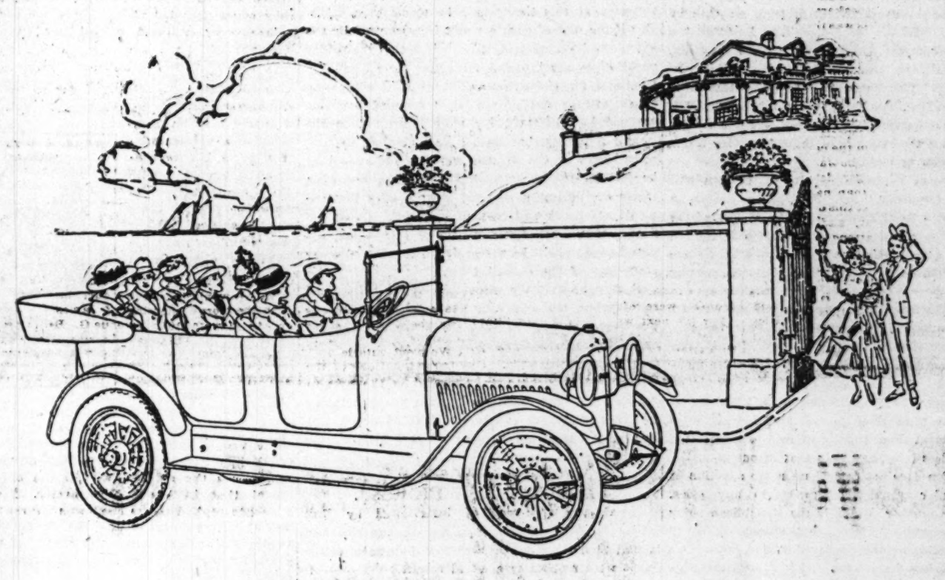
PAIGE

The Standard of Value and Quality



IN the earlier days of the automobile industry, wealth and social position traveled almost exclusively in the car which bore a foreign maker's name.

But times have changed — standards of value have changed—personal view points have changed.

People of wealth and social position still insist upon luxury and elegance in their motor cars. But, now, they also demand at least a fair return upon their motor car investment.

It is for this reason that the Paige, Fairfield "Six-46" has been so universally adopted by well-to-do people in all sections of the nation.

In beauty of line and design, this car rivals the most artistic productions of Europe. It is refreshingly distinctive, and embodies every convenience and luxury that a critical motorist could desire.

It is a big car, a powerful car, a comfortable car—and, withal, an economical car. It is literally and actually "the standard of Value and Quality."

The price—complete—is $1295.

The month of April was the most successful in our history as Paige distributors. And we desire to thank the people of Chicago for the confidence which they have displayed in ourselves and Paige cars.

We are prepared to make deliveries of the "Six-46" at a moment's notice. Remember, you can drive your car home the same day that you purchase it.

THE REPUBLICAN CONVENTION.

The meeting of the Republican national convention, which will be in session in Chicago a month from today, will be the most important meeting of Republican delegates since the party was founded.

The issues confronting the country today are fully as great as those which faced our forefathers in 1860, while the influence of the Republican delegates will be greater this year than it was at that time. In 1860 it was the division of their opponents which gave the control of the nation to the Republicans. This year it will be only a division of Republicans which will permit the government of the United States to remain in the hands of the Democrats.

Mr. Wilson is a minority president. He received a trifle under 6,300,000 votes, as compared to 7,600,000 and more cast for Roosevelt and Taft together. Thus the Progressive-Republican vote was more than 1,300,000 greater than the Democratic vote, while it is probable that in their factional bitterness both Republicans and Progressives voted for Wilson in order to assure the defeat of their pet aversion.

It therefore appears mathematically certain that if a candidate can be found who will please the voters who voted for Roosevelt and the voters who voted for Taft this person will be the next president of the United States.

If only one candidate is chosen to represent Progressives and Republicans, Wilson will need to hold his entire 1912 vote and approximately 700,000 votes from his opponents.

This THE TRIBUNE thinks is impossible if the Republican nominee be a man who is recognized as being fairly qualified for the office of president.

In the opinion of THE TRIBUNE Mr. Wilson is less strong before the country, and properly so, than he was in 1912. In the opinion of THE TRIBUNE the Democratic control of congress has been grasping, selfish, unpatriotic, unwise, and undisciplined. In the opinion of THE TRIBUNE the administration of President Wilson has been weak, vacillating, self-seeking to the extent of placing his ambition for re-election above the interests of the nation over which he was chosen to preside.

The desire of the vast majority of the men who voted the Republican and Progressive tickets in 1912, and of a great number of those who voted the Democratic ticket in the same year, is to be allowed to vote for a man who in his career and utterances has shown himself to be a sterling American, putting the nation above section and faction, who believes in the republican form of government and the conduct of the machinery of government so that the majority may be enabled to rule.

This nation does not contemplate an elective monarchy for the administration of either domestic or foreign affairs. It is established upon a conviction that there is strength in council and that the composite judgment of a number of men is more often sound and less interested than that of one man.

This nation does not depend upon the selection of any particular transcendent genius to any office. There are a number of men in the Republican party quite competent to perform the functions allotted to the president under the constitution, and there is no need—much less desire—for a chief magistrate who, like President Wilson, will vary between a dictatorship over the entire management of government and utter indifference to the conduct of important branches of the administration.

Upon a proper theory of republican government it is not strange but natural that no one man should stand forth as the inevitable choice of the Republican convention. When a president is finishing his first term, as was the case of McKinley in 1900, Roosevelt in 1904, and Taft in 1912, it is natural that each should be the prima facie candidate, and it is only where the president's record has become as unpopular with a majority of his party as was that of Mr. Taft in 1912 that he is opposed for renomination. Those who opposed Mr. Taft in 1912 had to unite upon some one character big enough to offset the prestige and political power of a president in office, and therefore rallied to the support of the most prominent Republican alive—ex-President Roosevelt.

At the present date we have no such situation. There is no Republican president as candidate for re-election. There are alive two Republican ex-presidents. One of them, Mr. Taft, is not mentioned for the nomination. The other, Mr. Roosevelt, was once triumphantly reelected, and in the opinion of all is entirely competent to fill the position he occupied for seven years.

Against his selection is the tradition against three terms in the White House, which influences many voters, and the animosities stirred up, rightfully or wrongfully, by his campaigns in 1912 and 1914.

There are a dozen other avowed candidates, and perhaps twice as many more quiet aspirants.

After a lapse of many years Illinois comes forward seriously with a candidate of its own in the person of Senator Sherman. Iowa, immediately on the west, and Indiana, immediately on the east, present favorite sons, as do other states.

While yielding nothing in their loyalty to their chosen candidate, delegates from the several states must remember that their chief loyalty is to the nation for which their party is called upon to choose a president. The qualifications and political strength of the different candidates should be considered upon their merits and decided in a spirit of patriotism and mutual forbearance. If this is done it matters little from what section of the country the candidate may come.

If an attempt should be made to substitute fraud and machine organization for the patriotic deliberation demanded of a national convention, again it matters little who the candidate may be or from what state he hails. The American voters are likely to decide that an inefficient government and an evil foreign policy are preferable to domestic slavery meted out by designing and unscrupulous politicians.

There is, naturally, considerable suspicion as to the conduct of many of the men who will sit in the coming national convention because of their conduct four years ago. There is also much hope from such convention leaders as Missouri, Illinois, and Massachusetts have chosen.

It is certain that, whatever the facts may be, the supporters of the Republican nominee will declare the convention fair; the supporters of Mr. Wilson will declare it tainted. It is, therefore, highly desirable that the leaders of the different delegations make plain to the people their intention to act honorably and openly, so that the voters may have confidence in the nominee of the convention, for the convention which meets here in June will decide not only who shall be the Republican candidate, but by its judgment, and even more by the method of its choice, it will decide whether its candidate shall be elected or whether the nation will have four years more of Mr. Wilson's personal rule.

MEDIATION AND PEACE.

Perhaps the most significant passage of the German note is the following:

"The German government, conscious of Germany's strength, twice within the last few months announced before the world its readiness to make peace on a basis safeguarding Germany's vital interests, thus indicating that it is not Germany's fault if peace is still withheld from the nations of Europe."

This would seem to be a direct intimation to the president that the German government would welcome from him a suggestion of mediation looking to peace. There is no doubt that Germany is anxious to end the war and the entente allies can hardly be less so provided the terms are acceptable. The pronouncements of the German chancellor recalled in the paragraph here cited of course did not name acceptable terms. They were not expected to do more than to elicit discussion and test the temper of opponents. It is to be expected that more favorable terms could be obtained and Mr. Wilson might find the moment favorable, now that a direct intimation has been made to him, to bring the hostile governments together earlier than could otherwise be hoped. If he were to accomplish this he would save many more thousands of lives than could be lost or saved in the whole course of the maritime operations, and we cannot conceive that any one would not welcome peace through equitable compromise, not even the class which is getting enormously rich by the trade in war supplies.

The terms suggested by the German chancellor were at least suggestive in this respect that they indicated the possibility of an arrangement of peace terms on the basis of colonial readjustments and exchanges. If the entente allies are bent upon the annihilation of Germany as a first rank power, her partition, the removal of the dynasty of Hohenzollern, the enforced reduction of the naval and military power of Germany, of course there cannot be peace until the German arms have been beaten down and that, it seems, would mean a long continuance of the war. In such case attempts at negotiation at this time would be worse than futile. But if the cost of such a result is recognized by the entente to be exorbitant, it is obvious that the sooner negotiations are initiated the better for all belligerents and for civilization. The task of composing peace will be one of the most complex ever attempted by statecraft, far more difficult than the treaty of Vienna, but we believe that after the terrible lesson of the present war the emphasis may be laid so decisively upon the working out of a stable equilibrium among the great powers that imperial ambitions will be held in check. Peace, enduring peace, not world empire or self-seeking aggrandizement, will be the profound longing of every statesman of the council table.

It may be that the entente allies are determined to carry on the war until the central powers are prostrate. It may be that the latter are not yet ready to concede terms which would tempt their foes to lay down arms. But the intimations of the German government, now reiterated in the note to us, may very well offer Mr. Wilson an opportunity no other statesman in the world could make such beneficent and decisive use of as the head of the greatest neutral power.

SOLD OUT BY CONGRESS.

Nearly all the senators interviewed by THE TRIBUNE correspondent upon the German situation stated their opinion that unless a diplomatic settlement were reached war would result.

This opinion is also the one expressed in the German note: "If the submarine question under discussion between the German government and the government of the United States were to take a turn seriously threatening the maintenance of peace between the two nations."

The senate committee on immigration has further recognized the danger of war by accepting the dictation of the Japanese ambassador upon the phraseology of the immigration bill, a bill of purely internal application. In other words, the senate committee on immigration has felt it necessary to yield the American right of sovereignty within our own borders to the Japanese empire.

In the face of immediate war with Germany and at the moment of national humiliation before Japan, congress still stubbornly refuses to enact legislation to protect us from invasion and to permit us again to act as a free and independent nation.

The reason for this neglect is not from any Quaker or other pacifist belief in nonresistance. It is that adequate national defense will cost money, and if sufficient money is appropriated for adequate national defense it will render improbable or impossible the raiding of the public treasury, which seems to be the main purpose of the controlling element of the Democratic party in congress.

Editorial of the Day.

FOR THE REVIVAL OF EASTERN AGRICULTURE.

[From the Breeder's Gazette.]

The Eastern States Agricultural and Industrial Exposition association is a rather long name, but its purpose is big and broad. This is the revival of New England agriculture. Business men are back of it, seeking to hold up the hands of educators in all farm fields and to provide opportunity for the telling exhibition of the products of farm toil and skill. All this work will proceed in the recognition of the fact that a lot of land in New England cannot be profitably tilled. The unsuccessful attempts to cultivate it are largely responsible for that decline in agricultural production which the present movement is designed to check. All agencies are bent toward the intelligent encouragement of renewed interest in farming and stock raising, based on known natural facilities and modern economical methods. The vast growth of urban population affords a greatly expanded market for farm specialties. This intensive agriculture will find ample land adapted to it, while abundant acres yet remain for general farming which will produce crops that may profitably be rendered into milk, beef, mutton, and pork. In brief, the aim is to enable the eastern farmer to feed the eastern population. He can go a long way toward it.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1916: By the Brentwood Company.]

QUEEN WILHELMINA and her government have recently been apprised of an alleged plot, organized at Berlin, designed to embroil Holland in the present war, on the side of Germany, against the powers of the entente.

The recent scare in the Netherlands, which created a sensation on this side of the Atlantic, and which pointed to an immediate entry of the Dutch in the international conflagration, is said to have been brought about by the Wolff news agency, a Berlin concern controlled and subsidized by the German government, and which, it is alleged, flooded the Netherlands with stories to the effect that the entente was dtermind to force the Dutch into the war, either by means of an ultimatum demanding the immediate stoppage of all exports into Germany or by a sudden armed descent on the Dutch coast.

This alleged propaganda was designed to stir up popular feeling against the allies, until a point was reached when Germany, without fear of courting a declaration of war from the Hague government, could seize the Frisian islands and the Helder, as a precautionary measure against the "sinister plans" of Great Britain and France, while promising Holland an indemnity for their provisional occupation.

An important feature of the alleged conspiracy was to have consisted in a squadron of German warships penetrating the Texel Gat, under the pretext that they were being pursued by a superior British naval force, and once through the narrow channel, refusing to disarm, thus still further increasing international complications.

Fortunately for the Netherlands, this alleged scheme miscarried, thanks to the English and French secret service obtaining an inkling thereof, and warning the Hague government. The Texel Gat and all the other points along the coast of the Netherlands where German warships might hope to penetrate into Dutch inland waters have been heavily mined.

The Dutch have had it made quite clear to them, by their own government, and by Great Britain and France, that none of the powers of the entente entertain the slightest design against Holland, and that they contemplate no armed descent upon the Dutch coast, and that they never dreamed of making a demand for the stoppage by Holland of all her exports into Germany.

Baron Mayor des Planches, for so many years ambassador of Italy at Washington, and who has recently been in England on a special mission from his government in connection with the organization of financial credits there and the purchase of war supplies, relates a curious conversation which he had at Friedrichsruhe with Prince Bismarck in 1887. As the principal secretary of the Italian premier Crispi, the baron was a frequent and welcome guest at Friedrichsruhe.

One evening after dinner he managed to turn the conversation on the right of a diplomat to make use of lying in order to attain his end. Old Prince Bismarck at first declined to commit himself on the subject, asking the baron what Crispi thought about the matter. Mayor des Planches replied that Crispi was averse to diplomatic lies, whereupon the old chancellor's son, Prince Herbert Bismarck, insisted that lies were perfectly legitimate weapons of offense and defense in diplomacy.

Finally the baron recalled to the chancellor that once, referring to a certain convention which he was alleged to have signed at Gastein, he had remarked: "'Even if I had signed that convention, which I have not, I should be forced to deny that I had done so."

"That is true," the old chancellor exclaimed, apparently annoyed by the reminiscence, "I have been obliged to lie sometimes. But it has been seldom, and I have always entertained a deep grudge against those who had, so to speak, forced me into telling a lie."

According to trustworthy accounts from Sofia, it is Count Adam Tarnowski, the Austro-Hungarian envoy there, who is at the present moment the virtual ruler of Bulgaria and acting as dictator.

Count Adam Tarnowski is an Austrian Pole who was at one time attached to the Austrian embassy at Washington, having many friends there and in New York, and who was afterwards a member of Emperor Francis Joseph's embassy in London. There, both the count and his wife, who was a Princess Marie Czetwertynska of Russian Poland, became particular friends of Edward VII. The count was his favorite partner at bridge, while the countess, a handsome and clever woman, furnished much entertainment to the king by her witty remarks and amusing conversation.

During the last two stays of King Edward at Biarritz the Tarnowskis, at his request, took up their residence there throughout his sojourn, renting the lovely Villa Lointaine for the purpose, and not a single day was permitted to pass without their dining and lunching with him at their villa or at his house, or at the repasts given elsewhere in his honor.

Adam Tarnowski is the grand seigneur to the finger tips, and as the Bulgarian people are almost entirely of the agrarian, or rather I should say of the peasant, class, he treats them all, no matter whether statesmen, official dignitaries, or workingmen, much in the same way that a great Polish-Austrian territorial noble treats the peasantry on his estates—that is to say, with kindness, with geniality, and yet with a certain degree of aloofness. Accessible as he appears on the surface to the democratic atmosphere of Bulgarian society, he is not really approachable, and while the Bulgarians respect him, they all fear him.

King Ferdinand, clever and cunning as he is reputed to be, is completely under his influence, and has the utmost confidence in him. The count also dominates the Bulgarian premier, Radoslavoff, a man of the humblest origin, and no decision of the Bulgarian cabinet is taken without a previous understanding with the Austro-Hungarian envoy and his full approval.

CONSUMPTION.

THAT consumption is a curable disease is generally accepted. Some believe it because they have been told so. Some believe it because they know consumptives who have been cured. The statement is true, but not in the sense that many people mean it.

There is an old German saying which, translated into English thought, means that every man is tuberculous at some time during his life. Careful post-mortem examinations indicate that practically every person has some tuberculous lesions in his body. As tuberculosis kills only one-eleventh of the people, it follows that ten-elevenths of the people get well of the disease. This means that the chance a man will get well is ten to one. Some of those who say consumption is a curable disease have the above facts in mind.

The variety of disease which the great majority of the people have is known as latent tuberculosis. In this disease the bacilli get into the body, produce a very small area of disease and are then walled off. The persons affected probably have no suspicion that anything is wrong. They are without the usual symptoms of tuberculosis. The disease is active for but a short time.

Those in whom consumption develops to the point where it can be diagnosed are in a more serious condition. For some of these consumption is a curable disease. For many it is not. Just how large a proportion is in each group depends on when the patient got suspicious and went to see the physician and on the ability of the physician to diagnose consumption.

If the diagnosis is made early and the patient does what he is told to do his disease is curable. At least two-thirds of such cases are. Practically speaking, about a third of such cases are incurable, some because they cannot afford the rest of body and mind, open air, and good food required; some because they have not, and cannot acquire, the resistance to the disease.

If the diagnosis is made late more than two-thirds of the cases are incurable. It does not help a man with consumption to know that consumption is a curable disease unless he can know that he is curable.

Summarizing: As a rule men keep themselves in such good condition that the tubercle bacilli which get into the body are walled off. They unconsciously cure their consumption by right living. At a certain stage in consumption it is possible by right living for men to cure themselves on an average two out of three times. At a later stage in the disease the average chance of cure is one out of three.

Everybody would like to be in the first class. Those who cannot get into the first class would like to get into the second. Is there any way to escape the third class?

Edwards tells us that tuberculosis usually proceeds for six to eighteen months before any symptoms appear. Even after symptoms appear there is a period of about a year in which those affected are in the second group.

What is there that should make a man suspect that he has consumption and seek to know the truth, and, following that, how shall he know the truth? Where one has been in constant contact with a case of consumption it is good judgment to have an examination, even though there is no symptom of the disease present.

The health department of Detroit was the first to insist that whenever there had been a fatal case of consumption in a household the entire family should be examined. This method was to send a nurse to the home from which a death from consumption had been reported. The nurse did what she could to get the remaining members of the family to go to the family physician or to some hospital or dispensary for examination.

If a man has worked by the side of a consumptive for several months he should have an examination of himself. Close association with a consumptive for a considerable time is, then, one reason for suspecting that one has tuberculosis. If a man is run down and feels slightly feverish in the afternoon he should take his temperature four times a day, at 6, 10, 2, and 6, for three days. If he finds that at 2 or 6 in the afternoon he has a rise of temperature to 99 he should consider himself under suspicion. If a man has a slight cough which hangs on, and particularly if in addition he has a slight afternoon rise of fever, this condition should call for investigation.

A rise in the pulse rate of more than five beats at the time of the afternoon rise of fever is another sign. If in ordinary colds and coughs which hang on the tendency is to catch a new cold before the old one has left, this is another sign.

No one of these symptoms necessarily means consumption, nor do all of them combined. They are merely the symptoms which should cause further investigation. They may mean consumption. On the other hand, they may not indicate anything of importance. But they do very definitely indicate the need of a careful examination. In my opinion the examination should include a tuberculin test.

The best method of giving the test to a grown person is by the injection under the skin of five milligrams of old tuberculin. If tuberculosis is present eight hours after the injection there will be a rise of fever. The fever and aches can be subdued by the usual remedies.

Prior to the injection of tuberculin a record of the temperature and pulse at six hour intervals should be made. Beginning eight hours after the injection a record of the temperature and pulse at four hour intervals for two days should be made. A temperature of more than 100 accompanied by a rise in pulse rate of more than ten beats means there is tuberculosis somewhere in the body. It does not tell where it is or whether it is active and progressive or quiet and inactive.

As soon as the rise in temperature and pulse shows that tuberculosis is present the physician should carefully, thoroughly, and completely examine to determine three questions: Where is the tuberculosis located? How extensive is it? How active is it?

There are other methods of using test doses of tuberculin, but they are subject to limitations. Vaccination with tuberculin after the Von Pirquet method and known as the Von Pirquet test is reliable enough for children under school age, but it is not to be depended on in adults. The eye tuberculin test is not often used now. The Morro test is another skin test. The injection of tuberculin into, not under, the skin is being tried.

First we gave certain symptoms and certain points in one's life history which should cause one to suspect that he has tuberculosis, and, suspecting it, have an examination. Next we gave a certain test by which a person might know that he was infected, but which would not indicate the location of his disease, its extent, or its probable cause.

Those points can only be determined by physical examination. Such an examination is a matter for the physician and therefore nothing is gained by saying much about them here, but there are certain facts which the patient should know. He should know that no examination is dependable unless it covers the following points:

Is the family subject to consumption, and, if so, in detail what relation did the consumptive bear to this patient?

The personal history. Has the patient ever lived in the house with consumptives? If so, when and under what circumstances? Has he ever worked with consumptives? Has he worked at a dusty trade? Has he ever eaten milk from tubercular cows? Has he ever had enlarged glands? Has he been running down in flesh or strength lately? Has he felt feverish in the afternoon? Have his colds hung on? Is he pale? Has he had a cough or pain in his chest recently?

A careful examination of the bare chest. An examination made through the clothing is worthless. The stethoscope, the fingers, and perhaps the ear must be applied to the skin of the chest and of all portions of the chest at that.

A microscopic examination of the sputum.

A record of the pulse and temperature.

The subject of examination of the sputum should be given additional consideration. In every case of suspected tuberculosis the sputum should be examined several times. If tubercle bacilli are found the diagnosis is absolutely established. The limitation of the sputum test for tuberculosis is that it is a late sign. In early tuberculosis bacilli cannot be found in the sputum. At least one physician of large experience holds that whenever tubercle bacilli can be found in the sputum the disease has reached the incurable stage. That opinion, however, is not the general opinion of men experienced in consumption. Many cases of consumption are first diagnosed through the finding of bacilli in the sputum. Perhaps when the people know better the early signs and the physicians grow more skillful the above statement may not hold true. Practically all boards of health examine sputum free.

What are the methods of cure of tuberculosis? If ten-elevenths of the people who are infected by tubercle bacilli cure themselves without conscious effort on their parts they must do so by reason of their vital resistance. They may not be living absolutely rightly, but they approximate it. They are at least near enough to it to conquer this infection. It follows that one way for those not quite able to master this infection to acquire the mastery of it is to live a little nearer right than they do. A little improvement in personal hygiene added to their natural resistance may suffice to give them mastery.

The particular points in personal hygiene which are of especial importance to those endangered from tuberculosis are these: Plenty of fresh air and particularly clean, dust free air. Plenty of sunlight. Avoidance of badly ventilated rooms of all kinds. Plenty of rest. Plenty of nutritious food. Exercise in proportion to the amount of food taken. Cold water baths or cold air baths.

A man of average intelligence can sufficiently modify his method of living to cure himself of very early stage consumption without the aid of sanitaria, nurses, or climate. If his disease is somewhat more advanced, advanced enough to give him a little cough and a little fever, and to cause a few signs in the lungs, change in personal habits will cure him, but he had better not trust himself to work out these changes by himself. He should go to a saritarium for from three to six months. If this is not feasible he should be told in detail just what to do and what not to do, and he should have an anti-tuberculosis nurse show him how and keep watch over him. If his disease is more advanced he must still depend on methods of right living for a cure and he is in still greater need of supervision. If he stays in his home, and most consumptives remain at home, he has no hope of cure unless he has good nursing. If he goes to a sanitarium he must expect to make a longer and in many cases a long stay. If he changes climate he must have money enough to keep him at rest in a sanitarium for months.

CONSTIPATED.

Mrs. F. M. V. E. writes: "My baby (a boy), 5 months old, is badly constipated. I feed him at one feeding 3½ ounces certified milk, 2 ounces barley water, 1 teaspoonful Dexter's malto. Could you tell me how I might regulate his feed so that he will not be so constipated, and if the formula I am feeding him is all right? Should he have some lime water, and how much?

"2. Our little girl (7 years) will not eat any vegetables or sour of any kind, seems to crave sweets, is growing tall and slender, and seems quite irritable; sleeps well at night. There is diabetes in my husband's family. Could you tell me what we should do in this case?"

REPLY.

1—Decrease the milk one-half ounce and increase the barley water one ounce. Give orange and prune juice. Never mind about lime water.

2—Insist upon her doing as she is told. Give her vegetables, fruit, bread, milk, and meat. Children can be, and should be, trained to obey in what they eat as in other matters.

INDIGESTION IN BABIES.

Mrs. H. E. writes: "I would like very much to have a little information concerning my boy. He is 8 weeks old and weighs thirteen pounds and weighed eight when he was born. We have always had trouble with his bowels being too loose. The doctor gave us some medicine and when we give it to him he gets constipated and castor oil won't help him, so we have to use an injection. Then his bowels move about every two hours until we give him some more medicine. He seems to be all right other ways and is real good. What do you think causes this and what shall we do for him? Is his weight all right?"

REPLY.

He is suffering from indigestion. Instead of giving him medicine, you should modify his food. His food probably is too rich. If he is at the breast, you should drink more water and eat less. The baby should have a little water before he nurses. In spite of his indigestion he is gaining too rapidly. This further indicates that he is overfed.

OWNER ALLOWS USE OF LOT.

Chicago, April 29.—[To the Friend of the People.]—In the vacant lot known as 4417-19 St. Lawrence avenue, in a strictly residence district, the owners and drivers of garbage, ice, milk, and other wagons for blocks around store them on this vacant lot, much to the annoyance of the nearby neighbors, who complain very bitterly, and I understand there is a city ordinance that if enforced would make the owners of these wagons keep them under cover. If there is any possible way that the nuisance could be abated I wish you would inform me.

J. W. FRANCIS.

There are no city wagons stored on the lot complained of. Richards Bros., 4538 Champlain avenue, owners of this vacant property, permit owners of wagons complained of to store them on their property. We know of no law that will compel their removal. They are unsightly but not insanitary.

ILLINOIS ANNULMENT WOULD BE EFFECTIVE.

Chicago, April 30.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—A woman residing in Illinois obtained a divorce in that state about a year ago on the ground of desertion. Within a week she married in the state of Colorado a man who was then and is still a resident there. A few months later she, in turn, deserted her new husband and went back to Chicago. Can the husband have the marriage annulled in Illinois, and if so will the annulment be effective in his own state?

S.A.

The Colorado marriage never was valid in Illinois because contracted within a year after divorce in Illinois. An Illinois annulment would be effective in Colorado.

LEGACY LAPSES.

Council Bluffs, Ia., May 1.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—What becomes of a legacy left by one brother to another, the latter being dead and without family at the time the will is probated?

LEWIS.

The legacy lapses. It goes by the residuary clause if there is one in the will. Otherwise it goes according to the statute of descent, as in case of intestacy.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

WOULD SHARE IN FATHER'S ESTATE.

Chicago, April 28.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—My father and mother were divorced about twenty years ago. He married again in the state of Pennsylvania. Would I and my sister be entitled to a share of property or money left by him at his death? Is there a stated sum that would legally accrue to his second wife, or would I and my sister share equally with the widow? B.S.

You and your sister would share in your father's estate. The amount of your shares and the amount that would go to the second wife would depend on the laws of the state in which he resided at his death.

OUR BUCKET AND OUR GOAT.

Chicago, May 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Two nations once went to war over an old bucket. It was not the value of the bucket, but the principle involved, in the wrongful and tyrannical taking and insolent refusal to return the same, that led to the war.

Hundreds of thousands of treasure was utterly destroyed and thousands of lives were lost in this war, all because of an old bucket!

We are a nation of 105,000,000 people. We have the right to go where we please, about our own business.

We have got the absolute right to ride on an armed steamer for passengers or for freight.

Not one in a million of our people have any use for the right or care two cents about it, but we've got the right.

Germany, a nation of 40,000,000 people, through her submarines, has interfered with this right. In short, she has taken our bucket. Not one person in a million of Germans has any ill will at Americans. Americans have always been friendly and still are friendly to Germans.

Will these two great nations engage in a great war, destroying millions of human lives, and utterly destroying billions of property, over this technical right that is not worth two cents to the average individual—in short, not worth one-tenth as much as was the bucket?

JOHN M. HESS.

PRUDENTIAL THEORY OF LIFE.

Burlington, Ia., May 3.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—I want to express my appreciation of your editorial of today, "Fear of Death." The samurai have long since ceased to exist, but their ideals are nowhere so much cherished as in their original home. What is the result? Japan is a nation in which patriotism is a religion with her people; a patriotism so intense and lasting that it is inconceivable that her people could be subjugated except by overwhelming odds.

I wonder to what extent the "prudential theory of life" has taken hold of our people. Developments during the last few days would seem to indicate that this theory is held by far too many for the good of the nation. I want to thank you for making us stop and think of the future.

GEORGE B. CHOW.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR WAR.

Springfield, Ill., May 3.—[Editor of the Tribune.]—Your clear, forceful editorials for the most part leave nothing to be desired. You are doing a great work for our nation. We, the common people, are with you. We even believe in your and Decatur's motto, and when the war with Germany is on will turn in and fight for these rabid Anglo-maniacs who have forced it upon us, against the Germans.

But we beg of you not to desert us in the hour of sorest need. Don't be sentimental over your motto. It will be time enough to sustain the president when the war has begun. Why not sustain to the utmost limit the handful of patriotic congressmen who are striving to keep us out of war? Perhaps congress will have an opportunity to exercise the discretion imposed in it by the constitution, even after diplomatic relations are broken off with Germany.

It may become the duty of congress to assume the responsibility placed upon it and decide not to go to war. If you are going to deny congress the right to vote the president in this, wherein will the making of war by our republic differ from the initiation of a war by an autocracy? Don't desert us until the die irretrievably cast.

ROBERT PERRY.

WE CERTAINLY ARE.

Chicago, May 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Menaced by the possibility of war with Germany, disgraced in Mexico, threatened by our honorable friend Japan, and with an army not big enough for one day's killing in Europe, Uncle Sam's situation reminds me of the old farmer's wife who attempted to haul a barrel of sorghum and a barrel of vinegar in a rickety old wagon over an old, rough corduroy road. Nightfall caught her a mile from home. The wagon dipped into a hole in the road and over went both barrels. Standing ankle deep in the mixture of sorghum and vinegar, the old lady exclaimed to a neighbor farmer who drove up: "Ain't I in a hell of a fix? And we knew all along just how rickety our wagon was and how rough the road and what a fix we'd be in if the barrels were to upset.

TOWN MEETING

By Edward Goldbeck

WHILE Mr. Wilson is as obscure in his prose as Browning in his poetry, Mr. Roosevelt makes his meaning as clear as a prize fighter. You never know where you stand with Mr. Wilson; he sometimes speaks as a party leader, sometimes as the president, and mostly as the exponent of "humanity." He is elusive, fleeting, vaporous. It is different with Mr. Roosevelt: every sentence of his is an uppercut. Vainly do his friends pretend that his character is irenic and that when he cudgels the Germans, it is not Teddy who cusses, but "the bad man from Egypt." But at least he is not equivocal.

The other day he said that "the affairs of a nation cannot be conducted by town meeting." In this case again he showed his innate gift for concise formulating of actual issues. If I am not very much mistaken, this problem is the most important one of all those the present war has raised.

There cannot be any doubt that the greatest Germanic statesman of the nineteenth century, Bismarck, held the same opinion, and that Disraeli, Cavour, and Thiers would likewise have supported the colonel. All the diplomats are bound to applaud, and even the heads of most big business enterprises will agree. Efficiency in the struggle with competition—and what else is international policy?—supposes centralization and a sort of dictatorship. Rapid action is always desirable, sometimes necessary, and the larger the board of directors the less initiative, the clumsier the apparatus the tardier the decision. Vacillation takes the place of energy, half hearted compromise wins over thorough going directness. All this is absolutely true.

ON the other hand there is Mr. Wilson's often quoted utterance: "Rulers, not public opinion, brought about the present war. I thank God there is no man in the United States who has the authority to bring on war without the consent of the nation." We shall waive the question if really public opinion is innocent of the European war (I think that a very strong case could be made out for the contrary), and if there really is no man in the United States who has the authority to bring on war without the consent of the nation. For our actual purpose it is sufficient that Mr. Wilson insists on the consent of the nation, which is something entirely different from the consent of parliament. As Mr. Wilson does not want to put the decision into the hands of one man, and as he objected most emphatically to the interference of congress with his foreign policy, there is only the conclusion left that he recommends what Mr. Roosevelt scorns and that his advice would be to conduct the affairs of the nation by town meeting . . . on the largest scale. Which means that every citizen should have his say about the question of war or peace.

This opinion is popular everywhere and it ought to be especially so in democracies. It is nonsensical to have the citizens decide personally about the tiniest trifles and expect them to wait in dumb and awe stricken silence until they are called to lay down their lives for what they may consider mere foolishness. If a satisfying arrangement cannot be found democracy is doomed and will succumb in measurable time. And however one may think about its advantages and drawbacks, there cannot be any doubt that the world—Germany, Russia, and Japan not excepted—is democratizing rapidly. So one may say without gross exaggeration that the political system of the entire civilized world depends on this issue.

THE last "Kabinettskrieg" in Europe was the war of 1866. Bismarck had public opinion against him, not only the influential Prussian middle class but the royal family, the ministers, the parliament, and all the intellectuals. Men like Simson, Freytag, Sybel, Treitschke scourged him as frivolous and insane. Afterward, of course, the reaction was just as intense as the action had been; his most venomous detractors becoming his most intransigent worshipers. The country trusted Bismarck implicitly, and felt the more justified in this attitude, as everybody knew that after the war of 1870 his only aim was to insure the peace of Europe. He thought that Germany was "saturated" and that she would need half a century to solve the problems of inner policy which were bound to come up after the empire was founded. But in other countries, too, his immense successes popularized the idea that foreign policy was the domain of one single, as it were, providential man.

France believed in Delcassé, England in Edward VII, Germany in William II. All these nations gave their leaders much more latitude than they ever would have done if it had not been for Bismarck's personality and prestige. Were they wrong in doing so? The question can be answered only after the war. (Pacifists may not have to wait till then, but a pacifist is no judge of international questions. He is a mostly well intentioned, sometimes noble minded, but always dangerous maniac.) If the allies win they will perhaps stick to the old Bismarck system of autocratic efficiency; if they are beaten the idea of "democratic control," which is promulgated in England by J. Ramsay Macdonald, may gain more and more followers. The same avails for Germany.

The real difficulty lies in the fact that foreign policy is a subterraneous river. When it emerges it is mostly too late to prevent inundation. The parliament is fettered by all that has preceded. The "ruler" puts the international issue before it in his own way, he uses all his power to influence the parties, all his resources to "educate" public opinion, the deputies have only a few hours to get superficially acquainted with the facts, which seem to them as impenetrable as the thickets of a terra incognita; they fear to stiffen the neck of the "enemy," if they oppose the "ruler" with energy, and so in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred one may safely suppose that the parliament will do at last what "the honor of the country" demands. A single man may not have the "authority" to bring this country into war (no single man has this authority in Germany, as the scholar Wilson probably knows), but he certainly has power enough to do it, if he is bent on it.

THE question of trusting the ruler and sacrificing one's judgment is still more intricate in this country than elsewhere, as the president's tenure is only four years, and as there is no real diplomatic personnel. Men like William II. or Sir Edward Grey have at least a long experience in foreign policy; they know the important personalities in all the countries, the tendencies and the under currents, the political slogans and the economical interests, and at their side there are experts who have been in diplomacy and in the foreign office all their lives. These considerations make it easier for the nation to confide in them. Why should we suppose that Mr. Wilson knows more about foreign policy than the average man? The fact that he has written a rather unpalatable history of the United States is not conclusive.

The remedy would be an incessant control of the activities of the administration with regard to our international relations. To effectuate this seems next to impossible, but it ought to be tried even at the risk of temporarily impairing the efficiency of the foreign policy. Theoretically such a control exists already. In almost all countries there is a committee of foreign relations, but it very seldom learns more than accomplished facts. The diplomats are jealous of their power and their position, and nowhere is more secret mongering than in the international guild. The United States government has acted since the beginning of the war, as if there were a secret understanding with England. Some people speak about a secret "treaty," but that is out of the question, as the president can make treaties only with the "advice and consent" of the senate. A secret understanding would be possible, although it is highly improbable.

UP to now most international treaties have been kept secret. Just now a particularly interesting instance is the treaty which Prince Milan of Serbia made personally with Austria in 1881. In this treaty Serbia pledged herself "not to allow any political, religious, or other intrigue which would be directed against Austria-Hungary, including Bosnia, Herzegovina, and the Sandshak Novibazar." Serbia declared that she would not negotiate nor conclude any political conventions with other governments without previously consulting Austria. In exchange for these concessions Austria promised to acknowledge Milan as a king whenever he wanted to take his title, and to support Serbia with all her strength. This treaty was not renewed by Milan's successor, but it was in force for fifteen years.

The treaties between the German empire and Austria-Hungary (1879) and Italy (1883) were not published. For years one did not know if there were any treaties between Russia and France and what they stipulated. But public opinion knew in broad outlines what the situation was and that seems necessary, because in dangerous moments for which the treaties are intended you cannot spring unwelcome surprises at the public. It is a fact that sometimes the minister of the foreign office himself has ignored the existence of a certain treaty, as when the Russian minister Iswolsky indignantly objected to the definite occupation of Bosnia and Herzegovina by Austria-Hungary, the latter country was able to prove that Russia had consented to it in several secret agreements.

Generally it may be said that the time of secret treaties is over. The government of a country will be much stronger if it is accustomed to lay its policy before the nation. One cannot say that this is done in the United States. What we know is that we may "get in" when our championship of humanity demands it and "go out" when humanity is satisfied. Orphic utterances like these have given Mr. Wilson the reputation of a great master of diction.

PARLIAMENTARISM has gone down rapidly. When Napoleon III. made his "coup d'etat" and the deputy Baudin challenged the workmen to offer armed resistance, one of them answered with the taunt: "Twenty-five francs!" That was the daily remuneration of the deputies. Baudin answered: "You shall see how a man dies for twenty-five francs!" and the same day he was shot in the barricade fight. The people in France think today what that workman thought. Neither do the Germans believe in parliament, hero worshipers as they are.

In England the government by parliamentary majority was breaking down when the war began. "The reasons for this loss of authority are no mystery. The cabinet had reduced the party behind it to disciplined impotence, and the cabinet itself, as it grew in numbers, had fallen in its turn under the dominion of its inner committee. With all the forms of democratic government intact, we had involved from a too rigid party system what was in effect a narrow oligarchy, worked by alternating teams of half a dozen self-chosen leaders." (H. N. Brailsford, London, in "The New Republic.") These are confessions which may interest all those idealists who think that the United States ought to join the "Western Democracies" in the war against Prussian caste rule.

There is still a chance for parliaments if they understand that they must boldly take up the gravest problems of our times and conscientiously try to find a solution for them. People will again get interested in their activities and will trust them when they see that the parliament has the courage of its own opinion.

In politics theories are of little avail; every case ought to be treated in its singularity and so the members of congress might answer the colonel: "Generally speaking, you are right; the practice of the past is on your side and we do not know whether the future will find a way out of the dilemma, but if an inefficient ruler brings the country to the verge of an insane war, there is nothing else to be done: the affairs of the nation must be conducted by town meeting, and that is what we are here for."

AMERICA IN THE NEW WORLD

By Robert Herrick

IF the private capitalistic system should crumble in European countries after the war because of the excessive drains of the war, where will the United States and other neutral countries be placed? When the great powers are compelled by the necessity of self-preservation to substitute state control of credit for individual control, what will our people do? Go on as at present, naturally, until forced by circumstances more powerful than ourselves to meet the competition of the European system if successful. Or, possibly, force by our superiority the world back to the old competitive, individualistic basis. It seems likely that once the war is over we shall soon see the extraordinary spectacle of two economic systems—the old and the new—competing like two great religions for the mastery of the world.

Obviously Europe will make the utmost exertion to set her house in order, to maintain her populations in something like their former state of comfort. In the course of rehabilitation there will be an incentive to industry of every sort—production which must be state guided and state controlled because dependent to a large extent upon the good will of the state for the sinews of war, which are credit. Disciplined and socialized Germany, where already the state plays the elder brother's part toward enterprise, will not find it strange nor difficult to accommodate herself quickly to the new régime.

France, much more individualistic in habit, is highly intelligent and has doubtless learned much from contemplating in this war the thorough German method of state control. The French have shown that they can discipline themselves and coöperate loyally, submissively, to carry out the gigantic business of the war.

It will come hardest to England to submit her business affairs to an efficient state control. Already the governing class in England seems to be planning a resumption of business after the war on the old predatory lines, with a special effort to make Germany pay the piper by taking away her trade. Unless the spirit of social reorganization has grown more vigorously in England than is apparent on the surface it is likely that the English will have a hard time in the new world. But the English debt will be the biggest of all, and debt is a great tamer of the selfish spirit.

IF the new system works there should result a large saving over the wasteful method that has prevailed, because in place of a savage domestic competition for credit there will be coöperation and a broad control of the whole field of human effort, permitting expansion only where needed, concentrating the national supply of capital—too small at the most—where it can be used to the best advantage, not merely of the single individual interest but for the welfare of the whole state. With the new energies engendered by war, a phenomenon always apparent after great upheavals, due perhaps to a natural human reaction from debauch, with the urgent necessity of repair, also with the high technical equipment of Germany and the thrift of France, we may expect a rapid recovery from the wastes of the war and next a keen competition abroad, which means above all with us.

It will not be until then, when Europeans are free to turn their surplus energies from the labors of reconstruction at home out into the world at large, that we need fear the clash of the two systems. But some time the clash must come. Obviously the Europeans will have certain advantages over us. Disciplined by war and poverty, they will be more eager than we. There will be fewer wastes in their economic life, in their system of production, than our loose individualistic system encourages. And one may expect that under the state method of control of credit and indirectly of industry the condition of labor would improve as it has improved steadily in Germany. The "pauper labor" of Europe might become more efficient than ours and more formidable in the inevitable competition that will ensue.

MEANWHILE we should have been muddling on since the great war had stopped, and with it our feverish foreign trade, in our old chancey system of production, alternating between strikes and hard times, with brief intervals of a more or less precarious prosperity. Wages which we have been raising steadily as a sop to labor, no matter how inefficient, in order that the machine might run somehow, must fall one day, and with their fall and the exaggerated demands on life which we have encouraged among all classes must come industrial unrest, discontent. Our great capitalists, tempted by the opportunities for quick returns in foreign trade, will have sent their energies more and more abroad into such markets as are open to them.

The result might be, unless we had learned a lesson from Europe in time (which is hardly likely), a situation where we could not compete with Europeans either in maintaining our foreign trade conquests or in our own markets without the aid of artificial tariffs. In one way or another we might easily be forced to modify our loose individualism to meet successfully the competition of disciplined Europe. How would that come about? The radical mind would prefer, doubtless, "the social revolution," but what is more likely is a gradual modification of our ideas, with an increasing assumption of control by the federal government, not merely of transportation and distribution but fundamentally of the source of economic life—credit.

Few private citizens today fully realize the significance of the step which has already been taken by inaugurating the federal reserve system in this direction of public control of credit. That aspect of our banking system has not become evident, while there is a plethora of private capital at cheap rates and credit is unembarrassed. But let there come a period of acute fear when private capital runs to cover and buries itself, and we may discover the possibilities of our new credit system.

The federal reserve system through its local boards and their member banks can exercise a control on the loaning out of capital, otherwise credit, that will parallel the state control of Europe. For one thing, when the proper time comes it might limit the too easy expansion of our foreign interests; it could keep American credit and American energy working at home in the interests of American development. It could favor the agricultural resources of the country in preference to the promotion or purely speculative interests. It might practically shut down "Wall street" except as a bureau of exchange and record. And it might curtail such purely luxury enterprises as the motor car industry and moving picture films!

THE seeds of the new world are already in our soil, merely waiting the time of germination. Today when a railroad corporation wishes to obtain capital for extensions in many states it must go before some sort of public service commission to get the authority to sell its stocks and bonds, otherwise to use credit. It can no longer merely persuade some speculative banker to take its securities in the hope of disposing of them at a profit to the public. It must prove to the satisfaction of an impersonal government authority that the purposes for which the new use of capital are designed are legitimate and advantageous, not only for the owners of the corporation but for the larger public whose needs it serves, whose store of capital resources in the last resort it proposes to tap.

It would not be an excessive extension of the same principle to compel steel corporations and other great industrial enterprises that need large amounts of fresh capital constantly to justify their use of that credit which might profitably be employed in other directions than in their special reservoirs of industry. And the same would be preëminently true of new enterprises looking for capital from the public. The day of "water"—the fictitious capitalization of confidence—must be nearly over.

The principle of the thing is quite simple, as with all large natural processes, though its applications are various and easily disguised. Production depends upon capital, which is merely the accumulated energy of previous production. There is a limited supply of this accumulated or reserve energy in the world, though the capacity for creating it seems almost limitless. The purposes for which it should be used to the best advantage are not properly a matter for private, individual, selfish judgment altogether: the society which will necessarily be deprived of the use of that energy in other directions by its employment in any given enterprise is also concerned in the proper distribution of credit, and through its accredited agents should have some determining voice in its use.

The function of credit must be transferred from the private office of a private banker to the public office of a government institution. Once granted this premise—and more and more modern society is assuming it—strict control and supervision of credit becomes inevitable.

THE limitations of the present system have been stated many times: its working is felt by all of us, its abuses and its defects. But few pause to consider how deeply into their own little lives the influence of our credit system goes, how each one of us is molded irresistibly by its activities. Mankind is fundamentally conservative: it fears the unknown danger. The influences of reaction, of conservatism, of individual selfishness are immense.

It will take the necessities bred of the bloodiest, the most destructive war mankind has ever known to break the bonds of the capitalistic system, to prepare men's minds for another way of conducting their affairs in peace as well as in war—the coöperative way. Just as the hideous war most probably was engendered by the rapacities of the old system, in its settlement the system itself should receive its death blow.

The world may even hear the last of the individualist's crude creed: "I will do what I will with my own!" And when that day comes humanity will have made one of its longest steps in advance not merely toward the abolishment of war between nations but toward all imaginable social amelioration. With energies released and wastes eliminated, mankind will literally discover a New World.

THE DEATH OF PATRIOTISM IN AMERICA

By Mary Roberts Rinehart

WHAT has become of patriotism in America? Is it living, the same vital force which made its volunteers starve at Valley Forge and sent the north and south fighting for principles diametrically opposed but dearer than life itself? Is it still living, but heavy with the national fetish of the full dinner pail? Or is it dead?

Some 80,000,000 of people would answer that it is living, that it is still the rock on which the nation is founded, that to impeach the essential patriotism of the American people is to impeach the national integrity and the national honor. And perhaps they are right. Perhaps we are still a nation of patriots.

"A patriot is one who loves his fatherland and is zealous for its welfare."

We love our country, certainly. But zealous for its welfare? Are we that? I think not.

Patriotism is an active condition, not a passive virtue. We have plenty of latent patriotism. I do not question that. But latent patriotism is as potent as latent heat. It is a negative quality until it is made positive. Will it, after all, require a war to bring out this quality of love of country and zeal for its welfare without which no nation is truly great?

I am not impugning the American people individually but in the mass. The psychology of the mob is not the psychology of its units. A people may be individually brave and nationally weak. It is a matter of unity of spirit, of singleness of purpose, of one vision and one ideal.

Big as we are, a federation of states, differing as we must in the things by which we live, our east and our west, our north and our south, our farming lands, our mineral states, our factory regions—unwieldy by our very size and greatness—something more than a national government must hold us together.

That something must be national spirit.

Individually brave to the point of recklessness; idealistic, even romantic, so that we have been called a nation of dreamers, what are we nationally? Dreamers our forefathers certainly were. They dreamed of a great republic, awake and stirring. But even they did not foresee our overgrowth, our wealth. They did not realize that they were giving us a land so rich that it would leave us poor. For poor we are in the things that could make us great. Poor. The mob—and nations are but sublimated mobs—is at the call of some great voice. We have many voices, but none are great enough to unite us. And, left to ourselves, we have no single purpose, no national ideal, to follow.

We have much that calls itself patriotism. We are a sentimental people. We like to salute the flag. We like to see it fluttering from ships on the high seas. We are rather insistent about schools having a flag, and resentful when, at the country club, they forget to haul it down at sunset. We stand up and shriek hysterically when some two hundred young women at the hippodrome suddenly unfurl satin banners and produce a mammoth limelight imitation of Old Glory. We applaud when the band plays "Dixie" and choke up over a line of civil war veterans moving through the streets on Decoration day. There are some of us who cannot recite, without emotion, "Lives there a man with soul so dead," and the rest of it.

But are we an honestly patriotic people, in that we are zealous for the country's welfare? A sincerely and unselfishly patriotic nation? No.

Are we even a grimly earnest and determined nation? No.

Are we even a dominant nation, expressing its will through its representatives? No.

Think of this last question a moment. Does any one believe that the American people, or even a majority of the American people, are satisfied with conditions as they exist today? With the Mexican situation? With our position toward Europe and its insolent attitude to us? With the Indian question? With the tariff? With our army and navy problem?

And this is not a criticism of the present administration, for it is true of the one before, and of the one before that. It is a criticism of the American people. Of what avail discontent and mouthings? Uneasiness and unrest? Continual bickerings and the substituting of one political party for another in the hope of changing things for the better? "Zealous for the national welfare!" If we were, would we not be up and doing? A sovereign people? Nay, rather a slothful people in a public sense. An "easiest way" people. A self-centered, selfish and complaining people.

So long as a nation sits back and allows the few to rule, because the many are too indolent so long as it places commercial prosperity above national honor, that people lacks true patriotism. Lacks vision. Lacks future.

For nations, like men, do not live by bread alone.

It is said that we are badly represented in our legislatures. In a way, this is the country's defense. But it is not true. We are most accurately represented. When a bad man, an inefficient man, a dangerous man, goes to congress or the senate, it is because the majority of the people have allowed him to be sent there. He may not represent you or me. But he represents composite indifference. He represents the slothful. We cannot plead ignorance in these days of the omnipotent press. He goes by default, as it were. We can, and must, plead sloth. While Gulliver was asleep he was bound.

The truth is that American ideals are on trial today, and that the jury of the world is against them.

We are peculiarly governed. We put all our eggs in one basket. Once every four years the American eagle screams and the dinner pail waves, and we elect a new president. Then we sit back and wait. We have done our part. One man in every four, or six, or ten has cast his vote.

We have elected a president; for four years that president is our czar. What he does we must abide by. There is no presidential recall. He is the head of the army and the head of the navy. He is everything but the head of the church. To assist him he is given a cabinet. Is it political heresy to state that the president of the United States is the cabinet? Is it not true, after all? When a member of the cabinet differs vitally with the president there is but one course open to him. He resigns, and the president selects some one whose policies agree with his.

The result is a one man government. An unstable government, where each incoming ruler inherits the sins, the weaknesses and political errors of his predecessors. And where, every fourth year, he passes on to his successors his own mistakes, such an unstable government carries in its train unstable finances, unstable foreign relations, unstable commerce.

This fault is inherent in our form of government and we cannot alter it. But we can offset its weaknesses by strong national feeling. When the American ideal becomes single-mindedly the good of the country, when we vote with our minds awake, when civic and national conscience, and not merely political expediency, dictates our political movements, then and only then will we have justified the hopes of those, our forefathers, who founded this government.

Again, we put our destinies into the hands of one man, and then blindfold that man. Hands the president of the United States has in the navy and army, even if those hands be empty. But he has no eyes.

The United States has no foreign secret service. None. Now, let the eagle scream! Say we need none. Say that our national policy is one of noninterference with European politics. Say, out of the depths of abysmal ignorance, that the United States works in the open. Bah! Would you fight a burglar with bare hands?

No foreign secret service! With every war office of Europe owning drawings up to date of our forts, our roads, our railways; with every modern nation except ourselves depending on its secret service for every move it makes. Only ignorance can undervalue the services of secret agents. European diplomacy is never open. It skulks in the shadows, plots in remote places, hides in cellars.

Today, by its system of espionage and counter espionage, Germany knows before the American people do our next move in the game that is leading us toward war. What do we know of Germany? What do we know of the secret channels through which British and French and Japanese statesmen are today carrying on the real business of nations? Nothing.

Today we are facing a great crisis, blind and with empty hands.

All protests against armament are founded on one belief, a conviction that is fundamental, fundamental and erroneous. This is the belief that America attacked will rally as a whole to the support of the government.

But will it? The answer to that question is the question of patriotism in America, a living Americanism or a dead?

The answer we have always accepted is that a great army would rally, a great army, but an untrained one—the farmer beating his plowshare into a sword, the clerk exchanging his pen for a rifle, the banker placing his credit at the disposal of the government. The exact answer to this is the question. Will you go? Not your neighbor, not your son, not your employés. Will you go? Over age? You can drive an ambulance or join the commissariat in some capacity. You can operate a searchlight to hunt the heavens for aeroplanes, or join your local constabulary to guard bridges and railway lines against the secret operations of spies.

Will you go?

That is the answer. Not whether you can shoot, or ride a horse, or march so many miles a day.

Will you even try to go?

I wonder.

A certain percentage will go. And because of our great population that will be no mean army. But will one man in ten go or offer to go? Are we even one-tenth patriots?

Is America to sleep until the drifting ship of state strikes on the rocks?

And here we cannot ignore the question of our foreign population and its attitude, present and future; not necessarily our German population. The German born regiments in the civil war fought nobly. The question is much larger.

When we figure our population at so many millions and estimate that a certain sure percentage of that population will rise, we are including the immigrants from every country who have come here in search of two things—immunity from war and the full dinner paid, which are now our national emblem.

What of these Poles and Slavs and Lithuanians? These Greeks and Syrians and Italians and Russians? Have they come in pursuit of the ideal of liberty or have they come here to labor and to live by their labor? The answer is obvious. They will not enlist. They are not good patriots as yet, because they have not had time to become good Americans. Many of them do not learn the language. The Poles, for instance, forbidden their own tongue at home, come here for a chance to speak it.

Most of these aliens remain aliens to a remarkable degree. Led by demagogues and ignorant of the greater issues in our politics, they are often voted en bloc. They gain quickly our American habit of letting our leaders vote for us. Their press in numerous instances has been bought by the money interests and are run as capital desires.

As a class, they are not even good citizens. I am being frank because the time for frankness has come. Our foreign slums are intolerably dirty; dirty and disorderly. A poor citizen cannot be a good patriot. Our police records prove that the vast majority of crimes against the law and order of the country are committed by our unassimilated foreign born population. Our hospitals are filled with them, prostrate with diseases that are the direct results of negligence and filth.

These people form one of our greatest problems; not because they are not good citizens now; not because they will not fight for us.

But because, lacking national spirit, these people will, in time of war or crisis, be the people on whom we must depend to keep going the vast machinery of the government. They must labor that others may fight.

England has suffered from strikes. Its native born laborers have taken advantage of its situation to strike. Transports have been held up while dock laborers refused to work. Coal has lain idle in the mines, mills have been closed. Labor, realizing that it held the whip-hand, has forced extraordinary concessions. And these men are native born.

What of labor here—labor, which today maintains that every man's hand is against it, and so its hand must be against every man? What of our foreign labor, on which we rely almost entirely? Will it be zealous for the welfare of its adopted land? Will these Croats and Huns do better by us than the British miners or dock laborers? Will the American ideal, which has failed to rouse you and me and the rest of us, penetrate to the bewildered brains of these newcomers and rouse them to labor for the land, if they do not fight for it? Have we given them any example to follow? We have crowded them in tenements on the edges of dumps and slag piles. We have, with our usual indolence, permitted them to be untidy and disorderly citizens. We have tolerated their tin cans and their garbage and their demagogues.

But the time will come when we will be on our knees to them. We, who have shown no love of country ourselves, will ask these aliens, for love of country, to labor that some of us may fight, to make munitions, to mine coal, to keep our factories open. And they will strike—strike at us and at the country which we have not taught them to love.

Prosperity is more difficult to survive than adversity. A great wave of prosperity threatens today to engulf us. The wretchedness of Europe has been our opportunity. The sins of labor—foreign born—are mostly in the future. But the sins of capital are with us.

Already we have taken advantage of the harassed nations at war to raise our prices to them. It is blood money, but it is coming here. Labor has its dinner pail well filled, but capital is gorged. Fortunes are centralizing. The wealthy are becoming more wealthy. The result of the civil war was not dissimilar, only then a favored few capitalized the misery of their own land.

What is capital doing for its country? Nothing. What is capital doing for Europe? It is doing Europe. That is all. Helping Belgium? Absurd. Such assistance as America is giving Belgium, and it is pitifully small compared to what even war-ridden England is doing, and nothing at all to what we are making out of the war—the assistance we are sending to Belgium comes almost entirely from the people who make nothing from the prosperity war has brought us—from clerks and small trades people, from men on salaries, and from women who give out of the housekeeping allowance. Approach a man who is making millions out of munitions and ask him for a thousand dollars. A hundred. And see him quail!

I know. I know exceedingly well I live in Pittsburgh. All around me the steel mills are working day and night at margins of profit so enormous that the marvel is that labor can think of it and not rise. Five figure incomes have jumped to seven. Over the city, over the whole western end of the state, hangs that pall of smoke that in Pennsylvania means money, vast amounts of money.

Slothful at home, indifferent abroad!

You and I, reading our newspapers and roaring about corporation steals, political graft, and stuffed ballot boxes, and then forgetting about it until we buy another paper!

Patriots!

Why not do something about it? Why not demand, for instance, how many political plums of first quality came from that $150,000,000? How many expensive and permanent army posts in the war threatened state of Indiana and other dangerous localities it provided with fine, permanent buildings? How many useless dry docks it kept up or built? How many out of date rifles it bought? How many worthless harbors it dredged? How many machine guns has it purchased? But that's easy. We have only fifty-four, or some such number, in the entire army. They would protect about four miles of trenches.

The American people are getting these things because they permit it; because they are too indodlent to interfere. And here comes the bugaboo of the average voter. He is appalled by the fact that he is only one, one of many millions. What can he do? He sits back and grumbles. But he can do much.

First of all, he can learn the names of his representatives in congress and in the senate. Second, he can write letters.

The influence of the written word is great. And these men are in Washington because they want to be there. More than anything else they want to stay there. They are constantly feeling the public pulse as to how to stay there. In the end it is up to the people "back home" whether they continue in the pleasant paths to committee rooms, and to legislative desks, cuspidors included, in our lavish American fashion, or are brought back home to real labor again.

And they read their letters carefully. Not only are the writers voters. They probably represent other voters. The British write their letters to the Times. Let the newly awakened American patriot write his complaint instead of his usual inarticulate grumblings and see what will happen. If we could cast into congress now a mass of letters insisting on the things we want we would get them. And we would get them quickly.

We must awaken. Rouse from a sleep in which we dream the dreams of greed to the waking vision of a great nation; great not by accident of lavish resources but great because we make it so.

We must rouse to the knowledge that distance is but a question of time, and that each day sees us closer to the jealousies of Europe.

We must awaken from the dream that wars are fought for principle and not for aggrandisement.

We must awaken from the dream of pan-Americanism, save as a defensive alliance. The only pan-American at present is that we "pan" the Latins and they "pan" us.

We must awaken to the knowledge that a nation is greater than its stomach and only as great as its soul.

For, unless we do awaken, the thing for which our forefathers fought and lived is gone. Is dead of greed and indolence. For patriotism is the child of struggle. That which we have gained hard we prize. There is hope for us, of course. We have courage. When we are at last awake we will see with the clear eyes of the young. But when will we rouse? America, our America, is ours. Its great opportunities, its future, if we will but give it a future.

But it is ours too easily. Perhaps only after we have fought for it will we prize it. Now we have not struggled. We have not earned it.

"For they got not the land in possession through their own sword."

THE feature of a remarkably active week's market, in which all classes of property were represented except that in the downtown district, and wherein the recorded transfers made a new high water mark in the recorder's office, was the two transactions involving the removal of large wholesale grocery concerns to the district just north of the river.

Of scarcely less importance, however, was the activity in outside business and factory property, several unusually noteworthy transactions being completed.

Subdivision property was also represented by an exceedingly interesting transaction in the northwest part of the city, while there were many important sales of vacant, many of which involved important building projects.

Recorder's Office Swamped.

The present activity of the market, particularly as regards small property, is strikingly evidenced by the fact the recorder's office was literally swamped last week with the large number of deeds filed for record, so that it was impossible on some days to make up the lists for all the different towns, as usually published by the newspapers.

It was found necessary to limit the published transfers to one or two towns, and the fact aroused considerable comment among real estate men until they learned of the facts in the situation.

Leading Deal of the Week.

Probably the most important of the two deals of the week was the purchase by John Sexton & Co., now located at Lake and West Franklin streets, from the American Can company of the vacant property at the northeast corner of Wes Illinois and Kingsbury streets for a cash consideration of $205,000.

The plot fronts 370 feet on Illinois street, with a depth of 109 feet, except the east ninety-one feet, which is 100 feet. It comprises about 40,000 square feet, making the sale at the rate of $5.12 a square foot. The sale was negotiated by Dibblee & Manierre.

New Building Planned.

Sexton & Co. will at once begin the erection of a mill sprinkled building, of extra heavy construction, adapted to the wholesale grocery business, including a modernly equipped manufacturing and preserving plant, coffee roasters, etc., and a large refrigerating plant, to cost about $350,000. The property will be served with a switch track running into the building and extending along about two-thirds of the Illinois street frontage.

It is interesting to note that the property was bought by the can company about eleven years ago at a low figure, but the rise in values and the growth of the district have been so rapid that the property was not used for manufacturing purposes.

New $350,000 Grocery Home.

In the other transaction the McNeil & Higgins company is to have a new $350,000 home on East Grand avenue, to be erected by the Chicago Canal and Dock company. It will be seven stories and basement and will occupy a lot 300x150 feet, north front, 150 feet east of Seneca street. Its cost is placed at $300,000.

It will be leased by the McNeil & Higgins company for a term of twenty-five years at an annual rent of approximately $34,000, or $852,000 for the term, which is at the rate of a little less than 17 cents a square foot. Ogden, Sheldon & Co. represented the dock company and Bechtel & Adcock the grocery concern.

Good Railroad Facilities.

The building will be of mill construction, with laminated floors having a carrying capacity of 280 pounds to the square foot. The property has switch track connections with the Chicago and Northwestern road and, in addition, has 650 feet of track in the rear, comprising practically a private switching yard. Cars may be unloaded into the warehouse and into trucks on the outside at the same time.

The property will also have connection with the Illinois tunnel. The McNeil & Higgins company is one of the leading, as well as oldest, wholesale grocery concerns in the city, coming to Chicago from Elgin in 1872. The company has for some time had its offices and display room at 225 North State street, north of Lake street, where it also has carried some stock, but the bulk has been in the Pugh Terminal warehouse.

Kingsbury Street Sale.

Another interesting transaction in this district was the sale of the property at 1302-04 Kingsbury street, about 250 feet north of Division street, by Edward Lansberg and Gerard B. Winston, trustees for the United States Brewing company, to the J. W. Peterson Coal company for a reported consideration of $25,000. James A. Hool of John R. Magill & Co. was the broker.

"BABY" FLATS AND OFFICE BUILDING GOING UP

Babies are to be paramount in the apartment buildings which Lewis E. Russell, architect, is erecting for himself in Oakdale avenue, between Sheridan road and Pine Grove avenue. In addition to three playgrounds in the English basements, which are to be equipped with gymnastic apparatus and sand piles, there is also to be a large "garage" for baby carriages and velocipedes. There are to be three apartments of seven rooms with three bathrooms and a sun parlor and six apartments of six rooms with two baths and a sun parlor. The rooms are to be very large. A motor garage for each apartment is to be provided. The cost is $95,000.

The La Salle Extension university will occupy about Aug. 15 a substantial two story office and administration building now being erected for its exclusive use at the northwest corner of Michigan avenue and Forty-first street. The building, of brick and stone, will extend 141 feet on Michigan avenue and 160 feet on Forty-first street. W. P. Whitney, 122 South Michigan avenue, is the architect. The cost of the building will be $50,000.

FLAT PROPERTY TAKES A SPURT

Several Transactions Reported at Prices Ranging from $60,000 to $100,000.

There was a free movement of apartment house property during the week, particularly of medium priced property, although there were several transactions in which the consideration ran from $60,000 to $100,000. One of the latter was the sale by August Skoglund and others to Albin Nelson of the thirty apartment building at 5001-09 North Ashland avenue for a reported $100,000, subject to $55,000.

The purchaser conveyed in part payment the "Albion" farm of 387 acres, seven miles west of Waukegan, at $60,000, subject to $15,000. Harold C. Dix of Paisley & Walker represented the sellers and Benson Bros. Mr. Nelson.

Another $100,000 Deal.

Another big north side deal was the sale by M. W. Robinson to Claes Johnston and Carl Beroth of the thirty-seven one room apartment building on 53.6x 149.8 feet of ground in Sunnyside avenue, 166 feet east of Sheridan road, for an indicated $100,000, subject to $65,000. Johnston later conveyed his interest to Beroth.

Among other noteworthy deals was the transfer by Katherine M. Thomas to Varnac Delfraine the new twenty-four flat at 4712-16 Bernard avenue, lot 90x125 feet, for a reported $90,000, subject to $60,000, an Indiana farm valued at $30,000 being taken in part payment. George W. Stewart was the broker.

The same broker sold for Ralph J. Buckley and wife to Frederic S. Clarke of Kilbourn, Wis., the new fifteen flat, northwest corner of Ainslie and Whipple streets, lot 68x125 feet, for a reported $68,000, subject to $37,000, a Wisconsin farm going in part payment.

Other Deals of the Week.

Other deals of the week were:

Eugene Brown to Fred A. Rundle and George A. Stevenson, the twenty-four flat, lot 150x124 feet, in Vernon avenue, 123 feet south of Sixty-fourth street, for an indicated $75,000, subject to $50,000.

Swen A. Danielson to Edward L. Cox, twelve flat, northwestern corner Howard avenue and Eastlake terrace, lot 50x160 feet, for a reported $62,000, subject to $33,000, trade valued at $27,000 subject to $10,000 given. E. F. Linderoth was the broker.

THREE FACTORY TRACTS IN DEALS

$400,000 Plant at Stock Yards Involved in Provision Co.'s Purchase.

There were three transactions of noteworthy interest in factory property during the week, one involving the erection of a building at the Stock Yards at an estimated cost of about $400,000. It will be erected by John Hetzel, vice president of the Western Packing and Provision company, in the block bounded by Thirty-seventh place, Thirty-eighth street, Gage and Morgan streets, and comprising about 140,000 square feet.

The property is said to have comprised twenty-six different parcels, and while the consideration is not disclosed, it is said to have been about $55,600, or at the rate of about 40 cents a square foot, thought to be a low figure.

Mr. Hetzel will improve with a modern packing house. William L. Wallen represented Mr. Hetzel, while J. W. Paul and Brady & Buckley assisted him in acquiring some of the properties.

Another transaction was the sale by Nelson Lampert of the Fort Dearborn National bank to Bernard Horwich of the property at the southeast corner of Twenty-third and Paulina streets, formerly occupied by the Chicago Stove works, for an indicated consideration of $106,500.

It is improved with four four story buildings and a foundry which will be remodeled by the purchaser and occupied by the Horwich-Vitkin Hair company and the Chicago Curled Hair company. S. H. Newman was the broker.

There also was filed for record late in the week the sale by Israel and Samuel Lanski to Nathan T. Brenner of a tract of 60,446 square feet at the southeast corner of Twenty-first and Fisk streets for an indicated consideration of $75,000, subject to an incumbrance of $50,000.

VACANT TRACTS FOR SUBDIVISION IN GOOD DEMAND

William Zelosky's Purchase of 76 Acres on Northwest Side Leads Deals.

The market for subdivision and vacant property, which, like all other classes of property, made a surprisingly good showing last week, was featured by the purchase by William Zelosky, an extensive and successful northwest side subdivider, of what is kown as the "Gardner" tract of seventy-six acres for a reported consideration of $100,000.

The tract is bounded on the south by Gunnison street, on the north by Foster, or Gettysburg avenue, on the east by Menard avenue, and on the west by Sixtieth, or Maynard avenue.

It was acquired from William Gardner and brother, who reside in England. It adjoins on the west the forty acres purchased last summer, making altogether 116 acres, laid out in thirty foot lots and known as "Colonial Gardens."

The property is one block west of Milwaukee avenue and two blocks to the Jefferson station of the Chicago and Northwestern railroad.

Plans to Beautify Tract.

It is stated the tract will be developed along the same lines as Zelosky's Addison street subdivision. All street improvements will be put in, including cement walks and asphalt pavement, the latter work to be done immediately by private contract. Landscape gardeners will plant the entire subdivision with trees and shrubbery, making it parklike in appearance.

An interesting and new feature will be the establishment of building zones, which will include one for residences and bungalows, one for apartments, one for cottages, and one for business buildings. All frame buildings will be prohibited. It is stated that 100 bungalows and two flat buildings will be erected during the coming summer.

Northwest Side Deal.

Another deal in vacant in the northwest part of the city involving extensive constructions of brick bungalows and two flat buildings was closed late in the week. W. D. Kerfoot & Co. sold for a syndicate represented by the Chicago Title and Trust company to David Kliger, 60x125 feet, south front, in Byron street between Fifty-second and Fifty-third avenues, 64x125 feet, south front, in Berenice avenue; 300x125 feet, north front, on Berenice, and 540x125 feet, south front, on Grace street, all between Fifty-second and Fifty-third avenues, for a reported $12,500. All the lots will be improved with bungalows and two flats to cost from $3,500 to $5,500.

A notable deal in South Shore vacant also closed was the purchase by Anton E. Sward of the remainder of the Saunders South Shore subdivision. The property fronts 285 feet on the boulevard, facing the South Shore Country club and running through to fifty feet on South Shore avenue.

Flat in Part Payment.

The consideration is stated at $40,000, Mr. Sward giving in part payment the twelve flat building at the southwest corner of Ridgeland avenue and Sixty-eighth street, valued at $35,000, subject to $30,000. It is stated Mr. Sward will at once improve with a building to contain a large theater on the boulevard, a 100 car garage, also stores and small apartments. E. H. Young of E. K. Young & Bro. was the broker and will handle the property.

An interesting transaction in the Stony Island avenue district is the sale by E. F. Bryant, president of the Pullman Trust and Savings bank, to John G. Ruel of the vacant 100x100 feet at the southeast corner of Seventy-fifth street and the avenue for $40,000. Mr. Bryant purchased the property about seven months ago from the Thomas E. Wells estate for $32,500. Peter Foote was the broker.

Halsted Vacant Sold.

The vacant 100x125 feet at the southeast corner of Halsted and Sixtieth streets has been sold by A. Phillips, E. Weil, and S. Phillips to John M. Fields for a reported consideration of $35,000. It is stated the property will be improved at once with a three story store, flat, and office building to cost about $60,000. Harry M. Engelstein & Bro. were the brokers.

Leases and Loans.

There was a good deal of an important character doing in leases and loans last week, a particularly interesting loan of $400,000 being made in the downtown district, in which the interest rate is 5 per cent. It probably is safe to say, however, that this does not reflect actual conditions in the downtown loan market, as it is known there is much money available at 4½ per cent on this class of property.

To a certain extent, however, the loan may be said to measure the tendency, although not particularly strong, towards a firmer loan market, which many experienced brokers as well as financiers believe will become more pronounced from now on, and which will result in much dearer money with the end of the European war.

The loan in question was made by the Hibernian Banking associaton to C. T. Otis and runs for two years. It is secured by the property, north front, on Jackson boulevard, between Dearborn street and Plymouth place, 50x70 feet, which is being improved with a four story business building.

The most important lease was the one whereby the Golf Shop company leased for a term of years the south 40 feet of the first floor and basement in the Griffiths building at 29-35 South Wabash avenue at a reported term rent of $190,000. The lessee company is located at 75 East Monroe street and will move to the new location about the middle of May. The lease was negotiated by White & Tabor, who have charge of the building.

E. F. Keebler & Co. leased the store at 74 West Madison street, in the building at the northeast corner of Clark street, to A. & S. Lederer, representing the Diamond Importers and Jewelry company of New York, for ten years from May 1, at a term rent of $80,000, to be occupied as a retail diamond shop. Keebler & Co. also leased for E. Elger & Bro. to the Monarch Trunk and Bag company the front sixty feet of the bank floor in the McCormick block, southeast corner of Dearborn and Washington streets, formerly occupied by the Cunard Steamship company, for a term from May 1 at an annual rent of $6,000.

Willis & Frankenstein leased for the Union Bank of Chicago to Louis Deutsch the store and basement, 35x90 feet, in the Union Bank building, at 21-23 North Dearborn street, for a term from May 1 at a reported term rent of $64,000. The lessee will use the premises for restaurant and grocery purposes in connection with his Clark street store. C. S. Dickinson was connected with the deal.

E. C. Brownlee has closed several leases for Frederick R. Barnheisel of space in the new Barnheisel building at 616-622 South Michigan avenue, the most important being to S. Svenson & Co., ladies' tailors, half of the second floor for ten years at a reported term rent of $44,200; to M. J. Steffens, the photographer, part of the tenth floor for ten years at a reported term rent of $39,000; to Noble & Goodwin, milliners, space in the arcade on the first floor for ten years at a reported term rent of $21,000.

There were in addition many 6 per cent bond issue building loans.

STATE REALTY EXCHANGES TO FORM AN ASSOCIATION.

An important event of the week in real estate circles was the announcement made at the monthly meeting of the Chicago real estate board of the organization of the Real Estate Association of the State of Illinois, to be made of the exchanges of all the leading cities of the state. The object of the association, as stated by President W. C. Johnson, president of the Danville exchange, is "to establish and standardize the business of real estate brokerage, so that it shall obtain and hold the confidence of both owners and purchasers, and to unite the real estate broker and agent for the common good. In a broader sense, its purpose is to secure concerted action and state-wide coöperation in matters affecting real estate throughout the state. Frank Horner, president of the Rockford exchange, is vice president and J. K. Brittain of the Chicago board, secretary.

REALTY BOARD TO DISCUSS TAX AMENDMENT PROPOSAL.

A special meeting of the Cook county real estate board will be held Tuesday, at 2 p. m., to consider what action the board will take in the campaign now being organized by the Civic Federation of Chicago to bring about the adoption of the pending tax amendment. The speakers will be Frederick R. De Young, a member of the state legislature, who addressed the board at the Tuesday luncheon on the tax amendment question, and Stoughton Cooley, associate editor of the Public. S. Bloom of Melbourne, Australia, will be the speaker at the regular Tuesday luncheon, and he will talk on "The Australian Torrens System." J. F. Hecht will be toastmaster.

OUTER DISTRICT BUSINESS SITES IN GOOD DEMAND

Record Breaking Woodlawn Deal Shows Sharp Advance of Realty Values.

Outside of the two large north side deals, involving the location of two leading wholesale grocery concerns in new buildings to be erected for them in that part of the city, the most important feature of the week's business was the fine showing made in outside business property.

The most important transaction, and what is said to be a record breaking deal for the Woodlawn district, was the sale by Henry Wolf to William T. Brown of the property at the southeast corner of Sixty-third street and Kenwood avenue for an indicated consideration of $122,000, subject to $60,000.

Old Cosgrove Homestead.

The property, formerly the old Cosgrove homestead, fronts 150 feet on Sixty-third street and 166 feet on Kenwood avenue, and is improved with a four story store and flat building on the corner, with two stores on the ground floor on Sixty-third street, and a row of five one story stores on the east. Charles A. V. Standish represented both parties.

Less than a year ago Mr. Wolf purchased the property from Mrs. Cosgrove for $105,000, the sharp advance indicated by the present deal being, it is thought, largely due to the stimulating effect which the proposed new office building of the Illinois Central, just west of its Woodlawn station, is having on property in that vicinity.

North Side Corner Sold.

A good sized north side deal was the sale by Niels Buck to F. J. Dewes of the property at the northwest corner of Clark and Grace streets, 118x166 feet, improved with a two story building containing nine stores and seven flats, for a reported $80,000, subject to $34,000. Mr. Buck took in part payment the 200x260 feet in Clark street, 151 feet north of Lawrence avenue, with old frame improvements, for an indicated $30,000. George W. Warner was the broker. Mr. Buck has no present plans for improving the vacant.

A notable deal in Maywood business property was the sale by Richard Curry Jr. to Carl Brown of the Maywood theater building at the southeast corner of Fifth avenue and St. Charles road, 165 feet, for a reported $60,000. In addition to the theater the building contains eight stores and six offices. The seller took in part payment an eight flat building at 3047 Franklin road, and vacant on Franklin boulevard. The Liberty Realty company was the broker.

Good Deal on West Side.

An interesting west side deal was the purchase by Charles B. Pike from Jennie C. Donnman of the 40x75 feet of vacant north front, in Jackson boulevard, 50 feet east of Jefferson street, for $48,125. It is stated there are no plans looking to the immediate improvement of the property.

The property at the southeast corner of Diversey boulevard and North Halsted street, 82x145 feet, with store and flat improvements, was purchased by George B. Williams for an indicated $45,000 from George H. Lindemann, Joseph I. Berkenfield first taking title. It is stated Mr. Williams will further improve with a building to contain three stores and a garage.

ALASKA RAILWAY TO OPEN UP VAST MINERAL RICHES

Line Will Reach Huge Fields of Coal and Low Grade Gold Quartz.

BY FRANK G. CARPENTER.

[Copyright: 1916: By Frank G. Carpenter.]

ANCHORAGE, Alaska. — [Special.] — The new construction begins here at the mouth of Ship creek, where ocean steamers land their supplies in the summer, and the roadbed has been graded for about forty miles. Twenty miles of track have been already laid, and everything is in preparation for rapid work.

The engineers have made careful surveys of the route from here to Fairbanks, and have covered the branch line which goes from Matanuska Junction to the Chickaloon coal fields. They have gone over the Alaska Northern railway, which Uncle Sam bought last year at a cost of $1,330,000, and have put thirty-five miles of that road in running condition.

They have laid out the extension of the Alaska Northern to Anchorage, and, in short, have now planned the whole railway. They have made careful estimates of the cost of everything connected with it, and have constructed contour maps showing the country on the scale of one inch to the mile.

1,000 Miles Authorized.

The act providing for government railroads in Alaska was passed March 12, 1914. It authorized the operation and building of railroads here to an extent not to exceed 1,000 miles and at a cost of not more than $35,000,000. It was on this authorization that the president bought the Alaska Northern railway and decided to extend it to Fairbanks, a distance of 472 miles, at a cost of something like $27,000,000.

But congress will have to appropriate the money as needed and the progress of the work depends on Washington. In 1914 the appropriations amounted to about $1,000,000. Something like $2,000,000 was appropriated last year and the engineers have asked for $10,000,000 to be spent in 1916. If that is granted the road to the Matanuska coal fields can be completed and the lower portion of the extension to Fairbanks put into operation this year.

The total length of the government railway will be under 500 miles, and the engineers tell me it can be constructed at an average cost of about $50,000 per mile. The track is to be of the standard gauge with rails of seventy pounds to the yard. It will be substantially built and of the most modern construction.

Engineers Work with Men.

There is no red tape here at Anchorage, and so far "fuss and feathers" are absent. The three engineer commissioners tramp about with the men and go over the job on foot and on horseback.

Nevertheless, William C. Edes, the chairman of the commission, has built some of the great roads of the west. Lieut. Frederick Mears was superintendent of the railway at Panama and Thomas Riggs Jr. was at the time of his selection chief of the boundary survey. They are all men of practical experience and are especially fitted for life and work on the frontier.

The new railway runs through the woods, but the land on both sides has been cleared and ditches drain away every bit of the water. A smooth bed of gravel ten or more feet in height has been made through the valley of Ship creek, and this is of the requisite width for the track. I have never seen a better looking roadbed anywhere, and now at its beginning it compares favorably in appearance with that of the Pennsylvania or the New York Central.

Roadbed Built of Gravel.

The engineers have the advantage here of building along hills made of gravel. They are composed of pebbles ranging from the size of my fist to that of a pea, and all that has been necessary to get the material for the fills has been to drive cuts into the hills at the side of the track. These cuts are then roofed over and the cars are run into the bank and loaded by gravity.

Most of the region to be reached by the railway has not yet been fully prospected. The land is covered with moss and other vegetation which so hides the rocks that it is hard to tell what there is. It is known, however, that the road will give easy access to many rich gold deposits and that mining camps will spring up all along the way from Seward to Fairbanks.

North of Anchorage at Mile 185 from Seward is Willow Creek. This is forty miles north of Anchorage, and it should be reached by the railroad this year. Willow Creek has three quartz mines, with a ten-stamp mill. It produced gold last summer to the amount of $315,000. The mill is about twenty miles from the end of the tracks now being laid.

A little further north is the Talkeetna river, where there is good farming land. That part of the country is open. It is made up of plains and valleys spotted with groves and covered with grass. A short distance to the west of it are the Yetna and Skwetna mining districts, where many prospectors are working.

One of the most promising mining districts along the new railroad is near Broad pass, where the road crosses the mountains at an altitude of 2,400 feet above the sea.

We hereby issue an unreserved and unqualified challenge to any and all auxiliary air devices now on the market to a test of merit, under the severest conditions, on the steepest hills, most rugged roads, in the deepest sand, to determine once and for all whether any air auxiliary device is capable of equaling or surpassing the wonderful achievements of the

MONEY BACK IN THIRTY DAYS IF NOT SATISFIED

OR YOUR MONEY BACK

The only condition is that only one adjustment of carburetor shall be made—no separate adjustment for speed—no separate adjustment for power—no separate adjustment for economy—only one adjustment to show all three factors—Power, Speed, Mileage.

Any Manufacturer of an Auxiliary Air Device Who Does Not Accept This Challenge at Once Has Not Confidence in His Own Device, and Therefore Is Not Entitled to the Confidence of the Public

Don't Be Deceived by Official Tests Conducted on the BOULEVARDS

There is nothing unusual or wonderful about boulevard or flat road tests—no matter how official they may be. The Franklin Car made 83 miles to the gallon—on the level—in a test conducted their way, and they admitted publicly that the test was conducted under ideal conditions not possible to the motor car owner.

YOU are not interested in boulevard tests, what you do want to know is what you can expect under the usual conditions of driving your own car—every possible phase of driving—steep hills—rugged and undeveloped roads—deep sand—mud—in all kinds of weather.

We will soon conduct an official test—but it will be under strenuous conditions—where the going is bad enough to make the test REAL. And we will not make the test OUR way. It will be YOUR way. Under exactly the same conditions you meet when YOU drive YOUR car.

COMPENSATING VAPOR PLUG has already passed through the most severe tests of skilled engineers under adverse conditions—over the roughest and hilliest byways in Michigan—through mud and sand—and produced an even bigger percentage of increase, speed, power and mileage than we claim for it.

But we are not asking you to buy the COMPENSATING VAPOR PLUG on the strength of such tests as these. We are not asking you to buy it on the recommendation of thousands of users who have written us even stronger endorsements than the few letters shown below. We are taking away every chance of your buying a "fake" by offering to refund your money any time within 30 days of your purchase, and in this way letting you make your own tests at our risk, on your own car, in your own way, over your own roads.

You Take No Chances on Our Great "Money Back" Offer—OUR Claims Are COLD FACTS

One hundred and fifty thousand automobilists are using COMPENSATING VAPOR PLUGS on their cars—of every make and age. We have sold 600,000 plugs to dealers who know things that will work when they see them and won't sell anything else. Every day sees our business growing by leaps and bounds. And why? Because the COMPENSATING VAPOR PLUG is so good and so cheap that no automobilist can afford to be without it and because we can guarantee things that are just as true as they are sensational. No matter how hard-headed a buyer you are, you have never been offered a fairer or more liberal proposition.

You can't say, "Well, it might be a good thing for some cars, but not for mine," because we GUARANTEE you that it will produce at least 30% more speed, 30% more power, and 40% more mileage for ANY car if the motor is in good condition. It gets at the very things that make your old car out of date—lack of speed, lessened power, high gasoline consumption. It makes the liveliest new car livelier.

It is as easy to take off as it is to apply, and positively cannot do your car any harm.

YOU SIMPLY CAN'T FIND A REASON FOR NOT TAKING ADVANTAGE OF THIS GREAT "SHOW ME" OFFER OF OURS.

And remember that the COMPENSATING VAPOR PLUG is patented and protected and that all similar devices are infringements. Don't buy a lawsuit from an unprotected imitator when you can get the COMPENSATING VAPOR PLUG just as easily.

These USERS Prove Our Claims—Read Their Letters—Thousands More Like Them in Our Files

Results Exceed Claims

Chicago.

I find that the results exceed your claims in the flexibility of the motor, mileage per gallon of gasoline and power.

H. M. POWER.

Added 100% Efficiency,

Holyoke, Colo., March 17, 1916.

I have put in one of your Vapor Plugs in my Model T Ford and have added 100% to the efficiency of my gas. What can you do by me if I take up the Plug and push it? I think that I ought to have 33 1-3%.

I have ordered six from your Denver distributors; but think that if I could deal directly with you you might give me some good territory.

Phillips County State Bank will satisfy you as to my responsibility. Respectfully,

LEE A. BRINK.

Results Beyond Expectations

Ashland, Ohio.

I am pleased to say that it gives results beyond anything I expected. Three or four car owners have already asked for your address and I feel sure that they are ready to purchase.

R. T. SCANTLEBURY.

Gasoline Consumption Cut in Half

Kansas City, Mo.

I must tell you that the little device you sent is eminently satisfactory, and although my Ford has covered some 25,000 miles since putting on the Compensating Vapor Plug, the engine runs really better than it did when the car was new. My gasoline consumption has been cut half in two on the same mileage as I was getting before using your plug.

UNION BANK NOTE CO.,
Leo B. Crabbs, Treas.

Does More Than Promised

Elgin, Ill.

I have given thorough tryout to your Compensating Vapor Plug under the most severe weather and find that it does more than promised.

GEO. H. ANDRESEN.

Twice the Mileage

Coffeyville, Kans.

In a run of 16 miles today used one-half gallon of gasoline, which is about one-half as much as I generally use. Find my car starts much easier than it did before.

G. W. GETGENDANER.

42 Per Cent More Mileage

I personally tested this plug for mileage with and without the plug, and it shows about 42 per cent more mileage.

L. J. FLUKER.

34½ Miles Per Gallon

On an official test in this city I ran 34.5 miles on one gallon of gasoline, and have been averaging about thirty miles to the gallon during winter months.

H. J. HANEY, Mgr.,
Gas Appliance Co.

Measured Gallon

Have given the plug a fair trial, one gallon of gas in the car without the plug giving 16 miles per gallon and one gallon of gas in the car with the plug making 28 miles per gallon.

DELTA AUTO CO.

Expects Even More

The first trial gave me thirty miles to the gallon, where I formerly had only 15 to 16. After proper adjustment of carburetor, I expect to do even better.

W. A. ORLAMOND,
Technical Dir., Gaumont Co.

15 Service Stations Along Boulevards in Chicago

The Compensating Vapor Plug is a Chicago product—in a few weeks we will have fifteen service stations on the boulevards—every one working to secure better results from your automobile—for you. The Compensating Vapor Plug does what no carburetor can do—it adjusts the fuel from the carburetor for every condition of running, and it does it positively automatically. Big Chicago test coming, also in 31 other cities.

Errors by Northwestern and effective pitching by Walter Halas of Illinois gave the downstaters a 4 to 1 victory over the Purple at Evanston yesterday. The game was played in a slow rain, but was a close battle, although Illinois held a lead after the third inning. Newby allowed the visitors nine hits, while Halas held the Purple to six.

Hirn, Purple left fielder, gave Huff's men their start in the third when he misjudged a fly from Krebs' bat. The mistake allowed Clarke and G. Halas, who were on bases because of Driscoll's error and a pass, to score. Krebs reached second. Illinois scored in the eighth on hits by G. Halas and Krebs, and again in the ninth, when Koptic doubled, was advanced by Thomas' sacrifice, and counted on a single by W. Halas.

Northwestern started a rally in the ninth. Singles by Driscoll, Foley, and Quigley resulted in one run, but three other Purple batters fanned. Score:

A double steal after two passes and an out tied it up for the Midway nine in the third, and poor base running lost another score when Hart was caught at the plate.

Max Scores on Trick Play in Eighth and Vaughn Lands Game, 2 to 1.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 6.—[Special.]—It was another great contest when the Cubs and Pirates battled today and the Cubs won out by a count of 2 to 1 because they were more alert in their attack and tighter with their defense in the critical spots. The victory gave the Tinker crew two games out of the series of three and kept them close to the leaders in the race.

Frank Schulte, Max Flack, and Long Cy Williams were chief combatants in the attack which broke through the Pirates' ramparts and carried the day. It was Schulte's terrific swat to right field which drove in the first run when Jim Archer was on second with two out in the fifth round. That blow also tied the score, for the Pirates had tallied in the fourth.

Winning Run in Eighth.

But it was an alert and lively bit of base running by Max Flack which produced the winning run for the Cubs in the eighth. Max started the assault by drawing a base on balls after one was out and he legged it to third when Williams produced a bounding single to right field.

With Heine Zim at bat it looked as if he surely would hit something which would enable Max to get home, and at that stage of the contest one run would be big. Zim did hit something that let Max get home, but it required a quick bit of thinking, a portion of cunning, and then a sprinting pair of legs and a desperate slide to go clear through with the scheme. Zim's best was a soft roller which stopped dead half way between the pitcher and the home plate, so Flack simply stood still at third base as if the last thing in his mind was an idea of attempting to score.

Flack Outguesses Babe Adams.

Babe Adams, the famous pitcher, ran in, picked up the ball, and pegged to first base, but the very instant he let loose the throw Flack was off for the plate just as if some one had fired the gun for a fifty yard dash. There was a scream of surprise from all the Pirate players and all the folks in the grand stand, and the instant Johnston got the ball at first base he lined to the plate with all the speed his arm possessed, but Flack hit the dirt and scraped the plate with one toe an instant before Catcher Schmidt could slap the ball upon him.

Not many players in the game today would attempt the trick which Flack executed, and not many would have had the speed to carry it out if they had attempted it. That trick won the game, and if it hadn't been turned the two teams might have been fighting when darkness came, because Big Jim Vaughn was on the slab for the Chicagoans and was in fine trim, and Babe Adams looked as fit as he ever did.

Errors Allow Two Runs.

The hits were evenly divided, each side registering seven blows. Each side also made one error and in both cases the mistake helped in the production of a run, so all things were even up until Flack executed his trick which put the Cubs ahead.

The Cubs seemed to hit the ball harder than the enemy, though they got the same number of blows. Three or four times during the fight one of the Chicago players hit one right at somebody when men were on the sacks, and if any one of those blows had gone safe, as they all deserved to go, it would have been a victory for the Cubs by a big count.

For instance, in the fourth inning, when two Cubs were on, one on third and one on second, with two men out, Mike Doolan hit a ball as hard as he ever hit one in his life. It was aimed right at Adams' stomach, and Babe got his glove there in time to save his life. The ball fell dead at his feet and he picked it up and tossed to first.

Doolan Loses Another Hit.

The next time Mike came up Heine Zim was on first with two out, and Mike hit one down the first base line like a rifle shot. It was about two inches inside the bag, but Johnston was there to hold Zim close to the bag and simply stuck down his gloved hand and stabbed the ball.

In the eighth, just after Flack had tallied and Williams still was on the runway with two out, Saier smacked the ball right on the seam and it started in a line over first base. It might have been a triple, but Johnston made a flying leap up with his left hand extended to the limit and the ball stuck in there.

Because of those exciting bits of fielding and the intensity of the battle it was as interesting a combat as the Cubs have been in this season, and there were about 8,000 of Pittsburgh's select fans out to look on.

SOX SYDELIGHTS

Cleveland once more today.

The last home game until May 27.

Smith made a great catch of Schalk's foul fly in the fifth, going close to the stand after it, and it was raining hard then.

Umpire Evans recovered from his lameness sufficiently to work on the bases again and give the plate decisions to Chill.

The White Sox will leave tonight for the east, stopping off for an exhibition game in Erie, Pa., tomorrow. They have the world's championship in exhibition games up to date.

Manager Rowland gave his men a shakeup by benching Felsch and putting John Collins in center field, then reducing McMullin from second to seventh place in the batting order, placing Shauno second.

Danforth underestimated Wamby's fleetness in the fourth and let the visitor beat out a bunt, but in the fifth Danforth stabbed a swat from Turner's bat and threw out his man, then caught Speaker flatfooted off first base after hitting Tris in the slats.

The Schalk-Graney row did not last long, and when Graney came to bat in the ninth inning they shook hands. Graney was hissed steadily by the home fans after the mixup. He could not have got in worse with the rooters than by picking on the chief fighter of the home outfit.

The Rowlands have the art of avoiding runs well perfected. In the second inning Weaver tripled over Smith's head with one out. McMullin slapped a bounder to Turner and Weaver was run to death trying to score. In the fifth McMullin and Danforth singled, putting two on with one out. Murphy and J. Collins popped out. If some way could be found to conceal base runners from the Sox while at bat they might win.

NOTES OF THE CUBS

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 6.—[Special.]—Cubs and Pirates departed tonight for Chicago, where they will continue fighting tomorrow afternoon at Weeghman park. One game tomorrow and two Monday is the booking.

Bill Hinchman was unable to play because of a sprained ankle and it was one of those games where a hitter of his renown was badly needed. He may be out for a week or two.

Mike Doolan demonstrated that the fans need have no further fear that his arm has lost some of its speed. He had two or three awful tough chances and made good each time, once nailing the fleetfooted Mr. Carey and once backing up a drive by Knabe which Zimmerman almost got. Mike pegged from away back of third that time and got his man.

The Cubs lost chances to score in the fourth because they decided to try a regular batting rally instead of playing for one run. Flack opened with a single and Williams swung on one, but a fly to Barney resulted. Flack then tried to steal and was nipped. After that both Heine Zim and Saier came through with base hits, but neither got home.

Adams' triple in the seventh might have been a homer if he had borrowed Max Flack's legs to run it out. It was a drive to left center which Williams attempted to catch by leaping into the air after running back some distance. The result was that Long Cy took a header into the grass and then had to pick himself up and chase the ball, as he still was much closer to it than Schulte.

CORNELL STAR BLANKS TIGERS WITH TWO HITS

Princeton, N. J., May 6.—Russell, Cornell pitcher, repeated his performance of a week ago and shut out Princeton by the same score of 1 to 0. Russell again allowed Princeton only two hits. Link, for the Tigers, had many narrow escapes. He was hit hard, but Cornell did not succeed in getting the only run of the game across until the ninth. Budd got four hits in four times up. Score:

SLEEPY RED SOX STOPS RALLY AND LETS YANKS WIN

McNally, Pinch Base Runner, Pinched Off Second In Ninth Inning.

Boston, Mass., May 6.—New York Yanks defeated Boston, 5 to 4, in a game that might have gone into extra innings had not McNally, pinch runner, been caught napping off second in the ninth with two out. His retirement nipped a Red Sox rally, in which Markle was driven from the slab, as well as Shawkey, who relieved him. Score:

ANDREWS HOLDS COSTLY COMBAT DESPITE HOUSE

Shows His Gameness in Face of Big Guarantee Given to Fighters.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

Tom Andrews of Milwaukee hasn't always been a promoter of boxing contests, but ever since his entry into the game in that capacity he has been credited with going through with whatever he has started. There have been times when some of the bouts he promoted didn't yield him a profit. In fact, some of them have resulted in rank failure to the Andrews purse, chiefly because he gave big guarantees to the talent that he engaged.

There have been a few folks identified with the sport who have branded Andrews with the sign of "foolishness" for making his matches, but that was before the Brewery City promoter pulled off his biggest financial coup—that of drawing $30,000 through the gate for a battle between Willie Ritchie, then lightweight champion, and Ad Wolgast, a former titleholder. That was the biggest gate for a ten round no decision contest in the history of the fistic game up to that time, and it still would have been the record but for the staging of the heavyweight battle between Jess Willard and Frank Moran in New York, when the house amounted to something like $150,000.

Also Had Other Winners.

The Ritchie-Wolgast contest wasn't the only big winner that Andrews pulled off. He staged several other paying contests, but most of these in the long run were evened up by shows which were big losers from a financial standpoint. It was one of these losing contests a few years ago that gave Andrews a chance to establish himself in the good graces of the pugilists and the fans as well, for he showed the trait of gameness. That gameness on Andrews' part consisted of his paying out the full guarantee promised the scrapper regardless of the number of fans who paid their coin at the gate.

The writer remembers the name of one of the contestants in this particular bloomer. His name was Jack Dougherty, and at the time Jack had some class as a drawing card. The name of his opponent is forgotten, but that doesn't make any great difference in this narrative.

Cochran Partner of Andrews.

At that time Andrews had associated with him in the promotion of the show a young fellow named Cochran, now dead, who was a good running mate for Andrews in the matter of "sticking" in the game regardless of the cost. The bout between Dougherty and the other chap looked so good to Andrews and Cochran that they gave big guarantees to both of the windup stars. That was where they pulled a boner, for the card didn't draw enough shekels to pay off one of the performers.

As Andrews spent considerable of his time in the box office while the preliminaries were being pulled off it didn't take him long to see the show was going to be a bloomer. He wasn't overset on coin and neither was his partner at that time and they began to worry about how they'd get the jack to make good the guarantees. Andrews quickly evolved the idea of cutting down expenses wherever possible and instead of hiring some one to act as timekeeper as was customary, he appointed himself to that job.

Just as they were getting ready to put on the windup Cochran ran to the ringside where Andrews was already on hand to fill the job of timekeeper. "Say, Tom, what'll we do about this," whispered Cochran into Andrews' ear. "There isn't enough money in the house to pay off even one of the windup scrappers. Shall we pay these fellows what we've promised them?"

Then Shows His Gameness.

Andrews allowed his eyes to take a slant at the "crowd" and a fellow might be excused of cheating if he estimated it at 1,000 fans, so slim was the attendance. But Andrews was game.

"Yea, we'll go through with it and pay what we've guaranteed," answered Tommy, although there still was time enough for him to call off the show on account of the bum attendance. "There are many fans here, but they paid their money so we'll give them the show and charge it to profit and loss."

Cochran listened with an attentive ear but instead of a countenance overcast with gloom his face quickly lit up with a smile.

"I've got an idea," he said. "You cut out that timekeeping job, we'll lock the doors so that no one else can get in (some sarcasm, for nobody was breaking down the doors to gain entrance), and then we'll go over and sit in a box and watch the fight like real fans. It'll make the crowd look larger and besides, we'll consider it our own private little show."

SAYLOR SOLVES ROADWORK

Hoosier Lightweight Impresses Sister Into Service as Companion on Long Jaunts.

BY J. J. ALCOCK.

MILBURN SAYLOR is the Indianapolis lightweight who recently fooled the doctors and battled through a tough siege of pneumonia after the medics were ready to call the undertaker. Milburn is a strong believer in road work as a means of conditioning a boxer. Years ago, before he rose to prosperity, his training retinue usually consisted of one rubber. Said rubber never could enthuse over the hiking stuff, and Milburn often was forced to take weary runs along the roads about Indianapolis without a companion to share his misery.

These lonely journeys took all the fun out of life for Saylor. Always earnest in his training, he soon found himself shirking, walking easily when he should have been working off superfluous poundage by stepping along at a dog trot. Try as he would, the fighter could not keep himself to his task. Finally he decided that if he were to make a success in the fight game he would have to acquire a permanent companion for his road work.

In the Saylor household at the time was a kid sister who was Milburn's pet. The boxer confided his troubles to the sister, and she heroically vounteered to accompany him on his pedestrian tours. Milburn took her up before she had a chance to reconsider the matter. Folks about Indianapolis thereafter were treated to the spectacle of the town's favorite boxer trotting along the streets with Friend Sister tagging gamely at his heels.

At first little Miss Saylor, then about 14 years old, enjoyed the jaunts, but soon the effort became monotonous. She often tried to dodge the assignment she had wished on herself. But Milburn refused to let her hedge on her promise. Every morning about 6 o'clock big brother would awaken his family favorite, and, willy-nilly, she would have to start out with him on his training tour.

Friend Sister was not equal to the long runs prescribed by Saylor's manager, but he overcame that difficulty easily. Whenever the girl grew too weary to continue Milburn would plant her in a quiet spot along the route he had chosen and team up with her again on the way back to town.

There is a story concerning one of these brother-sister jaunts which is worth repeating, though it hath a strangely familiar ring. Once Milburn was matched for a tough fight in the heat of summer. His manager insisted he get into the proverbial pink for the encounter, and instructed Saylor to see how much road work he could crowd into a couple of weeks.

Saylor started bravely enough, but the heat soon robbed him of his energy. He and Friend Sis would get a little way out of town, then rest in comfort 'neath the friendly shade of a tree. Somehow Saylor's manager got wind of the fact that his fighter was not working any too hard, and he placed a spy on the job. One of Milburn's friends heard of the trick, however, and informed the fighter that he was to be watched on a certain day.

Saylor started as usual on the day chosen for the investigation. He and sister trotted till they thought they were safe from observation, then slowed down to an easy walk. A little stream lay along their route, and when they reached it both soaked their faces with cool water and splattered some more aqua pura about their persons to give the appearance of perspiration. They sat down, enjoyed half an hour's rest in the shade, and after another dose of water, widely distributed, they started back to town.

At a turn in the road Milburn spotted the man he knew had been chosen to spy on him. Fighter and sister hit up a trot, and when they reached the other party they halted for a few minutes' conversation. From their appearance one would have gathered that they had been traveling at top speed for an hour or more, and the spy was satisfied the reports of Saylor's lax training were all bunk. He so reported to Saylor's managers, and the investigation ended there.

GOTCH WELL, SAYS CURLEY; JOINS CIRCUS THURSDAY.

Des Moines, Ia., May 6.—Fresh from a visit with Frank Gotch at his Humboldt home, Jack Curley, wrestling promoter, says the stories of Gotch being sick and out of the game are all bosh.

"Gotch will rejoin the circus at Fort Dodge Thursday and appear at Des Moines on May 15, as scheduled. He has lost a little weight because of ptomaine poisoning in California some time ago, but has recovered.

"When Gotch gets to Omaha the time will be ripe to post a forfeit for a match with Joe Stecher. The Nebraskan is a boy wonder and has everybody scared except Gotch. I think Gotch can throw him."

GAINS LEG ON SHOOT CUP.

W. P. Northcott got 97 breaks out of 100 and won a leg on the Chicago Yacht club trophy at the C. Y. C. traps yesterday afternoon. Three others tied the score of 97. U. J. Hermann missed only one bird in the fifty target shoot, his nearest rivals being two behind his total of 49. High scores:

CHICK EVANS' TIP!

"New Way of Putting" Proves to Refer to Shoes, Not Golf.

A PERSON bearing a strong resemblance to Charles Evans Jr., western amateur golf champion, jumped hurriedly from the seat of a north-bound Cottage Grove avenue car as it neared Twenty-sixth street. He pressed the button and stepped quickly from the car. Excitement was written on his face as he retraced his steps half way down the block to a store on the window of which was painted in red letters "New Way of Putting." These were the magic words that had caught his eye as the car sped by. Henry Stanley was excited when he neared the source of the Nile, but hardly more so than the anxious golfer in search of his "open sesame" to the art of putting. Coming close to the sign, he found to his chagrin that there was more to it than he thought, as under the top line in smaller type were the words, "on half soles."

SEVENTH STRAIGHT GAME TO DOWNERS GROVE TEAM.

Downer's Grove High annexed its seventh straight victory, defeating Naperville High on the victors' field, 11 to 0. Jorgensen was a complete puzzle, holding the visitors to two hits. Although batted hard, Schneller kept most of the eleven hits scattered, ten errors accounting for seven runs. Score:

WHIST QUERY

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—In a game of auction pinochle, when trumps is led, the next player must go over it. Is this also true if another card is led? Must the next player go over it, or can he play any card of the same color? M. S.

Ans.—In auction pinochle one must always play a higher trump than the one preceding, if possible. He must always trump when he has none of the suit led. When a suit other than trump is led and a player has cards of that suit he must go over the preceding cards, according to the rules of the United States Playing Card company. But according to A. F. George of New York, whose book I consider the best authority on auction pinochle, he is not obliged to play a higher card in the case last mentioned.

By Doctor Neal's Scientific Methods

The secret of the great international success of the modern "Neal Way" is that it DOES MORE for the Drink user in from three to seven days or the Drug user in from seven to fourteen days by the use of harmless vegetable medicines taken by MOUTH ONLY than can be done by the "Old Way" in several WEEKS OR MONTHS. It is more "economical" in both time and money to get a PERMANENT CURE by the modern "Neal Way" than the TEMPORARY effect of frequent trips to mineral springs and "BATHS."

Those who have expressed their preference for Oldsmobiles in the past 17 years have been people whose tastes impelled them to seek a car of above the common level of motor car merit. So the fact that the demand for Oldsmobile Light Eights has now well-nigh reached our production limit is substantial appreciation of Oldsmobile supremacy in point of beauty—construction—motor simplicity—luxury—performance.

GOLF SALESMAN NOT AN AMATEUR BY U. S. G. A. RULE

President Woodward Replies to Queries Asking Status of Store Employes.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

Taking up the cudgel on behalf of employés of sporting goods houses hit by the last ruling of the United States Golf association, G. M. Donnally, manager of the mail order department of the Golf Shop, has obtained two opinions from President Frank Woodward.

In the first of these the head of the U. S. G. A. states that every agent or employé who handles golf supplies must give up his standing as an amateur, and that the owner of a sporting goods house does not become a professional unless he uses his skill in the game as a means of promoting his business. In his second letter Woodward says that the fact of an employé holding stock in the concern in which he is employed would not alter the case.

Wants to Join Local Club.

Donnally, like a number of other men in similar positions, has no desire to compete in a national championship, because he does not rank in that class. He does, however, want to join a club and compete in its events.

Before making application to join a Chicago club, he submitted his case to Crafts W. Higgins, assistant secretary of the Western Golf association, and was informed that the W. G. A. rules had not been altered and that Donnally and men in similar positions are eligible to compete as amateurs in events given by W. G. A. clubs.

Chance for Factional Rumpus.

This brings about a situation similar to that of the Woodland club of Boston, of which Francis Ouimet is a member. The club, so far, appears disinclined to rate the former champion as a professional, and this may bring a clash with the U. S. G. A. Many of the clubs in the W. G. A. are members of the U. S. G. A. If the western clubs permit men to compete in theeir tournaments who have been barred by the national body, the setting is furnished for a big factional battle.

In an editorial in the current number of Golfer's Magazine, Crafts Higgins asserts the Western Golf association is a sovereign body and makes its own rules.

No Change in Status.

Mr. Donnally then wrote asking the position of a stockholder in a sporting goods establishment and received the following reply:

I am sorry not to have been able sooner to reply to your inquiry regarding the effect upon your amateur status of the fact that you are a stockholder in the Golf Shop.

I understand from your former letter that you are holding a position as "employé that includes as part of its duties the handing of golf supplies." If this is true you would violate the amateur rule of the U. S. G. A., and the fact that you are a stockholder does not seem to me to change the situation. If there are any facts connected with your case of which I am not advised, please forward me the information promptly.

I do not want to be unfair or to pass judgment upon incomplete knowledge, but as at present advised it seems to me you and all your salaried associates in the Golf Shop are ineligible to compete as amateur golfers.

H. A. M. Staley carried off the honors at La Grange by registering a card of 166—83—74. Second honors went to S. P. Griffiths with a card of 83—6—77, while A. R. Johnston finished a close third, 90—12—78.

POLO practice was inaugurated yesterday at Speedway Park's new polo field and the twenty-two ponies delivered last Thursday were given a hard day's work by members of the team that will represent the west side club during the coming season.

In practice, the players had first chance to test the new field, which, although a little soft in places, was fast enough to give a good afternoon's exercise. The field is located in the infield in front of the north end of the huge grandstands that bank the speedway on the homestretch.

The first match will be played May 20, the date of the Western nonprofessional championship races, when the Speedway Park club team will meet the First Cavalry, I. N. G., previous to the calling of the first preliminary heats.

Those who took part in the practice yesterday included: C. D. Lancaster, Eugene Beifeld, Fred Ruehl, James E. Dillon, Frank Bering, Frank Hayes, Harold Henderson, Louis Henoch, Capt. F. R. Schwengel, Capt. A. F. McEvers, and Leo Stein.

BY OTTO A. ENGEL.

Deerfield upset Proviso, 13 to 9, in a preluncheon game at Highland Park yesterday. What appeared to be a comfortable lead, due to eight runs in the fourth, was wiped out by Deerfield's seven run rally in the sixth round. Seven bingles, one a double, and two walks gave the visitors their eight counters. Five hits, two of them doubles; two walks, and three errors put Deerfield in the lead in the sixth. Neff was batted off the slab by the Maywood team in the fourth, hiked out to right field, then resumed slabbing in the sixth and held Proviso runless. Score:

SPRINGTIME and LOVE

Painted by Francesco Paola Michetti

BY LOUISE JAMES BARGELT.

A DESOLATE promontory is in a blue sea and on it are troops of joy mad Cupids, riotously frollicking about a hawthorne bush in full bloom, abandoning themselves in revelry to the spirit of spring. And the color of it all! Gleaming vividly with its splashes of greens and pinks and yellows and blues, magically softened by the sunlight of Italy, it suffuses an actual exhilaration, it catches at your breath the way glorious coloring always does.

It is a picture of Italy, but it reflects indescribably the pleasure of a world and the joys in one's own heart. You sense in an instant your most wonderful days. You sound your own capacity for joy, you measure the depths and breadth of your emotions. You live again in the past and you dream again your dreams for the future. All the pleasures you have had and all that you are going to have seem caught in some wizard-like way in the spirit of the painting.

With Michetti a love for colors amounts to a passion, for he was born with the sunshine of Italy in his soul. Recklessly he has blended the natural with the ideal and the result is an exquisite, harmonious whole. Ever so slightly, too, he has softened his painting with the vaguest effect of mist, that mist to which countries with humid atmosphere owe their rare beauty of coloring, and those that lack it, while they may be brilliant, strong, magnificent even, are without the appeal of subtle tenderness. It is this mellowness which makes the coloring of Italy more wonderful even than that of the vaunted orient. A vague mist may catch a beam of light and pierce it ever so slightly and the sky is no longer defiantly blue nor the grasses unbrokenly green nor the sea's blue so flauntingly blue. For indefinably the vaporous air has tinted them all with a touch of pearl effecting an almost magical iridescence.

Special attention to the Cupids will reveal elaborate care in their painting. They are almost miniature in effect, superbly delicate. Like tiny Japanese, like Grecian figures in terra cotta, they gambol about as gracefully as Neapolitan street boys, and if one could hear the music of their voices it would be no less beautiful surely than the loved Neapolitan street song of modern favor.

Albert A. Munger presented this painting to the Art institute in 1898, a number of years after its completion. Not half a century before Francesco Paolo Michetti was born at Tocco da Cassauria in the Abruzzi country near Naples, Italy. It was the year 1851 and he was the son of a day laborer. A wealthy man took a keen interest in him when he was still a young boy and encouraged him in his ambitions. This man made it possible for him to study not only at the academy in Naples but in London and Paris as well. When still a comparatively young man, however, he went back to his adored southern Italy and gave himself up to the painting of his wild, appealing pictures. He has been described by Muther as a "man of magnificent talent, astonishing dexterity, and marvelous regard for values."

Another famous painting will be reproduced next week.

The OLLIVANT ORPHANS

Ann takes charge.

By INEZ HAYNES GILLMORE

This is the third of a series of stories by Inez Haynes Gillmore, the famous short story writer, dealing with the adventures, trjals, and joys of the "Ollivant Orphans," which will appear every Sunday in The Sunday Tribune. Each installment will be complete in itself, although the series of stories as a whole will make a delightful novel. You will find the Ollivant Orphans good company, and the author's facile style and apt character delineation will make you remember the stories as among the best works of fiction you have read.

CHAPTER III.

"IF there's anything in this world that I hate, it's housework. There isn't one single thing about it that I like—except ironing pretty things and making desserts and salads. Washing I detest, sweeping I despise, dusting I abominate, doing dishes I loathe, and as for getting up as early as this I—just as soon as I'm 21, I'm going on the stage."

This was the end of a long matutinal harangue from Ann. Now she stopped an instant, but it was obviously only to catch her breath. She sat in one of the kitchen chairs, tilted back against the wall, her big hands clasped behind her head, one foot under her, and the other swinging a shabby buckled shoe from its tip. She wore a little kimono of dimity, delicately figured and lace edged, a boudoir cap of a coarse meshed imitation Cluny trimmed with pink ribbons. The kimono showed a V of velvet neck; the cap unloosed great, rich scallops of shining hair.

It was cheerless within and without. The fire had begun to crackle, but the little kitchen had not warmed up yet. The frosty window panes gave fore-shortened, wabbly glimpses of a back yard swathed in snow and dotted with shapeless bushes. Last night's dishes were heaped in the sink. A big pot of something green and odorous was beginning to stew on the stove. Lines of high, green glass jars stood on the table. Beckie—a long sleeved apron concealing all but the hem of her blue serge dress—pattered from sink to stove and from stove to table. Lainey stood irresolutely about, managing only in every effort to efface herself to get in somebody's way.

"I can't think who could have been such an idiot as to put in so much salt," Lainey remarked, obviously turning the subject.

"It must have been you, Ann," said Beckie, without turning. "I salted it once myself and I salted it according to rule."

"I didn't," Ann contradicted her sister instantly.

Beckie's back became rigid. "You must have," she said in a stony voice.

"I know I didn't," Ann asseverated.

"Probably I did it," Lainey said with obvious pacific intent; "you know what an idiot I am."

"You!" said Ann contemptuously, "as if we'd let you go near anything that was cooking. I don't care who did it; I know I didn't. And whoever it was," she cast a defiant glance at Beckie's granite profile, "I don't thank her for it. Having to get up at 5 o'clock in the morning to boil piccalilli over—on Saturday morning, too, when I ought to be allowed to sleep late."

She paused and gazed at Beckie's back. That back was noveless, although Beckie's hand moved swiftly, stirring the pot. Beckie did not speak.

"It's out of the question," Ann went on, "our trying to have such things—jellies and preserves and picalilli and chili sauce. It's altogether too hard work and it all falls on us girls. And who eats them? The boys! Faster almost than we can make them. And would they lift a finger to help us? Not in a hundred years."

Again she defied Beckie's unyielding back. Beckie's hand had stopped stirring. She was so still, she seemed not even to breathe.

"As for me," Ann continued, "I'd rather go without than work like this to have them. I——"

"Lainey," Beckie interrupted suddenly, "open the door!" Her voice was without expression, but her words came like stones hurled from a sling.

Lainey obeyed her.

Beckie lifted the big kettle from the stove, staggered with it across the kitchen, through the woodshed to the yard. The two girls froze where they stood, watching her in a growing panic. Beckie struck the cover from the garbage pail, lifted the kettle, poured the contents into it. "When you want any more piccalilli," she said, returning, "make it yourself." She marched into the dining room, seated herself by the fire, took up the morning paper.

For a moment, Lainey and Ann stared at each other terrified. Then, moving on tiptoe and handling pots and pans as though they were muffled in cotton-wool, they began noiselessly and speechlessly to prepare breakfast. They halved oranges, cooked oatmeal, fried eggs and bacon; but during the process they did not speak a word.

Ed was the first of the brothers to appear. Handsome, elegant, immaculate, he might have come from the hands of a valet. "I wish one of you girls would darn my stockings," he began. "I put on the only whole pair I had left last night."

"Oh, Ed," Lainey said remorsefully, helping Ann to bring in the breakfast. "That's too bad. We've been so busy lately with picca——" She cut this word off with a frightened snap of her jaw and an involuntary glance of terror in Beckie's direction. "Ann and I will darn them all tonight."

"Also I wish you'd go through my underwear," Ed continued, "and put the buttons on. As a button remover, that laundry is a wonder."

The four Ollivants drew up to the table. Ed took up the paper that Beckie threw down. They ate their fruit in silence.

"Talk about crab apples. I should call these crab oranges, from the size," Ed remarked.

Nobody answered.

"Ah, the familiar burnt taste!" he continued, tasting the oatmeal to which Lainey helped him. "Why do you girls bother to cook any oatmeal if you can't cook it right?"

Again nobody answered.

"'Then silence like a poultice came,'" Ed was beginning, when, "Hello, Matt, been pulled lately?" he interrupted himself to greet his brother.

"No," Matt answered lightly "Wednesday is my day for getting pinched." Matt had arisen in his customary spirits. The thatch of his red hair glittered like a sun and the blue of his eyes shone like a sea; he whistled as he helped himself to the glazed bacon and the petrified eggs. He took up the paper when Ed rejected it, turned at once to the comic section, began to laugh at the first picture, nearly rolled out of his seat before he finished the series.

"Matt," Ann began in exasperation "how can you laugh like that so early in the morning——"

"Oh, say, girls," Matt exclaimed, ignoring Ann, "I met Lorry Mack on the street yesterday. He's in town from Worcester. Can I invite him here to spend Sunday with me?"

Beckie came suddenly to life. "No!" she exploded, "you can't. I'm tired enough working all the week long for this ungrateful family without slaving all day Sunday for strangers."

"All right," said Matt equably. "You don't have to get red-headed about it. I do wish I had some place I could take a fellow to," he added impatiently. "Well, we'll have to go off somewhere together."

Presently Beckie arose, jerked on her little square squat, unbecoming jacket, her little round, flat, unbecoming hat, said nothing, and vanished. Ed arose drew leisurely onto his tall, graceful figure his smart ulster and his correct hat, dropped a careless "Good-by, sisters!" and disappeared. Matt arose, telescoped his jaunty body with a large checked raglan, tossed his plush Alpine hat into the air, caught it dexterously on his head, called, "Or revolver, girls," and departed whistling. Lainey arose, pulled herself into her baggy, mangy fur coat and her stiff felt hat.

"I'll be back from that meeting just as soon as I can, Ann," she said, her voice still low and her eyes still frightened. "It was mean of them to put it on Saturday morning—I don't care if Monday is a holiday." She shut the door softly.

For a long time Ann sat at the table. She did not move. Her eyes were fixed on a spot in the frosted pane.

"Say, Ann! Ann! What time is it?" a voice called from upstairs.

Ann started. "Nine o'clock!" she answered, glancing at the clock.

"If I'd known it was early as that I'd slept two hours more," the voice continued. Roland Ollivant lounged down the stairs and came into the dining room. His eyes were swollen, his complexion mottled from too much sleep.

He examined the table, walked out into the kitchen, returned to the dining room. Still Ann did not speak or move.

"Say, Ann," Roland asked in a sulky tone, "aren't you going to get me any breakfast? There's only two eggs left."

"No," declared Ann airily, "I'm not. Besides, two eggs are enough."

"Not for me," Roland said.

"Then you'll have to go hungry," Ann announced sweetly. "I'm not the cook for this family"

"Who said you were?" Roland asked in a furious voice.

"Nobody," Ann stated. She added with a soft nonchalance, "Nobody would dare, I guess. I'm just stating my position."

"Well, lucky for us you aren't the cook," Roland remarked with the heavy handed sarcasm of boyhood, "putting most a bag of salt in the piccalilli."

For the effect of this remark, Roland might have thrown a stick of dynamite on the fire. "I didn't do any such thing," Ann said, "and you know it. If you——"

"Yes, you did too," Roland retorted, seating himself at the table. "I saw you. Last night while Beckie was out here in the dining room."

A frightened expression ran across Ann's face—the look of consternation with which one suddenly remembers a compromising fact. For an instant, her mouth opened wide. Then, "If ever you say the words salt or piccalilli again in my presence," she burst out, "I'll run away from this family and—and—and—go on the stage and be a chorus girl."

"Humph," grunted Roland, "swell chance you'd have on the stage! You with ankles like bologna sausages!"

"Roland Ollivant, you—liar!" Ann whispered this accusation. Involuntarily she pulled up her skirt and surveyed the trim ankle it revealed. Reassurance, however, brought only a more violent rage. "I shall never speak to you again as long as I live."

Ann flashed out of the dining room—slammed the door, flashed into the kitchen—slammed the door. She fell on the dishes heaped in the sink as upon an invading army, neither paused nor stopped until she had ranged them, clean and shining, on the kitchen table. From the sink, she transferred her rage to the pantry. She took everything off the shelves, washed them, rearranged the dishes and groceries. From the pantry, she moved to the stove; she shoveled out the ashes, blacked it, polished it until it made the dull old mirror hanging over the sink look like a square of black cambric.

In the meantime, Roland had set himself seriously to the business of breakfasting. He ate an orange, devoured what was left of the oatmeal, finished what remained of the bacon and eggs, rummaged in the black walnut sideboard, found and devoured two bananas, split and blackened, found and devoured a bag of lady fingers broken and stale. Perceptibly his spirits arose during this toothsome process. He was whistling when he went downstairs to the cellar. He attacked the woodpile with an alacrity that he rarely brought to it. Standing between a mountain of ashes and a rapidly growing heap of kindling, he chopped and chopped, varying his shrill whistling with bass singing and his bass singing with tenor yodeling.

"Will you kindly permit me to pass?" an icy voice demanded suddenly.

Roland turned. Ann stood close, an empty coalhod in each hand.

"I thought you weren't going to speak to me again as long as you lived," Roland gibed.

This was a fatal reminder.

The sparks that all the morning had been flashing intermittently in Ann's eyes burst into tiny sheets of flame. A deep rose colored flush hanging behind her white skin burst through, made a purple red mask of her face. Her lips snapped into two rigid lines. Involuntarily she dropped the coalhods. Her shoulders squared. Her arms came up to position. Above the elbow they began to bulge with muscle; below the elbow they merged with hard, strong looking fists. She glared at her brother.

And then suddenly, even as her fist shot forward, Ann's face changed. A look of uncertainty extinguished the tiny sheets of flame in her eyes. A look of perplexity loosened the rigid vise of her lips. Her fists fell to her sides, unclasped. An instant, she swayed irresolutely; then she turned on her heel, made in the direction of the stairway.

Roland watched her, stupefied.

On her way out, Ann passed the preserve closet. She paused in front of the door, an amateur affair of thin boards, hanging from leather hinges. Here, it was as though another frenzy seized her, almost whirled her about. But she did not turn. Instead—suddenly her right arm swung with a powerful lunge straight from her shoulder to the door. It smashed the middle plank to splintery ruin. When she withdrew her hand, her knuckles ran blood.

But something had gone out of Ann.

She walked with her customary decision across the floor and up the stairs, but she moved in quiet and with dignity. She shut the cellar door noiselessly.

For an interval, Roland stared after his sister. His fists still held themselves up, but after a while they fell of their own weight. He walked over to the preserve closet, examined the smashed door with a look of mingled rage, surprise, pride, and admiration. Then he returned to his ax and went at the woodpile again. He did not stop until the last log had been chopped. He whistled; but he whistled low, through his teeth. And after he had finished with the wood, he attacked the mountain of ashes, transferred it by means of the coalhod to the row of empty ash barrels in the yard. When the last load had been removed, he filled the hods with coal, took them up to the kitchen. By this time he was whistling in his highest voice and at his greatest speed. He walked jauntily out of the house.

Ann went straight to her room, lay down on the still unmade bed. She lay there for a long time, her hands clasped under her head, her eyes staring at the ceiling.

Ann's father had been dead for ten years, her mother for three months. For the five years previous to her death, Mrs. Ollivant had been bedridden. The period of Mrs. Ollivant's sickness had not made for smooth sailing, as far as the housekeeping was concerned; now everything seemed topsy-turvy, helter-skelter, hit or miss. Beckie arose at 6 and prepared breakfast. Lainey and Ann did the dishes. Immediately the entire family scattered for the day, Ed, Matt, and Beckie to their work, Ann and Roland to high school, Lainey to her teaching. Ann and Lainey cooked the dinner, did the dishes again. The boys of course performed household chores. All day Sunday, the girls cleaned house, mended, and cooked; Beckie planned the program of the week's eating.

This was the way things went when the schedule worked perfectly.

But often the schedule did not work well and sometimes it did not work at all; for the Ollivants were young and had other interests. Beckie was constantly going out of town for a night. Lainey accepted occasional week-end invitations. Ann was subject to all the temptations that out of doors offered her 18 years and her tireless activity. Moreover, with nobody at home during the daytime, it was hard to keep the furnace going. Often, in spite of their care, they came back at night to a freezing house.

All this was the more depressing because there were traditions in the Ollivant family. Mr. Ollivant was able and magnetic, an extraordinary combination of character and personality. Mrs. Ollivant was beautiful, original, high spirited, vivacious. They were dowered almost equally with the social gift.

Perhaps visions of the family splendor—she must often have heard it discussed—passed through Ann's mind. Sometimes she smiled, but oftener her lips quivered. Once two big round tears rolled down her velvety cheek, splashed unchecked onto the pillow.

After a long while, Ann arose. Moving slowly, and stopping to study every room, she made a tour of the house, starting at the top. The attic was a mere lumber room, lying obscured under the dust and cobwebs of years. What there was in it—because of its crowded condition—it was almost impossible to see. On the third floor were two big bedrooms, formerly the nurseries. Ed and Matt shared one, Roland occupied the other. All the rundown, broken, lamed household furniture had accumulated in the boys' rooms as if in protest against their wrongs. Here, in addition, was every evidence of the careless housekeeping inevitable to the Ollivants' present haphazard system. The walls clamored to be repapered, the ceilings to be replastered, the wood to be repainted.

On the next floor were four rooms: Beckie's big chamber, a hall bedroom, the one that Lainey shared with Ann, an unfinished garret running over the kitchen. On the lower floor were parlor, dining room, kitchen. As Ann descended the aspect became more fair. The girls' rooms showed the inevitable feminine effort towards decoration. The living room was at least comfortable, though shabby, the kitchen invitingly warm and neat. The dining room alone seemed shabby and stark; it had something of the bare coldness of an institution hall.

Her leisurely tour of inspection finished, Ann fell to work with the suddenness of a cyclone. She went over all the floors with a carpet sweeper, dusted, made the beds, rearranged much of the furniture. Until she reached the dining room, her efforts were mainly in the line of conservation; there it amounted almost to revolution. She removed all the table utilities from the black walnut sideboard, covered its mortuary marble slab with an embroidered guest towel, stood up some bright colored plates and platters against its back, polished the silver cake basket and the silver water pitcher.

Then she attacked the table.

Halfway through the process of setting the table, another series of iconoclastic ideas struck her. She took all the silver into the kitchen, polished it. She gathered all the drinking glasses, washed them a second time, rubbing them until they were almost as clear as the air itself.

By this time it was 1 o'clock.

Immediately after lunch—she ate it with a look of resolution crystallizing on her face—she went upstairs, a silver table knife in her hand. She reached up to the top shelf of her closet, brought down a little iron bank, shaped like an apple and painted red. Half an hour's work with the knife, and she had removed the last coin from its interior; eighty-nine pennies, one 50 cent piece, two quarters, three dimes, a nickel, and a Canadian piece. With this money clutched in her hand, she visited the corner grocery. She returned in a few moments followed by a grocery boy loaded with cans of tomatoes.

Two hours later, she was hauling down from the top shelf of the closet the tall green glass jars which five hours before she had so neatly piled there.

"Oh, don't you look sweet!" Lainey exclaimed when she got home at half past 5 that night. "I'm going right upstairs and dress up too."

Ann wore one of her summer muslins, exquisitely laundered, a broad rose colored velvet ribbon tied about her hair.

"I want you to dress up, Lainey," Ann said, "for a particular reason. I've been fixing up the house today and everything looks so nice."

"What's the matter with your hand?" Lainey asked.

"Oh, nothing," Ann answered carelessly. "I bruised it in the cellar. I've been working like a Trojan all day long."

"I should say you had been working," Lainey said a half an hour later. "Doesn't our room look clean—and a fire in the parlor. And, oh, Ann, this dining room is simply swell with the bare table and the sideboard fixed up. And I love it with the folding doors open that way. Let's always eat with them open—it seems so sort of spacious and opulent. It makes me feel as if I was being entertained by royalty."

"Well, we will—when we have a fire," Ann conceded.

Lainey stopped transfixed at the kitchen door. "Who made that chili sauce?" she demanded. "Ann Ollivant, you didn't do it all alone by yourself?"

"Yes, I did," Ann said, her eyes dancing. "I looked up the recipe in Mrs. Farmer's and I bought the tomatoes with my own money. It's a surprise for Beck. We'll have some of it with the beans. I've got a salad and I made a floating island for dessert—Roly is so crazy about it. And, Lainey, I'm going to serve the things in courses tonight. I want you to help me."

"Here, Ann," Beckie said a few moments later. "I bought you some silk stockings today. I heard you say the other day that you wanted a pair." She tossed the little white tissue bundle into her sister's lap without looking at her.

"Oh, Beck!" Ann bubbled ecstatically, "green ones! You angel! I've been simply crazy for a pair. I was saving up for a maline ruff or I'd have bought them myself. And, Beckie, I did put the salt in the piccalilli and I'm awfully sorry I was so horrid this morning. I didn't remember it until Roly told me just when—— But let me show you what I've been doing all day."

"My undying gratitude to whoever washed my brush and comb," said Ed, when they sat down to dinner, and "Say, who's been sprucing up our room?"

"I did." Ann's tone was meek, but her eyes were more than ever like rocking crescent moons.

"For the love of Mike," Matt exclaimed, seizing the dish that Lainey placed on the table, "chili sauce! I'm for that!"

"Why don't you put all four paws in the trough? You can get it quicker that way," Ed cut in.

"Roly is going to have what's left in the dish," said Ann sweetly. "Here it is, Roly. And now," she went on in a stately tone, "when you have finished, I want you all to gather in the parlor. I have something very important to say to you."

"Now, Ann," Ed asked later, clipping the end of his cigar, "what's that proposition you were going to put to us? We're ready to hear it. Fire away!"

"Well," she said, "it's this. After you'd all gone this morning, I went through this house from top to bottom into every nook and cranny and hole and corner and closet, from the attic to the cellar. I tried to look at it as if I was a stranger, and I came to the conclusion it was the dustiest, coldest, bleakest, most unhome-like place I ever saw in my life."

"Right so far," agreed Ed, lighting his cigar. "Go on!"

"Then I laid down—lay down, I mean—on my bed and tried to think why it was so and if it had to be so and if there wasn't some way that it could be different. I thought for a long time before the answer came to me. But when it did come to me, I knew I was right." Ann paused.

"What's the answer, Ann?" Ed asked.

"It's for me to leave school and run the house," Ann threw at them.

Every Ollivant started and all of them, except Roland, protested by word or look or gesture.

"Can't be done," decided Ed.

"Why, Ann," added Beckie, "I couldn't hear of such a thing. You'll graduate next year and I want you to finish your high school course. We've all had high school educations at least, although it would break poor father's heart if he had thought that was all we were going to get."

"I knew this was what you'd say," Ann went on cheerfully. "But it doesn't change me," she continued inflexibly. "I know I'm right and I'm going to prove it to you. In the first place, I hate school. I never did enjoy studying and I loathe all my teachers. They are the kind of people I simply can't stand—so old and frumpy and behind the times. And Mr. Osborne——"

"Well, Ann," Ed interposed mildly, "if you think a man's qualifications for teaching depend——"

"I know what you're going to say, Ed Ollivant," Ann interrupted, "and you needn't say it. I've heard it all and it never has convinced me and never will. 'Clothes do not make the man,' 'It's not what people do but what they are,' 'A man's a man for a' that,' 'Kind hearts are more than coronets,' and all that old stuff. People make a hit with me by the way they look and dress and how up to date they are."

"Why, Ann, I never listened to such a——" But it was obvious that Ed was out of breath, words, argument.

"What's more to the point, my reports are getting worse and worse," Ann went on still cheerfully. "And I don't care. I hate that school, I hate the studies, and I hate the teachers. Miss Merrick warned me the other day that if I didn't improve I would not pass into the senior class. I won't improve, I can tell you that, for I don't want to get into the senior class; nobody can open my skull and put things in it, so you might just as well let me leave school now. One reason why I had such a fierce grouch this morning at breakfast was because I had a row with that old cut of a Miss Norton yesterday. Gee, if I could only go up to school Monday and tell her I'm leaving for good, she'd get a fierce sourball herself, just to think she wouldn't have me to blame for everything."

"Cut out the muckraking, Ann, and get down to cases," Ed commanded. "What's your plan?"

"Well," Ann went on eagerly, quieting at once. "I plan to run the house and to do all the cooking. It's too much for Beckie to get up at 6 o'clock every morning and then work all day. She's tired out now and I don't know what she'll be before spring. And then there's a lot of waste, this way. I think I can save enough out of the household money for you to pay me what you'd pay a maid."

"Is that all?" Ed asked sardonically.

"No. I thought out a whole lot more. And I've come to the conclusion that this house ought to be fixed up. It looks like the very old scratch and I'm ashamed every time a stranger comes in. Of course what I'd like to do is to make it swell and highbrow like Mrs. Damon's place—gold paper, Japanese prints, and Japanese bric-à-brac. I know we can't afford anything like that. But we can do loads of things to it that won't cost so very much, especially if we do them gradually. I'd like to get some new furniture in green wicker, some Navajo rugs, and loads of copper and brass. For instance, the dining room ought to be repapered in something new and light and modern. I want to get rid of that fierce old ark of a black walnut sideboard and have shelves painted white put up in its place. Then gradually, taking the rooms one at a time, I want to fix them up in colors—a pink room for me, a blue room for Lainey, a red room for Beckie, and blue and green rooms for the boys. I think you boys ought to pay for any changes in your own rooms—all except Roly, of course. He isn't earning money."

"Well," Beckie broke in, "I agree with all you're saying now, Ann. I was thinking, after I got to work today, how Matt couldn't bring Lory Mack here over Sunday because we had no place to entertain him. And I've decided that it's a pity to use that great elegant room of mine for a bedroom—just think, it's as big as the parlor! I'm going to fix it all over for a sort of a den where the boys can take their company and when they don't want us girls around. Then, I thought I'd go into the little garret over the kitchen."

"No, Beckie, you shan't," Lainey burst in, her eyes flaming blue with excitement; "I tell you what you do, You take our room and Ann and I will go into the attic. I'd love it; Ann, wouldn't you?"

"Lainey, it would be great!" exclaimed Ann. For an instant she lost interest in her major thesis. "We can make it sort of bohemian or like a studio—unframed things tacked up on the wall. And really, being over the kitchen, it's the warmest room in the house."

"Then," Beckie went on, "I'm going to give Matt Roly's room, so that Ed can have a room to himself. And Roly can come down into the little hall bedroom next to my room. You'd like that, wouldn't you?"

"Sure Mike!" answered Roly. "I'd rather be downstairs. It's warmer."

"Only," Beckie said, "I'm afraid, boys, that den won't be so very pretty, because we haven't any nice furniture."

"Well," remarked Ann, "one thing I'm going to do some day is to go through the attic and see if there isn't something up there that we can use."

"Ann," exclaimed Lainey, still shiny-eyed, "won't we have fun fixing up our garret? Right away I can think of a whole lot of things we can do."

"We'll call it the studio," Ann said. "And remember, all of you, to call the 'parlor' the 'living room'—nobody says parlor nowadays. After this, you'll come home to a warm house every night—I don't intend to let the furnace fire go out. There'll be a fire in the parlor, too—I mean living room. And, also, we're going to have a course dinner every night—Lainey and I are going to manage that. But, listen, I don't care what you say, I'm not going back to school Monday. I've quit for good."

Beckie's brow wrinkled and Ed's brow creased, but beyond Ed's evasive, "Well, we'll see about that!" nobody offered remonstrance.

But undoubtedly Ann felt her triumph surging in the atmosphere. Her eyes widened until they seemed like patches of gold inlaid on her white skin. Her teeth made silver glitter in her wide red mouth.

"Well," she said briskly to her sisters later when they trooped upstairs together, "there's one thing I've made up my mind to. If there's anything in this world I love, it's housework. I adore to sweep and I'm wild about dusting; I'm crazy about arranging things and I'm mad about setting a table. Some people haven't the slightest knack that way—but it seems as if it was just born in me. I'm domestic by nature, I guess."

Right off the Reel — By Mae Tinee

What We Are Trying to Do.

By Rupert Hughes, Author of "Gloria's Romance".

THE best that the motion pictures have achieved is mighty good. To deny this is to criticize yourself rather than the pictures; to substitute stubbornness for intelligence. The worst that the worst motion pictures have done is mighty bad. Yet it is no worse than the worst that has been done in the other arts. Nothing could be.

The cameramobile has opened long closed worlds of human life to expression; it has made possible the picturing of our existence in ways that never have been, never could have been seized and presented by any other art.

ADELAIDE HUGHES

In a few years the moving picture has passed through all the phases that older arts were centuries in passing through. It has had the advantage of their attainments and the help of science and immense popularity. Under the stimulus of occasional pieces of brilliant workmanship the audience has itself grown better and better, promoting itself every year to higher and higher demands, and offering a glorious opportunity for story tellers who wish to enlarge their resources and get constantly closer to real life.

The demand for genuine art, craftsmanship, imagination, observation, drama, comedy, literature is being supplied more and more honorably. In the shorter forms the one reel, two reel, five reel pictures and the feature films that occupy a whole evening, some of the creators have accomplished splendid things that would adorn any art.

There is a general feeling that the serials have not done their opportunities full justice. The difficulties and anxieties are great, and there is a natural temptation to feel that in a continued story the interest can be held only by piling crimes on mysteries and mysteries on crimes. As a matter of fact, there is nothing that tires people quicker than an overdose of excitement. Too many killings are more wearisome than none at all. The European war has proven this.

Some of the directors seem to be convinced that when a picture begins to drag the only way to enliven it is to push a motor off a cliff or make the villain a little more devilish than before. As a matter of fact, the moment any story begins to drag the surest way to get the audience back is to get back to where the audience is—on the solid ground of humanity.

With a few exceptions the serials that have been offered to us thus far have been largely made up of mysteries that were too artificial to interest us long.

In such films incidents that could not conceivably occur happen to people who could not possibly exist. Grotesque gorillas of crime, who would be clubbed to death on sight by the first policeman, steal about the city streets unnoticed, take cabs without difficulty, enter millionaires' houses with ease and steal their daughters and their ducats. They fight ludicrous battles, put on and take off disguises that could deceive nobody, and make use of marvelous machines that science never heard of. They are everywhere and nowhere at the same time and never pause to explain how they get from one place to another.

The managers may like these concoctions, but the audiences seem to endure them because they must in order to get to see the next film. I have watched audiences of all sorts sit puzzled and annoyed by these impossibilities; they have laughed or yawned aloud at the scenes of most blood-curdling intent. The same audiences would sit up and respond with laughter, tears, and applause to a film in which real emotions were portrayed with a basis of human possibility.

Invitations to write such serials had been extended to me as to most other authors and glittering terms offered, but I was not interested.

When, however, an opportunity came to write a serial for Miss Billie Burke, the situation was different. She is not only a famous beauty but an actress of unusually thorough schooling, of magnetism, high spirit, and peculiarly human appeal. She has also an extraordinarily flexible pantomimic gift and what is known as "screen value" to a degree that might be called "screen genius."

With great enthusiasm I undertook the task in collaboration with my wife, who has been of greatest help to me in my other work. We have omitted the usual master criminals, the secret panels, and the ghoulish gangs. We have laid most of the scenes in an atmosphere of wealth and beauty, but we have tried to avoid the usual ridiculous millionaires of the film. Our heroine has adventures, and we hope that they will be interesting—we know that they are not impossible.

We have tried to carry a fascinating young girl of today through a succession of events that might happen to a young girl of her character. We have tried to show her character in all its moods and to make her motives and the motives of those about her human and convincing, and to play out the story in scenes that picture our life most charmingly and most vividly.

In this ambition we have been aided and guided with the utmost enthusiasm by the star herself, by the important and experienced people who are backing the enormous enterprise, by the gifted director, and by a splendid company.

We are sure that we have done nothing to be ashamed of. In fact, we have all taken sincere pride in building for the public a big, honest, beautiful, brilliant structure in which everybody concerned has done the best that he or she could do.

Yale Boss

THIS smiling gentleman is Yale Boss of the Edison company, aged 17. Young Mr. Boss has been in pictures for seven years. Previous to that he went to school, just like any other youngster. Then he traveled for a little while with "The Top o' the World" company, Mlle. Genee, and "Silver Star," playing juvenile leads. From his first appearance in pictures with the Biograph company he has been a favorite, for he is a clever actor and has a sense of humor that always "gets across." He has chestnut hair, brown eyes, weighs 125 pounds, and is of medium height. His hobbies are baseball, horseback riding, and swimming. The photoplays in which he thinks he has been best are "The Stolen Nickel" and "Red Chief." His favorite reading matter consists of books of fairy stories. Also, this enterprising young man has written scenarios—"A Spoiled Son," "The Dish Pan Ride," and others. He admits vurr frankly, however, that none has been accepted. Here's to him, and long may he wave!

AFRAID OF THE GENTLE WILD.

While directing, William Robert Daly of the Selig company becomes so imbued with the spirit of the emotions he desires his actors to portray he is entirely oblivious of his surroundings. In one of Selig's productions two of the players were supposed to make "goo goo eyes" at a young leopard while fondly stroking it. They were a little bit squeamish about doing it, but to show the players that the animal was perfectly tame Director Daly took it in his arms and began to pet it. Just then he was called away, and, thinking that "Bill," the animal trainer, was behind him, he said, without a backward glance: "Here, Bill, take the cat." But the arms in which he put the leopard were not those of Bill but belonged to a big Negro. He gave one look and then ran, upsetting on his way a dinner table laid for twelve. He jumped through a window, carrying part of the glass away with him, and when he got his second wind he gasped, "None of dem dear gentle wild animals in mine."

BOSWORTH HAS THE PUNCH.

Robert Leonard is going around with a black eye these days. No, girls, he wasn't in a fight, but this is how it happened. After a strenuous day at Universal City Hobart Bosworth and Robert Leonard decided a little handball would do them no harm, so they adjourned to the Los Angeles Athletic club. In a game of handball Bob Leonard ran after the ball on Mr. Bosworth's side of the court and Bosworth accidentally struck Mr. Leonard in the eye with his fist, knocking him out for five minutes. After Mr. Leonard recovered consciousness he said: "If I could only get as much punch in my stories as Hobart Bosworth has in his right hand I would never have to worry."

MAE TINEE'S MOVIE ANSWERS TO FANS

"ASK ME! ASK ME!"

A FAN: Do I not think that "Warren Kerrigan's melting brown eyes seem to slip out and embrace one"? Well, slipperly speaking, I have never thought of them in just that way. Personally, should "a pair of melting brown eyes ever slip out and attempt to embrace" me I think I would set a pace in sprinting that was never equaled nor ever to be equaled.

MOVIE FAN: Trouble! No trouble at all! Harold Lockwood is with the Metro company, Los Angeles, Cal.; Jack Kerrigan, Universal company, Universal City, Cal.; Bessie Barriscale and Owen Moore, Triangle, Los Angeles, Cal.; William Courtleigh, Equitable, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York, and Mary Fuller, Universal company, 1600 Broadway, New York. Awfully glad you enjoy the Right Off the Reel page.

CURIOUS: No, I don't make my own hats. I make my own answers, though. Y'wekkum.

CHARMION: Daniel Frohman is still in the land of the living. A letter addressed to him in care of the Lambs club, New York City, will reach him. Marguerite Clarke is a little over 4 feet tall. I answer no questions regarding religion. She's an American Y'wekkum.

EMMA K.: No, you are not asking too much, Emma. Mabel Trunelle is with the Edison company, 2826 Decatur avenue, Bedford Park, N. Y. William Hart is with the Triangle company, 71 West Twenty-third street, New York; so is Bessie Barriscale, and Jane Novak is with the Vitagraph company, East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y. You are very welcome.

GRAY EYES: No information about the actor in whom you are interested. Tho thorry.

ANXIOUS: I simply can't understand why it is it takes some people so long to "summon up courage" to write to me. Yimminy, I must give an awful impression. You mustn't think I am crouching for a spring as I sit on that couch. I am crouching on a spring, and it is a perfectly comfortable spring, too. Bryant Washburn is married; so, dear, fall out of love with him just as rapidly as you can, for he not only has a wife but a small son, and the two are the idols of his heart. You think you are pretty enough for him to like you? Well, that may be, but why don't you pick on a single man, Anxious? (Now, I suppose I have broken a woman's heart!)

MLLE. DISIREE: In "Marrying Money" Chester Barnett took the part of Theodore Vandervere. I don't understand the French you closed with, but I suppose it is all right. If it isn't, I'll see you later.

CIRCLE K.: I would not be at all surprised but that the operations you speak of might be incorporated in an educational film. Why don't you write to the Pathé Freres company, 1 Congress street, Jersey City Heights, N. J.? Tell them just what you have told me. It might be they would be glad to send a man out there to take the scenes. Arthur Hoops is with the Kleine company, 1476 Broadway, New York.

INQUISITIVE: Madeline and Marion Fairbanks, better known as the Thanhouser twins, are aged 14. Yes, Syd Chaplin is with the Mutual company, along with Charlie. Y'wekkum.

W. B. H.: Wallace Reid took the part of the soldier in "Carmen" with Miss Farrar. How old is Henry Walthall? Yes. If I ever told you that Theda Bara was French, Russian, and Italian you can just rest assured that I have it in the lady's own handwriting. Personally, I feel the reports that she is an Ohioan are true, but when any one tells you that they are French, Russian, and Italian in their own writing and worship incense and jade elephants it's hardly up to you to contradict them, is it, when you have it in their own handwriting in passionate ink?

LITTLE GIRL: You say that your "algebra is calling you?" Well, you skiddaddle along to school and forget all about that dear gray haired portly duck of a motion picture actor whom you think you are in love with. He is probably married and got seventeen children, all of whom are older than yourself.

TOOTSIE: Mary Pickford has no children. She has a little new niece, though, recently born to her sister, Lottie Pickford Rupp, whose name is Mary Pickford Rupp. How's that for news? Nell Craig, Edna Mayo, and Beverly Bayne are none of them supposed to be married. Richard Travers is not married now. I know nothing about the other man to whom you refer.

BILLIE: Blanche Sweet and Lillian Gish do not always play opposite the same people. The men who are given the leading parts with them are ones whom the directors think best qualified to take the various parts.

Rupert Brooke
England's Poet War Hero

The youthful English poet who enlisted and died on the Dardanelles expedition already has become almost a mythical figure, so radiant was his youth, so charming was his verse, and so romantic was his life and death. His poems have sold better than any other modern poet's.

By Inez Travers Cunningham.

LOOK upon the pictures of the young, immortal face of Rupert Brooke and know why Yeats called him the "most beautiful young man in England"; how our own poetess, Harriet Monroe, spoke of him as "Lyric Apollo." Add to this the imagining of his vivid and wondrous coloring; eyes unbelievably blue, brown hair burned golden from being hatless in the sun, the color spectacle of sparkling blood flowing close to healthy skin, tall, athletic grace, and, above all, that arrestive manner, that indefinable something that is personality. When the gods had so favored him it is small wonder that every living mortal he met, each within his own language and limitation, paid tribute to Rupert Brooke's charm irresistible.

Contemplate him so and then read his works, and see the curious analogy between this poet and his verse. He is the man who wrote himself. He is youth incarnate—joyous, tragic, pitiful, exquisite, breathless, resilient youth. There was between his beautiful body and his artistic soul that perfect response which is possible only to youth, and which, fused in Rupert Brooke, was the secret of his self-expression. Between his body and soul was that subtle harmony which made every physical sensation a spiritual adventure and every spiritual sensation need physical expression.

Every single object that Rupert Brooke saw was his concern. It was part of the universal beauty which he adored; he caressed it as would a lover a stray strand of his mistress' hair that chanced to be blown across his face. Objects brought up in his soul a spiritual procession—a beautiful company of thoughts and memories that trailed their garments through his days. This was because he was a poet, of course, but it was much more because he was a boy. These are the reasons that in the face of all arguments to the contrary, and the pathetic occurrence itself, no less, his death seems more appropriate than tragic. One cannot imagine Rupert Brooke with a whit less of glory without revulsion. His going could not have been else than the sudden stilling of music, the unexpected extinguishing of light, the vanishing of his own joyous smile. It is well that death, for him, was not decay but merely disappearance.

We see him in his college days, busy, inquiring, acquisitive of classical knowledge, joyous always, except when his poetic fancies are troubled by too much intellect, as later they were ruffled by too much philosophy. Then we see him wandering, a singing pilgrim, making all the earth his own.

Then in a day his world, his new, beautiful, springtime world, is made hideous by the call of war. And suddenly his world becomes just England—that narrow isle wide enough indeed to hold his heart and his allegiance. Suddenly, too, he becomes human, though no less young. Patriotism surged in him at floodtide. He wrote that England held for him a quality which he found in A—— and in a friend's honor and scarcely anywhere else—a quality which, if he had been sentimental enough, he'd have called "holiness." His astonishment grew as the full flood of "England" swept him on from thought to thought; he felt the triumphant helplessness of a lover.

Rupert Brooke obtained immediately a commission in the Hood battalion of the royal naval division, and was ordered to the relief of Antwerp. His joyous blue eyes looked into the white, scared faces of the refugees and upon the wounded and the dying. It was youth meeting death—wise youth, dumb youth, that, after this first meeting, feared death no longer. Then he was invalided and went back to England with a premonition of his coming doom.

Later he was sent to the Dardanelles, but he never reached his destination. Some day a legend may say that Apollo was jealous of his beauty and sent a fatal shaft upon him, so that Rupert Brooke died of sunstroke. But it will not be true. He defeated Apollo. It was Mars who struck him down. He recovered from the sunstroke and died of blood poisoning from a wound on board a French hospital ship at Scyros on Friday, April 23, of last year.

The poets of two continents came with tributes to his bier, but Rupert Brooke himself had written his most fitting epitaph:

O haven without wave or tide!
Silence in which all songs have died:
Holy book, where hearts are still!
And home at length under the hill!
O mother quiet, breasts of peace,
Where love itself would faint and cease!
O infinite deep I never knew,
I would come back, come back to you,
Find you as a pool unstirred,
Kneel down by you, and never a word,
Lay my head, and nothing said,
In your hands, ungarlanded;
And a long watch you would keep;
And I should sleep, and I should sleep!
Matalea, January, 1914.

THE SOLDIER.

If I should die, think only this of me:
That there's some corner of a foreign field
That is forever England. There shall be
In that rich earth a richer dust concealed;
A dust whom England bore, shaped, made aware,
Gave, once, her flowers to love, her ways to roam,
A body of England's, breathing English air,
Washed by the rivers, blessed by suns of home.
And think, this heart, all evil shed away,
A pulse in the eternal mind, no less
Gives somewhere back the thoughts by England given;
Her sights and sounds; dreams happy as her day;
And laughter, learned of friends; and gentleness,
In hearts at peace, under an English heaven.

Some other examples of his poetry are the following:

KINDLINESS.

When love has changed to kindliness—
O, love, our hungry lips that press
So tight that Time's an old god's dream
Nodding in heaven, and whisper stuff
Seven million years were not enough
To think on after, make it seem
Less than the breath of children playing,
A blasphemy scarce worth the saying,
A sorry jest. "When love has grown
To kindliness—to kindliness!" . . .
And yet—the best that either's known
Will change, and wither, and be less,
At last, than comfort, or its own
Remembrance. And when some caress
Tendered in habit (once a flame
All heaven sang out to) wakes the shame
Unworded, in the steady eyes
We'll have—that day, what shall we do?
Being so noble, kill the two Who've reached their second best? Being wise,
Break cleanly off, and get away,
Follow down other windier skies
New lures, alone? Or shall we stay,
Since this is all we've known, content
In the lean twilight of such day,
And not remember, not lament?
That time when all is over, and
Hand never flinches, brushing hand;
And blood lies quiet, for all you're near:
And it's but spoken words we hear,
Where trumpets sang; when the mere skies
Are stranger and nobler than your eyes;
And flesh is flesh, was flame before;
And infinite hungers leap no more
In the chance swaying of your dress;
And love has changed to kindliness.

DEAD MEN'S LOVE.

There was a damned successful Poet;
There was a Woman like the Sun.
And they were dead. They did not know it,
They did not know their time was done.
They did not know his hymns
Were silence; and her limbs,
That had served Love so well,
Dust, and a filthy smell.

And so one day, as ever of old,
Hands out, they hurried, knee to knee;
On fire to cling and kiss and hold
And, in the other's eyes, to see
Each his own tiny face,
And in that long embrace
Feel lip and breast grow warm
To breast and lip and arm.

So knee to knee they sped again,
And laugh to laugh they ran, I'm told,
Across the streets of Hell . . .
And then
They suddenly felt the wind blow cold,
And knew, so closely pressed,
Chill air on lip and breast,
And, with a sick surprise,
The emptiness of eyes.

THE WAY THAT LOVERS USE.

The way that lovers use is this:
They bow, catch hands, with never a word,
And their lips meet, and they do kiss
—So I have heard.

They queerly find some healing so,
And strange attainment in the touch;
There is a secret lovers know
—I have read as much.

And theirs no longer joy nor smart,
Changing or ending, night or day;
But mouth to mouth, and heart on heart
—So lovers say.

THERE'S WISDOM IN WOMEN.

"O, love is fair, and love is rare," my dear one, she said;
"But love goes lightly over." I bowed her foolish head,
And kissed her hair and laughed at her.
Such a child was she;
So new to love, so true to love, and she spoke so bitterly.
But there's wisdom in women, of more than they have known,
And thoughts go blowing through them, are wiser than their own,
Or how should my dear one, being ignorant and young,
Have cried on love so bitterly, with so true a tongue?

THE CALL.

Out of the nothingness of sleep,
The slow dreams of eternity,
There was a thunder on the deep:
I came, because you called to me.

I broke the night's primeval bars,
I dared the old abysmal curse,
And flashed through ranks of frightened stars
Suddenly on the universe!

The eternal silences were broken;
Hell became heaven as I passed.—
What shall I give you as a token,
A sign that we have met, at last?

I'll break and forge the stars anew,
Shatter the heavens with a song;
Immortal in my love for you,
Because I love you, very strong.

Your mouth shall mock the old and wise,
Your laugh shall fill the world with flame,
I'll write upon the shrinking skies
The scarlet splendor of your name.

Till heaven cracks, and hell thereunder
Dies in her ultimate mad fire,
And darkness falls, with scornful thunder,
On dreams of men and men's desire.

Then only in the empty spaces,
Death, walking very silently,
Shall fear the glory of our faces
Through all the dark infinity.

So, clothed about with perfect love,
The eternal end shall find us one,
Alone above the night, above
The dust of the dead gods, alone.

THE HILL.

Breathless, we flung us on the windy hill,
Laughed in the sun, and kissed the lovely grass.
You said, "Through glory and ecstasy we pass;
Wind, sun, and earth remain, the birds sing still,
When we are old, are old. . . . " "And when we die
All's over that is ours; and life burns on Through other lovers, other lips," said I —"Heart of my heart, our heaven is now, is won!"

"We are earth's best, that learned her lesson here.
Life is our cry. We have kept the faith!" we said;
"We shall go down with unreluctant tread,
Rose crowned, into the darkness!" . . .
Proud we were,
And laughed that had such brave true things to say.
—And then you suddenly cried, and turned away.

RETROSPECT.

In your arms was still delight,
Quiet as a street at night;
And thoughts of you, I do remember,
Were green leaves in a darkened chamber,
Were dark clouds in a moonless sky.
Love in you, went passing by,
Penetrative, remote, and rare,
Like a bird in the wide air.
And, as the bird, it left no trace
In the heaven of your face.
In your stupidity I found
The sweet hush after a sweet sound.
All about you was the light
That dims the graying end of night;
Desire was the unrisen sun,
Joy the day not yet begun,
With tree whispering to tree,
Without wind, quietly.
Wisdom slept within your hair,
And Long-Suffering was there,
And, in the flowing of your dress,
Undiscerning Tenderness.
And when you thought, it seemed to me,
Infinitely, and like a sea,
About the slight world you had known
Your vast unconsciousness was thrown.

THE LIFE BEYOND.

He wakes, who never thought to wake again,
Who held the end was death. He opens eyes
Slowly to one long, livid, oozing plain,
Closed down by the strange eyeless heavens.
He lies;
And waits; and once in timeless sick surmise
Through the dead air heaves up an unknown hand,
Like a dry branch. No life is in that land,
Himself not lives, but is a thing that cries;
An unmeaning point upon the mud; a speck
Of moveless horror; an immortal one,
Cleansed of the world, sentient and dead; a fly
Fast stuck in gray sweat on a corpse's neck.

I thought, when love for you died, I should die.
It's dead. Alone, most strangely, I live on.

IN EXAMINATION.

Lo! from quiet skies
In through the window my Lord the Sun:
And my eyes
Were dazzled and drunk with the misty gold,
The golden glory that drowned and crowned me
Eddied and swayed through the room . . .
Around me,
To left and to right,
Hunched figures and old,
Dull blear eyed scribbling fools, grew fair,
Ringed round and haloed with holy light.
Flame lit on their hair,
And their burning eyes grew young and wise,
Each as a god, or king of kings,
White robed and bright
(Still scribbling all):
And a full tumultuous murmur of wings
Grew through the hall;
And I knew the white undying fire,
And, through open portals,
Gyre on gyre,
Archangels and angels, adoring, bowing,
And a Face unshaded . . .
Till the light faded;
And they were but fools again, fools unknowing,
Still scribbling, blear eyed, and stolid immortals.

ANTE ARAM.

Before thy shrine I kneel, an unknown worshiper,
Chanting strange hymns to thee and sorrowful litanies,
Incense of dirges, prayers that are as holy myrrh.

Ah, goddess, on thy throne of tears and faint low sighs,
Weary at last to theeward come the feet that err,
And empty hearts grown tired of the world's vanities

How fair this cool deep silence to a wanderer
Deaf with the roar of winds along the open skies!
Sweet, after sting and bitter kiss of sea water,

The pale Lethean wine within thy chalices!
I come before thee, I, too tired wanderer,
To heed the horror of the shrine, the distant cries,
And evil whispers in the gloom, or the swift whirr
Or terrible wings—I, least of all thy votaries,
With a faint hope to see the scented darkness stir,

And, parting, frame within its quiet mysteries
One face, with lips than autumn lilies tenderer,
And voice more sweet than the far plaint of viols is,

Or the soft moan of any gray eyed lute player.

THE FUNERAL OF YOUTH: THRENODY

The day that Youth had died,
There came to his graveside
In decent mourning, from the country's ends,
Those scatter'd friends
Who had lived the boon companions of his prime,
And laughed with him and sung with him and wasted,
In feast and wine and many crown'd carouse,
The days and nights and dawnings of the time
When Youth kept open house,
Nor left untasted
Aught of his high emprise and ventures dear,
No quest of his unshar'd—
All these, with loitering feet and sad head bar'd,
Followed their old friend's bier.
Folly went first,
With muffled bells and coxcomb still revers'd;
And after trod the bearers, hat in hand—
Laughter, most hoarse, and Captain Pride with tanned
And martial face all grim, and fussy Joy,
Who had to catch a train, and Lust, poor, sniveling boy;
These bore the dear departed.
Behind them, broken hearted,
Came Grief, so noisy a widow, that all said,
"Had he but wed
Her elder sister, Sorrow, in her stead!"
And by her, trying to soothe her all the time,
The fatherless children, Color, Tune, and Rhyme
(The sweet lad Rhyme), ran all uncomprehending.
Then, at the way's sad ending,
Round the raw grave they stay'd. Old Wisdom read,
In mumbling tone, the service for the dead.
There stood Romance,
The furrowing tears had mark'd her rouged cheek;
Poor old Conceit, his wonder unassuaged;
Dead Innocency's daughter, Ignorance;
And shabby, ill dress'd Generosity;
And Argument, too full of woe to speak;
Passion, grown portly, something middle aged;
And Friendship—not a minute older, she;
Impatience, ever taking out his watch;
Faith, who was deaf, and had to lean to catch
Old Wisdom's endless drone.
Beauty was there,
Pale in her black; dry eyed; she stood alone.
Poor 'maz'd Imagination; Fancy wild;
Ardor, the sunlight on his graying hair;
Contentment, who had known Youth as a child,
And never seen him since. And Spring came, too,
Dancing over the tombs, and brought him flowers—
She did not stay for long.
And Truth, and Grace, and all the merry crew,
The laughing Winds and Rivers, and lithe Hours;
And Hope, the dewy eyed; and sorrowing Song—
Yes, with much woe and mourning general,
At dead Youth's funeral,
Even these were met once more together, all,
Who erst the fair and living Youth did know;
All, except only Love. Love had died long ago.

SECOND BEST.

Here in the dark, O heart;
Alone with the enduring earth, and night,
And silence, and the warm, strange smell of clover;
Clear visioned, though it break you: far apart
From the dead best, the dear and old delight;
Throw down your dreams of immortality,
O faithful, O foolish lover!
Here's peace for you, and surety; here the one
Wisdom—the truth!—"All day the good glad sun
Showers love and labor on you, wine and song;
The greenwood laughs, the wind blows, all day long
Till night." And night ends all things.
Then shall be
No lamp relumed in heaven, no voices crying,
Or changing lights, or dreams and forms that hover!
(And heart, for all your sighing,
That gladness and those tears are over, over. . . .)

And has the truth brought no new hope at all,
Heart, that you're weeping yet for paradise?
Do they still whisper, the old weary cries?
"'Mid youth and song, feasting and carnival,
Through laughter, through the roses, as of old
Comes Death, on shadowy and relentless feet,
Death, unappeasable by prayer or gold:
Death is the end, the end!"
Proud, then, clear eyed and laughing, go to greet
Death as a friend!

Exile of immortality, strongly wise,
Strain through the dark with undesirous eyes
To what may lie beyond it. Sets your star,
O heart, forever. Yet, behind the night,
Waits for the great unborn, somewhat afar,
Some white tremendous daybreak. And the light,
Returning, shall give back the golden hours,
Ocean a windless level, earth a lawn
Spacious and full of sunlit dancing places,
And laughter, and music, and, among the flowers,
The gay child hearts of men, and the child faces
O heart, in the great dawn

HEAVEN.

Fish (fly replete, in depth of June,
Dawdling away their wat'ry noon)
Ponder deep wisdom, dark or clear,
Each secret fishy hope or fear.
Fish say, they have their stream and pond:
But is there anything beyond?
This life cannot be all, they swear,
For how unpleasant, if it were!
One may not doubt that, somehow, good
Shall come of water and of mud;
And, sure, the reverent eye must see
A purpose of liquidity.
We darkly know, by faith we cry,
The future is not wholly dry.
Mud unto mud!—death eddies near—
Not here the appointed end, not here!
But somewhere, beyond space and time,
Is wetter water, slimier slime!
And there (they trust) there swimmeth one
Who swam ere rivers were begun,
Immense, of fishy form and mind,
Squamous, omnipotent, and kind;
And under that almighty fin
The littlest fish may enter in.
O! never fly conceals a hook,
Fish say, in the eternal brook,
But more than mundane weeds are there,
And mud celestially fair;
Fat caterpillars drift around,
And paradisal grubs are found;
Unfading moths, immortal flies,
And the worm that never dies.
And in that heaven of all their wish
There shall be no more land, say fish.

FRANZ-JOSEF AND HIS 60 YEAR OLD SOUL AFFINITY

Emperor Franz-Josef

Frau Katharina Schraat

The Allegory of the Ahnfrau

Frau Schraat, Once an Actress, "the Only Person in the World Franz-Josef, Emperor of Austria and King of Hungary, deems He Can Trust Utterly," Has for Many Years Been the Comforter and Kindly Counselor of the Aged Ruler. To Her House, After Trying Days of Affairs of State, He Has Gone, There to Talk With Her About the Price of Groceries, the Servants, and Domestic Affairs, Perhaps to Meet a Few Old Cronies and Forget His Sorrows.

By STERLING HEILIG.

DOES Frau Schraat make trips between Vienna and Switzerland? Has she even penetrated to Italy, carrying back and forth attempts at conversations, perhaps far reaching, whose nature can only be guessed at?

She is the only person in the world whom Emperor Franz Josef thinks that he can trust utterly. She is a serious, capable, devoted woman past 60.

We cannot say that time will show. Politics is not in her known character. Should the story be true—should the "ancestral woman" succeed in secret negotiations (merely to save Franz Josef; she cares not a rap for the rest!)—the world will never learn her part in them. She will sink back into the shadow, unassuming, enigmatic, just devoted to Franz Josef, as she has been forty years past!

Frau Schraat is the soul affinity of the aged emperor. That is plain and simple—why should the people tremble? Ah, but she is the "ancestral woman," it is whispered.

In the Hofburg there is a life sized marble picture carved in relief. Franz Josef had it put there. It represents a dead wife on her bier—dead countess, merchant's wife, or empress, who knows?—and the husband who would mourn her. But a shadowy figure floats between them, a commanding female figure, as if saying, 'Mourn not!" It is the ahnfrau, the "ancestral woman." She will console him—sometimes she begins before the wife is dead. She is no passing fancy. She is terrible, and yet it's not entirely her fault. She is a force of nature. She is the call to the man against his surroundings, friends, and duties, the call of old blood affinities, of faults and virtues of past generations. "And the sins of the fathers shall be visited on the children." Why did Franz Josef have it put there?

There is an "ancestral woman," it is whispered. She is fatal to a ruler. Though kind and good, she is, unconsciously perhaps, for the man against his people, court, and empire. Ever since she has known Franz Josef all his dearest ones and greatest interests have fallen round him; yet he personally stands unscathed!

They tremble if she takes to politics? Nonsense!

Old Favorite Holds First Place.

There is much world talk about Frau Schraat at present. Even Ernest Daudet, in the Correspondant for Feb. 10, 1916, does her the justice to admit that "having had the good taste never to mix herself up in politics, her influence has not been harmful to the state." On the other hand, this influence is so great that, having favors to ask of the emperor, "the members of the imperial family themselves have recourse to Frau Schraat in certain cases."

The emperor lives retired except when he receives a sovereign or visitor of mark. His daughters, the Archduchesses Gisele and Valerie, married respectively to Prince Leopold of Bavaria, brother of the king of Bavaria, and Archduke Francis Salvator of the Tuscan branch, visit him frequently; and there are familiar friends who seldom quit him, like Count Paar, companion of his childhood, and Col. Hoyos, who is his joker.

"Always in this intimate society," says Ernest Daudet, "the greatest place is held by the old favorite, Frau Catherine Schraat, although she may in appearance be relegated to the background. Her relations with Franz Josef go back to the distant past. They date from the epoch when, desiring to give his subjects proof of his paternal solicitude, he made himself accessible once or twice a week to any one with a request or grievance. The palace was open and any one might appeal personally to the emperor. Catherine Schraat, who enjoyed a certain renown as an actress, was then in the plenitude of her youthful gifts of seduction. Having complaints to make against her theater, she presented them to Franz Josef with such grace and charm, and so 'garlanded' her august judge that, though the chain was of flowers, it was never thereafter broken. Since that epoch the comedienne, now long retired from the stage, has always lived not far from the sovereign, who, when feeling well and strong, often visits her as early as 6 a. m., like a young lover, to eat a breakfast prepared by her own hands!"

"Let Frau Schraat Tell Him!"

For forty years, says Daudet, Vienna society has called the emperor "Herr Schraat" with loving indulgence. Given his great age and the fact that Frau Catherine is no chicken, their faithful friendship is deemed beautiful by all who have no dread of an "ancestral woman" to upset the throne; but what Empress Elizabeth thought of it must be guessed from an anecdote of Daudet taken from the recently published secret diplomatic correspondence of the French republic:

"When, on Jan. 31, 1889, the news of Archduke Rudolph's suicide arrived in Vienna it was the empress who was first notified. It was supposed that she would not wish to confide to any one the cruel mission of acquainting her husband, the Emperor Franz Josef, with the death of their son. But, crushed by sorrow, she declared herself incapable of accomplishing the duty.

"'Let Frau Schraat tell him!' said Elizabeth."

Years after, when Empress Elizabeth died, assassinated on the boat of Lake Geneva, some one had to break the news to Emperor Franz Josef, her husband.

"Let Frau Schraat tell him!" said the prime minister.

There is a world of enigmatic dread which peeps from these two sayings.

Emperor Dines Alone.

Frau Schraat does not attend state dinners. The old emperor himself regularly dines alone, with Paar and Hoyos, and one guest—some general or high official. The proudest monarch in Europe is "alone" with one guest. Etiquette demands it. They dine "alone" on the gold plate, a famous service. Five gorgeous flunkies in pale blue, pink, and gold serve the four men. There have been no flowers on the table since the tragic death of Empress Elizabeth; and the lights of wax candles make dancing shadows in far corners.

There are faint, mysterious noises, as of furtive steps on unknown stairways. There is an invisible population of effaced officials, gliding ecclesiastics, soft footed servants, noble old dames, and ancient, idle courtiers whose only sounds are creaking joints as they slip through dim corridors. It is the frigid court of a lone, aged emperor, bereaved by bloody loss of wife, only son, favorite brother, heir—but who can count these unaccountable losses?—so high and alone that none dare offer him sympathy.

Franz Josef rises from the table. His three guests take ceremonious leave. It is still early, not yet 8, and the sovereign goes to his study. What a place, that study! Suites of libraries and offices, on endless corridors, where years ago he was so busy! Franz Josef sighs with relief. His real life begins.

A confidential valet helps him into hat and overcoat. By a bijou elevator, whose door imitates a bookcase, he descends to the ground floor.

It is an extraordinary little elevator, running in the thickness of a Hofburg wall. The shaft, cut down two stories to the ground, communicates by a short secret corridor—just ten steps—with a locked door on one of the unused courtyards of the palace. Between the emperor's study and a waiting automobile is, thus, the trip of a short minute, saving a detour of half a mile by suites of rooms and halls.

There is no special secrecy. It is merely for convenience and to avoid ceremony. The emperor gives no directions. The chauffeur knows where to go.

Relief from Frigid Etiquette.

Quitting the solemn Hofburg, out into wartime Vienna, past crowds hastening to cafés, bulletin boards, and moving pictures, the automobile stops at a comfortable villa. The old sovereign enters the gate alone. The front door opens as he mounts the steps. When the door shuts he is no longer the dread, lonely emperor and apostolic king, but Herr Schraat, regularly called "the colonel," careless and easy, negligent and slouchy, cozy, snug, among old friends!

Is this the dangerous "ancestral woman"? The court calls her "the bourgeoise," which means middle class, not noble. With Catherine Schraat for the first time the emperor learned what blessed relief from frigid etiquette and numbing ceremony might be. She broke through the crust of the divinity that hedged the poor king. Countless are the tales of rigid formalism which the emperor yielded to and exacted from those around him—even his sweet empress—trained as he had been from youth to consider his imperial obligation.

Frau Schraat humanized him.

How did she do it? Many had tried and failed. Ah, but she was the "ancestral woman"! Not with impunity, they say, may sovereign seek simple happiness and permit ancestral women to——

Tut, tut!

Leaving crown and scepter on the hat rack, he enters the bright little cardroom adjoining two parlors, and takes the best chair, while Frau Catherine hastens with the footwarmer.

Ouf!

"How go things, Catherina?"

"The coal has come."

"Did the plumber fix the boiler?"

"Yes, this morning. The house next door, you know, it's rented, a nice family with children. The little girl, about 9, bounced her ball into our garden. I gave her a cake. They are from Litz, aniline dyes, and are making a lot of money with Switzerland. The child says that mamma bought a splendid sable cloak, but papa scolded."

"Wasteful, wasteful!"

Herr Schraat sprawls in unspeakable content.

Not a word about the war. In the little household of Herr Schraat the war does not exist. Frau Catherine is always mentioning people who make money, never anyone who is fighting!

The doorbell rings and all is forgotten. Two awaited guests arrive. They are habitués, the partners of interminable games of tarok, a kind of Austrian bridge whist, old, old friends and always the same—Herr Palmer, president of the Bank of Austrian Lands and a greater international banker, so illustrious that his family name is as well known as Franz Josef's, and—a thing which never ceases to worry the court—an Israelite by race and religion in the strict sense!

The Rothschild and Herr Schraat are fast old cronies, but they meet like this, in intimacy. Often the emperor loses all the money in his purse—a dozen florins—at the game of tarok. He plays badly. None wants him for a partner; so they cut to see who takes him. He laughs boisterously. Poor man, it is his one good hour. He forgets war, politics, ruin.

From his jewel studded case the Rothschild offers superb Havanas.

"No, thanks, friend, I smoke Trabucos!" (the mildest possible Manila cigar, permitted, three a day, to Franz Josef by his doctors).

"You save money," says the Rothschild gravely, and all laugh. It is a solid friendship of the four. Nothing can shake it.

At 11 p. m. the automobile is announced and Frau Catherine helps the "colonel" into his overcoat.

The auto rolls through the Vienna streets. It stops at the cold, solemn palace, at the little door on the interior courtyard. The old man enters. The silent valet meets him. Up the bijou elevator they ride to the study which he left three hours ago. The valet takes his hat and coat.

The emperor has returned.

SOMEWHERE NOW THAT "GERMAN BAND" IS PLAYING

Says Oney Fred Sweet Who During One Springtime Morning Fingered the Keys of the Big Bass Horn

IT'S one thing to locate a "German band" when you are actually looking for one; it is quite another thing to force yourself in as a member of such an organization once you have located it. Having found a German band "at home" and having injected myself into its membership, I was short sighted enough to think that thereafter all would be clear sailing. "Clear sailing" is hardly the term. Carl Hebel seemed as much concerned over the fact that my shoes did not have double soles as he was over the discovery that I had not been born and raised in Rheinpfalz. To remain "in good standing" with a German band you must be able to walk at times as much as forty miles a day.

You would probably lose heart tagging a German band to find where it came from, but if you tagged long enough you would eventually find yourself in the neighborhood of North and Clybourn avenues. Almost within a stone's throw of each other there are a score of German bands in that vicinity. But even in the German band neighborhood your search would avail you nothing if you were not aware that it is not the custom of German bands to live in houses that face the street. When one has music in the soul and the wonderful opportunity of expressing oneself through the "trompete" all day long, what does it matter where or how one lives? German bands live in the little rear houses that touch on the alleys—little houses that are hidden and hard to find.

Of course, one must be able to "spiel" to belong to a German band steadily. More than that, one must own a heavy pair of shoes and be able to cook one's own breakfast and supper and make one's own bed. One must not mind the lack of a woman's touch about the little house that faces on the alley. One must just be grateful that the city ordinance permits music to be heard after 8 o'clock in the morning; that the whole livelong day can be spent producing "um, pah pahs," and that the evening hours—well, that the evening hours furnish an opportunity for practice.

Trying to "Join Out."

I made it a point to get in the vicinity of North and Clybourn avenues before 8 o'clock in the morning. My knock at the door of the little alley house in the rear of 940 Concord place brought Wilhelm Gerrmann and his brother, Alfred; Richard Kissel and his brother, Jacob, and Carl Hebel tumbling out of their beds.

Wilhelm looked at me and he looked on through the open doorway. Surely, spring had come! Awakening mother earth seemed to be fairly throbbing through the asphalt. A robin was jumping from picket top to picket top on the alley fence, and the saloon across the alley flaunted its "bock beer" sign.

"Was willst du?" inquired Wilhelm, rubbing his eyes and adjusting his suspenders.

I tried to make my intentions clear—I wanted to "join out" with his band. Wilhelm didn't seem to understand. The four other members of his organization arose from their beds and came to stand above me where I sat at the clothless table in the center of the sunless room.

If I had only come from Rheinpfalz they could have understood. They had all come from Rheinpfalz. Most of the members of the other nineteen bands in the neighborhood had come from Rheinpfalz. In Rheinpfalz everybody could play a musical instrument—father, mother, sister, brother, baby. It is to Rheinpfalz that Chicago owes its occasional strain of harmony that lifts an ordinary stretch of street out of the commonplace for the nonce—that causes women to raise upper windows, delicatessen merchants to half forget their customers, girls to put new zest in their rope skipping, boys to drop fighting over their marble games.

But I had not come from Rheinpfalz. Even if such had been my fortune, I doubt if Wilhelm would have been inclined to add me to his band. Already he had five, and five is enough for a German band. Wilhelm and I were having a hard time coming to any sort of an agreement. Wilhelm could understand but little English, and I could understand but little German. But I did get it through my bean that Wilhelm didn't want my services.

In fact, when 8 o'clock came I could see that diplomatic proceedings had gone as far as they could go. The band was all ready for its route for the day. The five had their instruments tucked lovingly under their arms and they were about to lock up the little house in the alley. There was really nothing left for me to do. I grabbed up the left-over bass horn in the corner of the kitchen and passed out of the door with the rest.

Wilhelm and Carl and Richard and Jacob and Alfred all remonstrated in perfect German, but I fingered away at the three keys of the big bass horn to see if they were in proper working condition and pretended I couldn't hear. The remonstrance continued until we reached the sunshine filled street. Then, no matter how slightly Wilhelm cared about having me along, he was not going to let me interfere further with his beloved music. How the "um, pah pahs" and the wonderful variations of that first piece we played still ring in my ears!

Es braust ein Ruf wie Donnerhall,
Wie Schwertgeklirr und Wogenprall,
Zum Rhein, zum Rhein, zum deutschen Rhein!

Used the Only Safe System.

Down streets where the doors of the butcher shops and the saloons were being left open to let in the balmy spring air, up alleys whose winter rubbish lingered shamefaced before the glad, clean season that had been ushered in—into Irish neighborhoods where we quickly shifted to "Tipperary," into vicinities where we tooted the latest ragtime.

It made no difference to the bunch what sort of air was ordered in sotto voce by Wilhelm, the variations always came in at the right instant, and it was as if the souls of the players poured forth from the instruments, no matter if we played "Back Home in Tennessee" or "On the Road to Santa Fé"—geographical songs, the sentiment of which I felt sure revived no memories among the players. However, when opportunity offered, Wilhelm gave the cue for "Wien bleibt Wien," or "Ueber die Wellen," or "Trinken wir noch ein Tropfchen."

I must confess that it took considerable strategy on my part to make good with that big bass horn. It was certainly an awful case of "fourflush." I raised the horn to my lips just as the others did before starting each selection; during the selection I puffed out my cheeks and let my vision turn skyward and kept my fingers on the keys, as though I were a Sousa; when the selection was finished I very professionally pretended to shake the water out of the instrument; but—and here was the secret of my success—I was particularly careful not to cause the slightest sound to escape from the end of that horn. As a result, I basked in as much admiration as fell to my companions. I used the only safe system, inasmuch as I had never had a horn in my hands before and didn't know an E flat from a crescendo.

Every one seemed glad to hear us coming along, although many neighborhoods, through familiarity, treated our concerts rather matter of fact. Wilhelm was systematic about his routes, I found. It was much the same as if we were going around with mail or milk. And to Wilhelm fell that disagreeable task of attending to the financial end. Alas, no matter how much one loved to dispense music, one could not play on and on on an empty stomach. Art, in order to subsist, is forever being obliged to drop down to sordid commercialism at unromantic intervals. On occasions, Wilhelm walked ahead to a saloon—sort of advance agent like—to make a deal with the proprietor. At other times no preliminary seemed to be necessary; the establishment was simply taking our wares "by the month." In Orchard street we ran into a rival organization, but we kept on opposite sides of the street, and eventually our productions ceased to clash with each other. I was glad when we were finally out of hearing of each other. No matter how sweet "Ueber die Wellen" and "My Mother's Rosary" may be, each by themselves, mix the strains together and neither one of them is pretty.

Just to Please the Old Man.

Everything had been going just fine for me, however, until we came to a certain saloon on the north side. I remember an old man approaching and asking us to come on into the saloon and "spiel" for him. The old man had been in the saloon earlier in the day, and he was in the mood for certain tunes. Dreamily squinting his eyes behind his spectacles, he asked us first for "Annie Laurie" and then "I Love a Lassie." Between the selections he bought a drink that he poured out of a square bottle into a little glass, and he gave Wilhelm a quarter. While we played he kept time with the forefinger of his right hand and smiled reminiscently. Finally, after his third drink out of the square bottle, he conceived the idea that he needed a slow, sad piece. I forget the name of the number chosen, but a phonograph or an electric piano had nothing on us—Wilhelm and his bunch could play anything in the way of tunes that ever had been invented.

For some reason the old man seemed to regret his choice of the slow, mournful piece soon after we were well launched into it. Unfortunately, he was standing closest to me. I observed the corners of his mouth go down as he studied me over the top of his spectacles. It was one of those pieces where the variation every so often goes:

ta,
ta,
ta,
ta,
ta,

—you know, each note lower than the one before.

Well, the old man was putting up the coin, and I knew it was up to our aggregation to please him, and I could see by the expression on his face that he wasn't going to be good for another quarter unless the selection took what the doctors call "a turn for the better." So far as Wilhelm was concerned, once started on a number and he was right at the mouthpiece of that cornet of his until the finish. He wasn't looking toward the old man, anyhow; he had his eyes rolled toward the ceiling.

My smoldering guilty conscience was making me more or less nervous, knowing how I had been fourflushing all day as a musician, and—well, all of a sudden something accidentally came out of the end of that big bass horn of mine.

I don't suppose I could do it again on a bet, because it's a trick to make even a little toot come out of a horn unless you know how to press your lips and just how to blow, but this one note of the day that I produced was of such volume that it floated up to the campaign pictures of the recently elected aldermanic candidate above the bar, banged over to where the fork was reclining in the glass of water among the sausages on the free lunch counter, and blurted back from the vicinity of the cuspidors along the bar rail. It fairly filled the place.

At that, it might not have been so noticeable if Wilhelm and the rest had not just at that moment been drifting through a particularly sad place in the selection. As it was, four horns and a clarionet were dropped from five lips in unison. Five pairs of eyes glared at me.

"What's the matter? Don't look at me like that," I gasped to Wilhelm as the six of us became jumbled together between the swinging doors of the saloon in making a hasty retreat to the street. In the midst of the jumble Wilhelm and I were having a tug of war. I had hold of one end of the big bass horn and Wilhelm had hold of the other end. I might have tried to have stuck it out a little longer in my struggle with Wilhelm, but I loosened my grip on the instrument when I saw it was going to be a case of five against one.

But I don't care; I got one dandy note out of that big horn, anyhow, even if Wilhelm did say disgustedly that it was "furchtbar schlecht."

1917? by EDWIN BALMER

Herewith is presented the tenth installment of a fiction serial dealing with what might happen should European powers, after they had settled their own differences, wage war upon the United States. The author, one of the best fiction writers in the country, has based his story upon a thorough understanding of military, naval, and internal conditions in the United States and upon a sound knowledge of military and economic history. The story will cause you to realize the critical situation in which this country and you, your neighbors, and your family are placed by the let-well-enough-alone attitude of the pacifists.

SYNOPSIS.

In Elgin, Ill., live the Ashby family, consisting of Nathan Ashby, owner of the Ashby Brass company, and his wife; a daughter, Nellie, married to Bob Wendell, a navy lieutenant; and Jim Ashby, a son, engaged to Agnes Ware. Nathan Ashby is the archtype of pacifist, deaf to the warnings of impending danger to America. Almost out of a clear sky news is received that the U. S. scout cruiser Salem, proceeding against orders, in the North Atlantic has encountered the fleet of the league of former European enemies and has been sunk, a deliberate act of war. Bob is recalled to Newport News. Spies are discovered in the Ashby works, and evidence of a league of spies that swarm the country and are even enlisted in the army is held by Jim Ashby, who for a time is held prisoner in one of the spies' rendezvous in a fashionable residence in Chicago. Jim after his adventure returns to Elgin. War is on and Jim has signified his intention to enlist. Bob arrives in Newport News to find that enemy aeroplanes have been dropping bombs around the arsenal and on the deck of the Arizona, killing a number of men. The U. S. army aeroplanes are inadequate against the highly specialized air craft divisions of the enemy. With the Arizona's personnel cut down to man nine planters and destroyers, Bob is appointed second divisional officer and the dreadnaught steams out for Hampton Roads and to engage the enemy ships that are bombarding the coast towns.

CHAPTER XI.
THE LURE.

THE upper works of three vessels—the masts and fire control tops and funnels of a first line dreadnaught or battle cruiser, the masts and tops and funnels of two other large war vessels—showed above the horizon to the east. Twenty-two thousand yards—or more than twelve miles—was the estimate of the distance as Bob Wendell was standing on the quarter deck with other gunnery officers ready for battle before the bugles called them to their battle stations.

The hulls of the enemy's ships were then entirely invisible, and the officers on the quarter deck of the Arizona could see nothing at all of any hostile vessels except the three. Only Starnes and the other men in the Arizona's tops—a hundred and twenty feet higher—could make out the hulls of the larger vessels of the enemy and could see, besides, that they were accompanied by smaller craft. Yet the Pennsylvania, now barely 2,000 yards ahead of the Arizona, already was engaged; great geysers of spray spurted up abeam the Pennsylvania where the enemy's shells were striking in the water and a gun in the forward turret of the American dreadnaught was making reply.

"The leading ship of the enemy's line is an armored cruiser of the Pera class," the information came down from the tops—a Pera cruiser meant, as every one knew, a ship of thirty knots speed and four 11 inch guns, fourteen of 7 inch. "No. 2 is a battle cruiser of the Carthage class"—that meant eight 13 inch guns in an armored vessel of twenty-eight knots. "No. 3 is another Pera; they are attended by eleven destroyers now in sight. The Pennsylvania is testing the range of the rear ship and that vessel and the Carthage are replying."

Bob Wendell gazed at the tops of the three great ships through his glass. The late afternoon sun shone down upon the sea; visibility, for the time of the day, was at its best; the sunlight showed the upper works of the enemy's ships in clear, sharp silhouette to the Americans, while to the men on the Carthage and the Peras the Arizona and the Pennsylvania must appear to be steaming down a dazzling lane of light. The sun must be directly in the eyes of the enemy's fire control spotters, their sight setters and turret trainers and gun pointers. It was impossible to think that the enemy had chosen such a position to offer battle; it was impossible to think that that force of the enemy had come to offer battle at all. Their three broadsides did not equal the broadsides of the Arizona and the Pennsylvania; armor protection was all in favor of the dreadnaughts; speed, and speed alone—an advantage of seven or nine knots—adhered to the enemy. They had come trusting to that to save them when the American ships should draw near enough to threaten them; they had appeared, not to offer battle, but to lure the slower American ships out.

"They're the cruisers which have been coming down our coast raising hell," Ross said to Wendell. "They've sunk four vessels and put the passengers and crews in small boats in that sea to row ashore; and they've been shelling everything in sight; they shelled the hotels at——"

Bob nodded; he had heard. Those ships out there had bombarded helpless cities, murdered men, women, and children in little coast villages to attain the very end they now were gaining—to force the American battleships to come out. After slaughtering and destroying all day they had showed themselves—a weaker, inferior force—before the bay where the division of the newest and most powerful ships of the American fleet lay cleared for action. Their spies, undoubtedly, had relayed to their commanders by wireless that the word had come from Washington for the Americans to move to the protection of the seaboard; the enemy knew that, whether the American commanders wished it or not, the American battleships must come out.

"They're trying to draw us upon mines, of course," said Ross.

"Or upon submarines."

"Well, if they're playing that game they'll find two at it, perhaps. Six of our submarines went out, submerged, a couple of hours ago; they're waiting off to the south. That's why the Pennsylvania's pretending to wait for us: we're giving the subs time to get placed."

"They're starting to withdraw to the south," Wendell said, his hands clenching tight as the forward gun of the Pennsylvania roared again. The enemy's ships indeed were definitely moving off, but not so swiftly as to at once discourage pursuit; they remained just beyond or just at the limit of extreme range at which main battery guns might hit, and as the Carthage and the two Peras withdrew shells from their turrets continued to spurt up spray before the Pennsylvania.

That ship forced ahead faster, and now Bob Wendell felt the Arizona's deck vibrating with the tremor of turbines pushed "full speed ahead." The bow wave piled up in a white crest which splashed up and over the forecastle as the great ship dipped; more spray splattered up as the Arizona, following the Pennsylvania, altered its course to the south in pursuit of the enemy's ships. The men of the gun crews who had been below bathing were crowding out now upon the forecastle deck; they were nude to the waist, and the hot afternoon sunlight gleamed on the pink and brown flesh of their bodies and sparkled on the drops of spray splashed upon them.

Far ahead of the Pennsylvania and well away on both beams the American destroyers—the Cassin and Cummings, the Aylwin and Balch, and two others tossed and tipped as they dashed through the waves on their watch for the enemy's submersibles; far in the air overhead two American biplanes circled, their wireless sending back word that, so far, no mines and no enemy submarines had been sighted.

Wendell gazed now and then at these auxiliary craft, but the men of the gun crews, crowding eagerly forward, ignored everything but the Pennsylvania, which still was firing slowly and singly, one gun from number 1 turret, now a gun from number 2; another gun from number 1; again from number 2. The Arizona's gun crews pointed in their envy and cried out to one another; scraps of their exclamations came back to Wendell on the wind. Puff! Another gun fired on the Pennsylvania; and now, as soon as that could have been reloaded, all six guns of the two forward turrets went together in a salvo which hid, for a space of second, all the fore part of the ship. At the sight of the great yellow cloud belched before the turrets a cheer burst from the gun crews of the Arizona; the thunder of the salvo came down the wind and swelled the cheer into a wild, exultant shout from the men below as well as those above. For every one who could hear or see knew what the salvo meant; the Pennsylvania was no longer testing the range; the salvo told that she had found it. And in the interval of suspense—suspense after the gas of the powder had puffed and been blown away from the guns, after the sound had rumbled back on the wind to the Arizona—during the slow score of seconds while the six great shells must still be in flight toward the enemy's ships, officers and men spun about and, with heads bent back, stared at their foretop. Would the "spotters" up there see splashes of spray this time beside the Carthage or would it be "a hit"?

The answer boomed in the alarm bells sounding "general quarters" and the bugles calling all men to battle stations. Leaping at the call, as he had responded a hundred times in practice, Wendell stepped from the sunshine of the wind-swept deck into the turret and the yellow light of the battle lanterns. He took his place at the rear of the guns, and as his men went to their stations he gazed through the telescope periscope which let him look out above the top of the turret toward the upper works of the enemy's vessels far off to the east. He found himself repeating his directions in a voice not strange: "We fire at the rear ship in the line!"

At his command he felt the mighty turret revolving slowly beneath him; the turret trainer and the gun pointers, at their places at the periscope sights, were bringing the three monster guns to bear. Every man was trying to be as calm as though the command which had been repeated was simply, "Fire at target No. 3." But not even Holt—the turret captain, who had made the record for his ship at the last gun trials on the ranges—was entirely steady. If Wendell were killed there was no other officer in the turret to succeed; the nearest would be Wayne, the ensign, in the handling room below. Holt set his lips and clinched his powerful hands. The heat in the turret was stifling; fans sucked at the air, but sweat streamed over the bare bodies of the men standing idle—the sight setters, the gunner's mates, the "strikers," and the firing pointer, with the electric buzzer strapped over his bare chest, rising and falling as he panted for breath. The sound of the Pennsylvania's guns came, muffled, into the turret; but envy for the sister ship was gone. The Arizona soon would be in action and would show them. At the call to battle stations the Arizona was only a couple of thousand yards astern the Pennsylvania, which had just come within extreme range of the enemy. But the enemy's ships were withdrawing; had they begun to flee so fast that the Arizona would not have a shot?

"Stand by!"

Now: "Initial range, twenty thousand; deflection, five four!"

The voice which first gave it spoke on the telephone circuit; simultaneously the visual signal clicked and the range and the deflection stood out in sharp figures in yards and points—"20,000," deflection "5 4"—meant four points to the right. A voice, clear and slow, sounding from the speaking tube—which needed no dependence upon electric circuits—repeated the instruction.

But the sight setters, helmeted with the telephone headpieces strapped over their ears, already were making their adjustment. The distance was greater than that at which even first ranging shots might be fired; but the Arizona was closing with the enemy; the Carthage and the two Peras were offering themselves yet and the range was shortening.

"Load!"

Wendell had heard, moments before, the rumbling below which told that, in the handling room, the shells and the powder bags for his three mighty guns were waiting upon the cars. He turned from his periscope as the steel traps to the handling room opened and the ammunition cars came to place behind the open breeches of the guns. The crews, sweating and silent, rammed in the monster shells, thrust the great powder bags in behind, and closed the breech of each gun. The ammunition cars, empty, dropped below, the trap doors closing above them. At each gun the plugman put in the primer. The three fourteen inch guns were ready, each separated from the next by a steel bulkhead, to limit, as much as possible, an accident in the turret; a few yards further forward and lower, the three great pieces of number one turret, too, were ready, their muzzles lifted to extreme elevation toward the eastern sky.

"Range, One, nine, O double O! Deflection five four!" the telephone said. The visuals displayed the figures in black and white again. "Commence firing with one gun!" the order came on the telephone as the sight setters sprang to their sights. The voice tube repeated the order and the firing pointer, holding his electric button in hand, stooped and strained at his telescope to follow closer the pointing of the guns. Up and down, up and down, up and down, as the waves passed under the ship, the deck moved; but, as it moved and as the ship steamed forward and the target ship also moved, the trainer and the gun pointers worked ceaselessly turning the turret and elevating and lowering the guns to keep the sights steadily "on" the target; but, as the firing pointer crouched at his telescope, the cross hairs which divided his field of sight rose now above the funnels of the third ship on the horizon; now, as the gun dropped, too much of the gray, white flecked sea appeared; for a flashing instant only—a frightful infinitesimal of a second—the far away funnels, the masts, and the bridge of the enemy ship showed exactly in the cross hairs of the sight. At that infinitesimal the gun must fire; the firing pointer better than any one else knew that as he strained, sweating, and fingering his firing key.

"Bzzzzzz!" The buzzer hung against his chest now was sounding the signal to fire. For an interval—measured and noted in the chief fire control station from which the signal came—the buzzer would sound; the firing pointer could choose when, during those counted seconds, the gun was "on" the target and he should loose the charge; but if he did not fire while the buzzer still was sounding the turret must wait instruction from the tops again; the sights must be altered, the gun aimed again, that chance for dealing destruction be gone.

"Bzzzzzz!" the buzzer was still going; but it would not go forever. Had it not been going for—minutes now? Bob Wendell jerked, stiff and strained, toward the firing pointer. He tried to speak, but he could not till he wet his lips, then, as he saw the pointer's face the rebuke stayed on his tongue. The gun pointer's face was drawn as in agony, his arms strained and stretched as in torture; his lips moved ceaselessly, soundlessly, and his fingers played with the firing key as a surgeon's taking up a scalpel; the man's eyes, glassy in their steadiness, stared through the telescope. Too much of the sky was in the field of sight; but now the deck was dropping again and the buzzer still was sounding. The firing pointer's fingers pressed together, and the monster bulk of steel beside him leaped back in recoil, while the air before the turret was yellow and etherous with blazing gas and the ship shuddered at the shock of the discharge.

The firing pointer, falling back as the doors from the handling room opened again and the ear came up for the reload, gazed toward Wendell. Bob, counting the score of seconds during which the shell would be in flight, said to himself, "Eight, nine." Then, aloud, "That was right, Louden; fire when you're on the target!" He saw that the gun was reloaded and from his station gazed through his periscope out over the sea.

If he missed—he and the firing pointer and the turret trainer, the sight setters, and the rest, the captain on the bridge, Garry and his men in the top, the executive officer in the chief fire control station, the engineers, and all the others throughout the ship who lived then only to send shells true and straight from the guns—if they all missed, a spurt of spray would show somewhere ten miles away. If the shell hit, nothing would appear—that was, nothing would show right away. A little later the target ship might show a list or a fire might break out. But, in any case, Wendell and the crew in the turret who had pointed and fired the gun could scarcely hope to see it. Only Garry and his spotters in the tops would surely see; perhaps the captain and the officers in the conning tower might see; but word would come to the turret as an instruction for a correction for the guns, if it was a miss; or, if it was a hit, "No change!"

"Down five hundred; one right!" That meant a miss, of course; the shell had gone over and splashed in the water and Garry had seen the splash and estimated the miss at five hundred yards. "One right!" That meant that the shell had flown to the stern also; the original estimate had not allowed enough deflection for the speed of the Arizona and the relative speed of the funnels and masts out there ten miles away. But the shell, at least, had gone over; it had not fallen short. A second shot already was testing the new range. "Up three hundred!"

The range now was "bracketed." A shot at nineteen thousand yards had gone over; another at eighteen thousand five hundred had fallen short. The right range was between. The sight setter for the gun which had fired already had altered his sight again; the firing pointer crouched and strained; the buzzer on his breast sounded; the gun leaped back.

A half mile ahead and to the right of the Arizona a giant wave of spray spurted into the air; another nearer as the enemy's shell ricocheted; it was by without damage, and Bob Wendell gave no more thought to it. He ignored as completely the position of the destroyers dashing ahead on both sides of the Arizona; he had forgotten entirely, since the first loading of the gun, to look for the American biplanes in the sky. The shell from his gun was still in flight; the gun again was reloaded and ready.

"No change!" the voice on the telephone circuit cried. The visuals confirmed it; the voice through the speaking tube said it once more. "No change!" That meant a hit.

"Fire by salvos!"

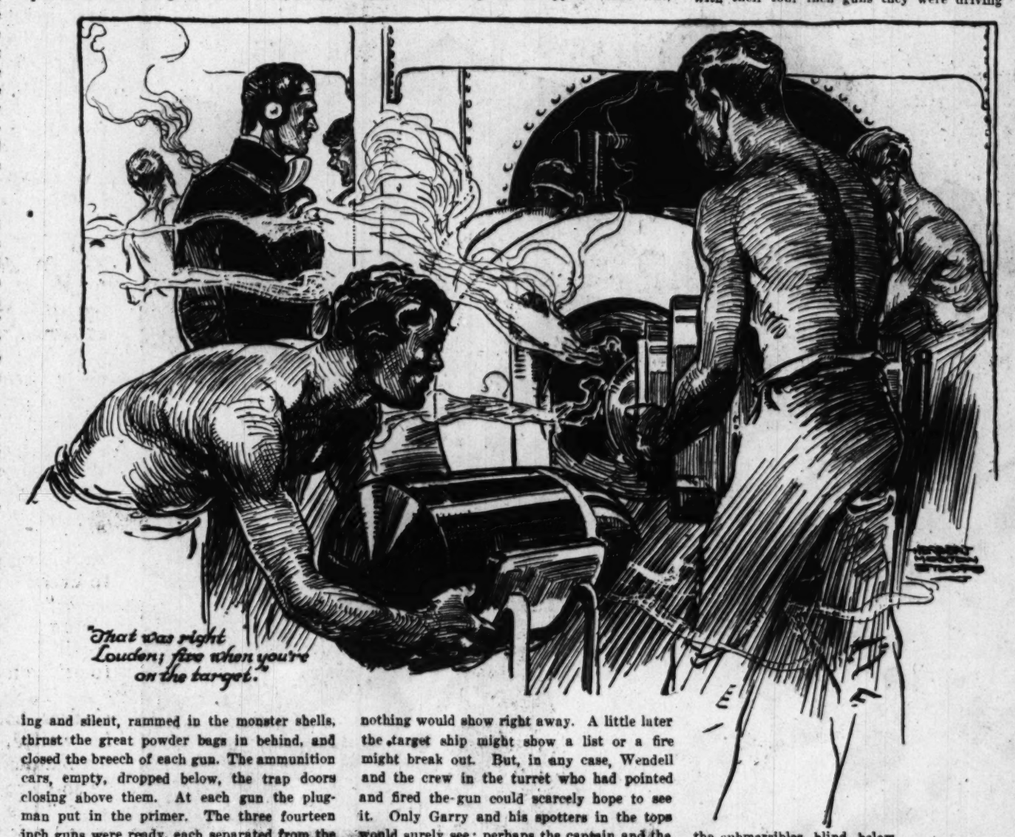
Salvos! All six forward guns together, both turrets firing at once. The other guns in Wendell's turret, hidden behind their bulkheads, were ready; they were bulwarked up, but they were aimed as a unit, a pressure on the firing key in Louden's hand could fire them all together. The buzzer on Louden's breast was sounding now for the simultaneous discharge of all; but the man strained less as he stooped and he waited only an instant before his fingers closed on the key.

"Up one hundred; one right! Up one hundred; one right!" Corrections were coming both for elevation and deflection. So all six shells had missed; they had fallen short a little and had gone astern. Were the enemy's ships satisfied with having drawn the American ships out so far; were they pushing at full speed to run away?

Smoke—not the yellow, gaseous clouds from the guns just fired again—but a wide, black pall which did not clear away, but rose higher and spread thicker and thicker and blinded Wendell's glass as his guns were ready to fire again. The smoke, blown by the wind, clouded over the battleship and more smoke and more poured up ahead and on both sides and shut out all sight from turret number two. The forward turret also was silenced by it, shrouded in blackness—a heavy, oil smelling, sooty pall through which the Arizona now rushed. It came from the American destroyers which had been trailing only the usual streamers of brown behind them as they raced ahead of the battleships; now they had flung themselves across the battleships' course with funnels belching up the black pall which came to curtain the ship; and, as the Arizona's great guns were silent, the sharp, incessant "pang" of the destroyers' quick firers came back on the wind.

"Submarines! The regent's submarines!"

The smoke as well as the clatter of the torpedo defense guns proclaimed that; the destroyers, sighting periscopes, were throwing the screen of smoke to hide the battleship, while with their four inch guns they were driving the submersibles, blind, below.



"That was right Louden; fire when you're on the target."

But, before they were fired upon, had the submarines taken a successful sight? Had they started their torpedoes straight on their ways through the water? Bob Wendell turned from the smoky cloud outside the turret to the light of the battle lanterns which showed him his men standing idle, staring at each other and helplessly waiting beside the uselessly loaded guns in the armored trap of the turret, while, hidden in the smoke, the Arizona sheered suddenly and altered speed to try to escape, at the last instant, the strike of the torpedoes which had been launched.

GOD IN THE HURRICANE.

There is a span of minutes following the learning that torpedoes have been dispatched at a ship in action and before the instant of their impact—or of their passing harmlessly—which resembles few other intervals. The time is not long, usually; but, since the effective range of a torpedo has lengthened to more than 6,000 yards, the interval may be almost ten minutes; and during those minutes there is little for any one—except the engine crew and navigators—to do but to think.

All preparation for torpedo attack had been made on the Arizona. Long before, when the gun crews were running to their battle stations, their mates below had closed every water tight door, isolated each fire room and the engine room, and the heavy "collision" mat was ready to be brought up and lowered over the side and drawn over the chasm, which a torpedo would make, in an effort to stay the first inrush of water. There was absolutely nothing for Bob Wendell to do after his guns were loaded again but to stand silent and cool before his men, waiting either for the clouds of smoke to clear away and show the gun pointers their target, or after the crash and concussion of the torpedoes to direct his division in order as the bugles would be blowing the command, "Abandon ship!"

The bugles, if they blew, would not call for practice this time. A third—perhaps half—of the officers and men might be saved; that was the English experience with battleships hard hit by mine or torpedo. The others would go down with the ship. Wendell's throat contracted spasmodically as the vision mastered him for the moment; Nellie was before him—his young wife with wide eyes and brave little lips as she met him at the door when he returned after the fight with Ingouf, when she held the telegram of recall in her hand. For a second Bob seemed to feel her weight in his arms as he carried her, close against him, up the stairs. Then, strangely, he saw Garry's little boy—the straight, smiling little fellow with the Arizona ribbon on his hat; in the next instant Bob was himself again and was conscious that he was facing Louden, the firing pointer, who still held to the firing key, though for the moment Louden's eyes, too, were staring at nothing—very far away.

In the suspense the motion of the ship had become more menacing—the heave of the great waves against the steel sides, the sweep of the spray over the deck, and the noise of the wind. In such a sea few would be saved if the ship went down.

Some one behind a bulkhead swore violently: Bob did not try to discover who. It was the snapping of nerves during inaction; and the outburst was against the smoke—the damned, crazy soot which the destroyers were sending up and which shut everything away, and stopped the guns from firing.

A deep, rumbling detonation—very different from the banging resound of the guns of the destroyers—came down the wind; the noise of the "fours" diminished.

Wendell tried again to make out something through his periscope but the smoke was still all about the Arizona.

"What do you make of that, Holt?" he asked of the turret captain. "Torpedo?"

"Yes, sir; one of the destroyers gone, I should say, sir."

One of the destroyers gone! That, now, was plain. The smoke about the Arizona was thining and, as Bob's field of vision extended a couple of hundred yards forward and to the left, he saw a destroyer sinking by the stern. It was one of the newer and larger of the destroyers—a long, four funneled boat with two masts and with sharp prow pointing to the sky. It was the Aylwin, or the Balch, which had been on guard ahead the few minutes before, its guns going, its funnels belching smoke for the hiding of the Arizona; smoke still streamed from the forward funnel as the destroyer sank; but its guns were silent, leering to the sky. Men were falling from its slanting deck into the sea, others clung to stays or stanchions. They made no signal to the battleship as, 300 yards away, it rushed by in the haze of smoke which the other destroyers sustained. The Arizona, bent on the destruction of life, could not halt to save men from the vessel which had been protecting the battleship; the men on the destroyer knew it; one of them waved and Bob knew that he was cheering, as the Arizona passed; then he leaped into the sea.

The clatter of a machine gun; the rattle of another, replying, sounded from the air overhead. The turret guns of the Arizona were still masked and silent; the torpedo defense batteries on the battleship still lacked a target; the noise of the machine gun became distinct. Two aeroplanes were fighting—an American machine pursued by a monoplane of the enemy and driven back over the American ships. Bob saw the duel but a flashing second as the aircraft swept overhead. The smoke was disappearing; the destroyer, which had been belching the pall, appeared again—or rather three of them appeared where there had been four.

"Range, one, nine, O double O!" the telephone transmitters in the turret were talking again. The visual upon the bulkhead displayed the range as the sightsetters sprang to their sights.

"Commence firing!"

The Arizona had passed through the zone where the enemy's submarines had waited; the American observers in the aeroplanes and on the destroyers far ahead had reported no more submersibles in a position of danger; those which had been passed could not, submerged, overtake the battleships. The Pennsylvania, with its patrol of destroyers ahead and on both sides, also was safe. Far, far ahead the great cruisers of the enemy appeared in flight. A mast was gone from one of the Peras, the third ship in the line at which the Arizona had been firing. The gun crew cheered as Bob reported it to them; cheered again for the Pennsylvania as he told the men that the Carthage lacked a funnel. The enemy had been hit and were in flight.

"Boys, that was the Balch they torpedoed! Boys, for the Balch—and for the Salem the other day!"

The right gun leaped back in its recoil as the firing pointer pressed his key. The roar of a gun from the Pennsylvania boomed in rivalry over the water. Both ships were firing but one gun again to find the range before firing by salvos.

"Up five hundred!" the order came from the elevation of the sight; and, after the sight was corrected and the gun fired, "Up two hundred!" Up! Up! Up! The Peras and the Carthage were drawing away. They had been hit—hard hit—the Carthage battle cruiser and the rear Pera. One had lost a funnel, a mast was down on the other. They must have been damaged below; but they were drawing away from the American pursuit, no matter what the engine crews of the Arizona and the Pennsylvania could do. Smoke—the smoke from the funnels of destroyers such as had hid the American dreadnaughts from the regent's submarines—was rising in a cloud about the enemy's cruisers; they no longer were trying to lure the American ships out; they were not firing back; they were trying only to get away. And they were doing it, although they had been hit—hard hit, two of them—they were doing it. They had lost a couple of knots speed, perhaps; but they could spare them, and more.

"Up two hundred!" the mockery came from the fire control station. "Up! Up!"

The guns could not be elevated any farther; the gun crews, sweating and gasping, loaded frantically, desperately, to give the Pera one more shot—"for the Balch, boys!"—before the enemy were beyond a chance. But the officers in the conning tower were giving it up. The bugles blew:

"Cease firing!"

Louden, the firing pointer, pressed his fingers on his key. The gun beside him leaped back and the air outside was riven. It was after the bugle had blown. Louden turned and faced Wendell with eyes burning.

"I beg your pardon, sir; but I was 'on' and—my brother was boatswain on the Balch!"

ARMY IS ORDERED OUT FOR MANEUVERS.

By Wm. Donahey

"WELL, General," said the Old Soldier one morning as he stepped into the teenie weenie library, "I think it would be a good idea to take advantage of the nice weather we are having and call out the army for maneuvers."

"That's a fine idea," answered the General. "Just as soon as you can enlist two more men so as to bring the army up to full war strength, I'll give the order for maneuvers."

The Dunce and Gogo were duly enlisted and carefully drilled by the Old Soldier, who wished the army to make the very best appearance when it marched away.

Five mice were hired to pull the heavy wagons and cannon and to mount the General.

The Dutchman was to command the artillery and the Indian and the Cowboy were to act as scouts.

With the Chinaman to help, the Cook made all arrangements for the food of the little army, and the Doctor was to look after the health of the soldiers with the assistance of the Lady of Fashion as nurse.

The Cook was kept very busy for several days getting the provisions ready, for it takes a great lot of food to supply an army. Eleven grains of coffee, twenty-nine beans, one hundred and fifty-seven grains of rice, four raisins, two prunes, and a quantity of cheese for the horses had to be piled into the tiny army wagon.

Early one bright sunny morning, amid much waving of tiny handkerchiefs, the little army marched gayly away.

None of the soldiers knew just where the army was headed, as the General had kept their destination a secret, but as the great blue outline of the Ash Hill range of mountains grew clearer it was plain to every one that the General meant to give them a long, hard march.

"Men," shouted the General, as he rode along the line of soldiers who had been drawn up at thefoot of the mountain, "I know that it will be a hard pull, but I think you need the practice, so I'm going to ask you to climb this ash heap."

The Dunce gave one dismal look at the mountain, at the huge cinders, bottles, and tin cans that lined its steep side. "But, General," he wailed, touching his cap in salute, "wh-wh-why can't we ma-ma-march around the mountain instead of going over it, it will be so-so-so much easier?"

"It's the practice we need," answered the General," "that's why I ask you to make this hard climb."

"Pretty soft for you, when you can ride a mouse," muttered the Dunce, as he stepped back into line.

"Silence!" roared the General. "Arrest that man for talking back to an officer."

The Dunce was placed under arrest at once, handcuffed and marched over the mountain between four soldiers with fixed bayonets.

It was a long, hard climb over the mountain and it was quite a job to get the heavy cannon up the steep sides, but by 2 o'clock in the afternoon all the wagons, artillery, and men had passed over to the other side.

Orders were given to fall out for lunch, and you may believe that the little soldiers lost no time in opening their tiny knapsacks and devouring the two grains of rice that had been issued to them that morning.

After a short rest, and after the soldiers had filled their canteens from a pan of water near by, the army once more fell into line and marched on.

Healthy, Happy and Younger looking was Mrs. Lane after I REDUCED HER 36 POUNDS IN SIX WEEKS

Mrs. Lane as she appears minus her 36 superfluous pounds

By Antoinette Donnelly

DURING the fifth and sixth weeks of the amazing reduction of my model, Mrs. Eva Lane, from 204½ pounds to 168½ pounds I gave her no new exercises. The sixteen exercises which I had already given her at the rate of four new ones each week she practiced during the fifth and sixth weeks' work. As you will remember, with each week's new set of exercises Mrs. Lane kept up those of the preceding week or weeks, so that by the beginning of the fifth week none of the exercises given her were forgotten. In fact, by the beginning of the fifth week Mrs. Lane was able to do every one of the sixteen exercises at least fifty times and many of them up to 200 times.

She not only could do them, but she did them, and she got real joy out of doing them. During the last two weeks' work she went through the entire sixteen exercises at least three times a day, in the morning, in the afternoon, and at night.

The muscle soreness which she felt after exercising during the earlier stage of her work had disappeared almost entirely by the beginning of the fifth week. However, I had my model continue with the shower bath after each period of exercising, always finishing off with as cold water as she could stand, and following it with a vigorous rubbing with a Turkish towel to prevent colds.

The fifth week netted Mrs. Lane a loss of six and one-half pounds, and the sixth week she lost five and one-half, making a total loss at the end of the six weeks of thirty-six pounds.

Mrs. Lane's diet for the last two weeks changed little from that of the previous week.

For breakfast: Half orange or half grapefruit, unsweetened; soft boiled egg without butter; small dry roll or dry piece of toast; coffee or tea (without cream or sugar).

Lunch: Small bowl of clear broth; all she wanted of lettuce or cucumbers or celery, prepared without oil or cream dressing.

Dinner: Three ounces of steak, or chicken, or roast beef, or fish; generous helping of sprouts, or onions, or asparagus, or string beans, prepared without butter or cream or oils; coffee or tea without sugar or cream.

At the beginning of my work of reducing Mrs. Lane I had to buy a size 50 middy blouse for her; anything smaller would not permit of freedom of movement. At the end of the fifth week she was wearing a size 42 blouse, which allowed of ample room for easy movements.

A feature of the reduction which tickled Mrs. Lane and which would be equally gratifying to any woman with a spark of the eternal feminine in her makeup was the fact that she found at the end of her six weeks' work that a new pair of shoes she had bought before she started to reduce were too large for her after the loss of her thirty-six pounds. From her ankles Mrs. Lane removed an inch of girth and her instep showed a noticeable decrease in size.

You can see in her photograph, illustrated herewith, that Mrs. Lane's loss of flesh had no ill effects on her health or disposition. Her face and her neck are without a wrinkle, as a result of her constant attention to the value of massaging them daily. Her color is splendid and her skin is taut and firm.

Mrs. Lane never missed a day of her household duties during the time of reduction and at the end of the sixth week she had made plans to move. She reported to me at the end of the week after moving and said she had never felt better in her life.

I heard recently of a woman who had gone on a milk diet. For thirty days she had no other food than milk. She claimed to have reduced eighteen pounds in the month's treatment. Again, I heard of another woman who went on an apple diet, eating nothing but apples, and she claimed to have lost eight pounds in two weeks.

Neither of these women was doing anything in the way of exercise to build up the muscles, blood, bone, skin, and new tissues. The chances are ten to one that when they got through with the apple and milk diet they were neither good to look at nor well in body.

A great many of my readers may not have the time nor the desire nor the heroic energy of Mrs. Lane, but still wish to reduce as much as my model did. I cannot guarantee a satisfactory result unless you are willing to work and to diet as she did. But you can accomplish results in getting rid of your flesh gradually and in a perfectly healthy way if you are willing to go without the foods that are fat producing, and at the same time build up your body with a certain amount of exercise.

The above are but a few of the most common fat producing and anti-fat foods. A list of foods you should avoid and those you need not avoid is given on this page.

You may rid yourself of a couple of pounds a week with little effort by cutting out of your diet the fattening foods. I will give you a list of foods for you to keep in mind when you are preparing or ordering a meal to which the "touch me not" label should be appended if you are in earnest about reducing.

Bacon, ham, pork, and the fat of any meat. Cereals, breakfast foods, bread, and biscuits; potatoes, corn, rice, macaroni, lentils; milk, butter, cream, cheese; rich gravies, grease of any kind or olive oils; pastry, rich desserts, cake, ice cream, soda water, chocolates, bonbons, and alcohol in any form whatever.

When you read over the above list it probably occurs to you that there is nothing left to eat. Which is not so at all, and I shall give you another list to prove my assertion. The following things you may eat:

Roast beef, steak, mutton, lamb; in fact, all kinds of meat except pig in any form; game of every description, and fish, lobsters, oysters, clams, etc; nearly every kind of fruit; salad of most vegetables without cream, butter, and oil dressings. Mushrooms, tomatoes, cucumbers, celery, pickles, olives, string beans, spinach, cabbage, turnips, cauliflower, Brussel sprouts, beets, carrots, squash, endives, artichokes, radishes, lettuce, parsnips, tomatoes, onions, asparagus, and almost all other green vegetables.

There are a few precautions you must take, along with the diet and a certain amount of daily exercise. You must step lively. When you begin to find yourself looking for a chair to sit down on when you could just as well stand; when you are tempted to ride when you could as well walk; when you are tempted to remain in bed in the morning when you have had all the sleep you really require, and when you get the daily nap habit you better make up your mind that you are going to stand firm against every such lazy temptation, because they add flesh.

Remember, too, that when you eat of the foods that are mentioned above as nonfat producing you must be reasonably moderate in your eating of them, eating only when you are hungry. Do not drink with your meals, because you can get along with much less food if you chew it slowly and properly instead of washing it down half masticated.

Answers to Questions on Obesity.

FLO: The bicycle pedaling movement should be practiced for reducing your hips. With hands clasping knees, thighs flexed on abdomen, foot extended, toes pointing outward, push legs forward alternately with resistance. Begin by doing the exercise five times and gradually increasing to fifty times.

BETTY: Yes, it is absolutely necessary when you are reducing to give especial attention to your chin. If you neglect it you will find there will be "wattles" where a second chin was before. Practice this exercise at least once a day, preferably before going to bed. Stretch flat on your back, the crown of your head on the floor. Slowly raise your head until your chin touches your chest, then lower it again, keeping heels and shoulders on the floor all the time. Begin with five times, increasing daily up to fifty times or more. Be sure to finish with massage of the neck, ending with a rubbing over with ice.

MARGARET L.: You say your flesh is all in your waist, for which trouble I should recommend the side body bending exercise. Stand erect, with your knees stiffened and arms raised high above your head. Bend your body at the waist only and try to touch the tips of your fingers to the floor on the opposite side to the hand you use; alternate with the other hand. Begin with five times each and increase to fifty or seventy-five.

MEN AND WOMEN

"CHICAGO women, more than any women in the world, are energy mad. They are pursuing outside interests to the detriment of their homes, the indifference of their husbands, and the absolute neglect of their children."

The above accusation comes from the lips of an eastern society woman. She further deplores the intense living of Chicago society women in the following words:

Chicago Women Energy Mad.

"Chicago husbands are the most patient men in the world, the most long suffering, and the most abused. They work at a driving pace all day long and then in the evening they are dragged hither and yon by their wives to this reception and that, to this entertainment and that. The result is a preponderance of widows. There are few widowers in Chicago and few old men.

"As for the women, their list of activities seems endless. There are entertainments for the French war orphans, for the French Red Cross, for the Serbian Red Cross, for the Belgian relief fund, for the American Ambulance society, for the societies for establishing vocations for one legged Frenchmen and one armed Englishmen after the war. Then there are clubs for social science, public speaking, preparedness clubs, peace promulgating clubs, etc. A glance through the society columns of the papers for the last three months reveals an infinite variety of interests. An attempt to find the average Chicago society woman in after 9 in the morning shows that my accusation is not unfounded. Sometimes they can be caught breathless before a luncheon—but not often.

"Chicago society women," she continues, "are neglecting their first and greatest duty to home and children, while they are spending their best energies looking after the children of Europe and other outside charities.

"They leave their children to be taken care of by incompetent hirelings. There is no governess class in this country as there is in Europe—by that I mean women who have been born and bred in the business. Many New York women bring governesses over with them from Europe. But Chicago women are dependent on girls who are in reality in the servant class. They leave their children in their care and take enormous risks in so doing."

In fervid energy expenditure does the Chicago woman far exceed the New York women?

If so, what is the reason for it? Is it because Chicago society is newer, the women consequently less poised, more possessed with the newly rich desire to be continually among those "prominently mentioned"? Is it the mistaking of self-centeredness for self-sacrifice? Are these women using the charity that covers a multitude of sins as a guise under which they may indulge themselves in selfish pleasure? Or is it that these women, no longer satisfied with what money can buy and deaf to any such proposition as work in the literal sense, must rush about like mad to clubs, bridge, luncheons, and war benefits in order to fight off ennui?

The preponderance of widows in all large cities gives weight to the theory that husband killing is the great crime of our American women. If Chicago has more widows than other large and older cities might it not be concluded again that the money making machine the newly rich man must make of himself in order to meet the demands of social upkeep is responsible? Certainly the Chicago men are not a weak and sickly lot. Therefore, the wives who give their husbands no time at night to recuperate from the staggering burden, but drag them from the fireside night after night to this festivity and that, must be contributing heavily to the annual sacrifice.

It is reasonable to believe that a society woman whose calendar is so filled with engagements that she can rarely be reached over her home telephone has little time for the care and upbringing of her children.

Periodically a tour of questionable cafés and dance halls is made by women investigators and reports descriptive of the scenes witnessed are forthwith presented to the public.

Cleaning Up Public Dance Halls.

At first thought one is inclined to look upon these cabaret pilgrimages in the light upon which a certain famous peace ship expedition was viewed. So much importance is given in the reports to the violation of the hours of selling drinks, to the garish and glary furnishings, to the caliber of the songs perpetrated and to the popularity of the cigaret among the female patrons. Criticism is made that the evil cafés profit through the advertising; therefore the uselessness of the tours.

On sober judgment it must be granted that investigating tours must lead to a cleaner city. The constant piling upon the back of an administration the faults for which it is responsible must in time either break it completely or bend it to a better shape.

Waking parents up to the unhealthy temptations of these evil cafés will do more toward forcing them into an active interest in a cleaner administration than all the political talks on record.

The proposed ordinance divorcing liquor and public dancing which these women hope to have presented before the city council this week is a tremendously valuable step toward eliminating the viciousness of the public dance hall.

ANTOINETTE DONNELLY.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are,

Versatile.

Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"JACK OF ALL TRADES," without the unkind implication contained in the latter part of this much used quotation, is truly applicable to you Taurus people whose birthdays come this week. You can turn your attentions to the stage, to art, to teaching, to decorating, to politics, to farming, to detective work, and to the stock exchange, with almost equal assurance of success. You are mathematical, too, and calculate well before you move; in other words, you are shrewd.

You have much persistency, stubbornness, and audacity, a trio of qualities that makes you rather hard to please at times. When things go wrong with you you become bitter and uncharitable in your remarks, for you lay your plans so carefully that when they do miscarry it reflects upon your ability. You need to learn to take defeat gracefully, to be a good loser.

When you see that it will redound to your own interests you can be exceedingly pleasant and politic. Although you are rather hard to please, yet you are affectionate by nature, especially towards those of whom you are fond.

Any social pleasures or outdoor sports appeal to you; wherever there is a crowd there you'll be found in the midst of things. You like to travel, are apt to make many changes, for you are always looking for some betterment of condition for yourself and family.

You have an eye for the beautiful and ornamental and know how to decorate yourself as well as others, so as to bring out the good points and hide the defects. In fact, artistic, beautiful surroundings are almost necessary to your happiness. You are always on the lookout for developing, improving, and producing something beautiful and unique. Man or woman, you will make an ideal florist and your garden will show a variety of form and color not found elsewhere.

But with all this artistic sense you are so irritable at times that you fairly kill the interest of the onlookers. When these spells come over you you want everybody to keep out of the way. You are always quick in movement and not patient with those who get in your way. Yours is a positive nature. One that can adapt itself to any condition, and yet stick to a principle.

Rarely will a miser be found among you, for money with you is only a means to an end, and you give of it freely in charity and generously among your friends. In line with this generosity is a desire to entertain lavishly, which you much prefer to do in your own home. Though you may often change the moorings of this home spot, yet, to be contented, you should always have your home port. Nothing escapes you on your many travels, and you gain much in this way, even if you do use up most of your savings.

When you have an important decision to make you should be alone, for you are apt to be influenced too much by those about you. In fact, it would be well for you to plan to be alone once in a while, for you can accomplish twice as much if you concentrate in this way.

You should be careful in choosing your friends and associates, for once these companions have gained your sympathies they will come to have an unconscious control over you. Don't be too sensitive as to what people say or think of you; set your own standards, make them high, and stick to them.

Being the head sign of the earth, you will be congenial with those born in Capricornus, Dec. 3-Jan. 20. Should you marry a Libra person, Sept. 4-Oct. 23, there will be congeniality on a more intellectual basis. Scorpio, Oct. 24-Nov. 22, being your exact opposite in the zodiac, would also make a happy union. But in any of these unions the chances of a Taurus person's happiness depend greatly upon himself.

Your most fortunate times in the year are the two weeks beginning Sept. 5 and Jan. 11; your colors, azure, red, and yellow; birthstones, agate and emerald.

Ask Him to the Party.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have a question which I would like to ask you, and I hope you will answer it in your corner. There is a boy in our school with whom I feel I would like to get better acquainted. He is bashful, and so pays little attention to the girls. Would it be all right for me to ask him to a party I am going to give soon? Of course, I don't want him to think I am running after him. My parents approve of him, but I still hesitate about asking him and I would like your advice on the subject. W."

Surely, ask him; this point of etiquette is so different from deliberately asking him to call or take you some place. I don't think you need worry about his feelings on the matter, for after the party it will be up to him to make the next move; if he doesn't, then your efforts will have been in vain.

Names and Horoscopes.

"Dear Miss Blake: Will you please give horoscopes for the dates Jan. 7 and Aug. 31? What are the meanings of the following names: Naomi, Leona, Harry, Guy?"

Write again, girls and boys, and send me a stamped, addressed envelope, and don't forget to repeat the dates of your birthdays. Both Naomi and Leona are names that have no particular meaning associated with them, further than the Biblical connection of the former. Harry is a latter day derivation of Henry, meaning "the head of a house," and Guy should be a "leader."

They Miss Each Other.

"Dear Miss Blake: I would like to have some of your good advice. I am a young man of 21 and went with a girl of 20 in my home town until four weeks ago, when I left her to visit my mother and father until next July and to work.

"I have gone with this girl steadily for over eight months and I love her. We are exchanging letters, and she often writes that she wishes I would come back. She says she misses me greatly. It is not so I can return to her before summer.

"Would it be proper for me to write and ask her to come here to visit? If so, should I offer to send her a round trip ticket? Please answer and I shall be obliged to you. WORRIED."

Although you omitted saying whether or not you two are engaged, I'm used to drawing conclusions. So, if I am right in my surmise, it would be considered perfectly proper for your fiancée to come for a visit at the invitation of your mother. The matter of railroad fare should be settled between you; if she would rather pay her own, don't insist, although it would be thoughtful of you to send her a ticket. Remember, all this is true only if you are engaged!

She's Cold at Times.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have a girl friend I go with. She says she loves me, but treats me coldly at times. She is a nice girl, and I would like to know whether to go with her any longer or not. R. K."

It always has been and, I suppose, always will be, a prerogative of woman to be changeable—in other words, to keep a man guessing. You will just have to remain patient and faithful, unless, of course, she is unreasonable; then the best plan is to ignore her for a while. Don't be at all discouraged over the state of your affairs.

He's Stopped Writing.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 15 years of age. I am in love with a young man three years my senior. I met him last September. He fell in love with me when we met. He ceased to write, and I would like to keep his friendship. He wrote several times a week. He has no steady pal. I wrote to him several times, but received no answer. B."

I really believe that he has "fallen out" again, sad news as it may be to you. One must face facts sometimes, and I think you had better make up your mind to forget this hero and look elsewhere. You are too young to be taking life so seriously, and I don't like to be the one to tell you that men, like women, are apt to "change their minds and hearts," but as long as you insist upon being grown up you might as well absorb this fact. Therefore do not write him again; let him come to you, which he will do if he is still interested.

Such Sensible Girls.

"Dear Miss Blake: When a boy friend stays home from school on account of sickness, is it being too forward for one of us to phone to his mother asking how he is feeling? We are both quite studious and never let boys interfere with our studies, but we like to have boy chums. Is this right of us? TWO GIRLS."

I think it would be a kind, thoughtful act on your part to phone the boy's mother, to find out how he was. You girls seem to have the right idea about your boy friends, and it's an attitude to be encouraged rather than discouraged. I wish there were more like you.

She's Self-Conscious.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am a boy in high school, and there also is a girl there I love very much. We walk together and many times speak, but when she is with other girls she never speaks. What is the reason? I know she likes me very well."

It's probably due entirely to bashfulness, for can't you just hear those girls who are with her saying, "There goes your fellow, why don't you speak to him"? And naturally she goes to the other extreme. Don't worry your head about this apparent slight if she is nice to you at other times.

To Remove Superfluous Hair Is Easy

Fashion decrees the sleeveless gowns, the transparent sleeves and the thin hosiery. This demands the removal of all unsightly hairs from arms, under arms and ankles. This is quite easy and safe to do if the proper means are employed. The electric needle is only painful and expensive, and, unless in the hands of a skillful operator, quite dangerous. Next to the electric needle the only safe, sure and painless way is to dissolve the hairs. This can be done quickly and safely by the use of

SULFO SOLUTION

Pastes and powders only burn hairs off at the roots, having the same effect as a razor, making them grow in heavier than before, while Sulfo Solution in dissolving the hairs, gets at the roots, taking all the vitality out of them, finally killing them entirely. Sulfo Solution is scientific in every way and will not injure the most delicate skin. Any drug or department store will sell you a bottle for $1.00 or you can get it direct from the makers, Cooper Pharmacal Co., 880 Thompson Building, Chicago, Ill.

Hairy Growths Devitalized

Stubborn growths of coarse hair which have been caused by the unwise use of pastes, rub-on preparations and worthless imitations of De Miracle, which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin, can only be devitalized with De Miracle, the original liquid hair remover, because it attacks hair under the skin as well as on the skin. Well groomed women always use De Miracle for removing hair from limbs and under the arms. De Miracle never disappoints. Buy it by name and you will get the depilatory

Le BON TON says

It is "the best method in the world today." Genuine magazines of the highest character endorse only De Miracle. Beware of so-called endorsements of bogus magazines which are used to exploit the sale of questionable depilatories.

It has a binding guarantee in each package which entitles you to your money if it fails. In $1.00 and $2.00 bottles. If your dealer will not supply you buy a bottle at The Public Drug Co., Buck & Rayner's six stores, or direct, postpaid, in plain wrapper. De Miracle Chemical Co., Dept. THERE is joy in the land when the apple blossoms spread their veil of pink about the orchard. And when the birds carol gayly and the gentle summer winds send the pale green leaves a-fluttering along the boughs, the summer girl rejoices in the loveliness of her background. Blessed whit youth and ofttimes with great beauty of face and form, the favored damsel does not forget that clothes also add much to her charm. Simplicity is one of the chief characteristics of the summer girl's dress, while fascinating colors are cleverly used to accentuate the charm of her youthful beauty.

In the accompanying illustration an exceptionally interesting frock is pictured at the right. The loose basque of pale buff faille, suggestive of the peasant's smock, is elaborated with beautiful bead embroidery, a trimming that is also successfully employed on the foundation skirt of lighter tone. The sleeves, extending just below the elbow, are deeply slashed so that dainty undersleeves of flesh pink chiffon are revealed, and these as well as the front of the loose basque are also ornamented with bead embroidery. The picturesque chapeau is of flesh tulle with roses of the same delicate shade.

At the opposite side another most delightful model is portrayed. Gray organdie is chosen for its fashioning and an effective trimming is achieved in the bands which are of a rather darker tint. Designed full, the skirt is elaborately shirred. The bodice has a short peplum in the back and in the front a fine chemisette of sheer white batiste adds to the daintiness of this creation. The sleeves finished with cuffs that extend but part way around the arms, are tied with grosgrain ribbon of a pale gray tone. The hat, made of horsehair braid, retains the pleasing simplicity that distinguishes this frock, for its only adorning is a soft fold of gray silk.

As headgear is always of great importance in the dress of the fashionable woman as well as her debutante sister, several decidedly attractive models are pictured above. A hat that immediately sets one thinking of long summer days in the "leafy month of June" centers the trio. This is developed in crême horsehair. About the crown and drooping well over the brim is a darned tulle drape, and around this is banded some old gold gauze ribbon with roses of the same shimmering material at each side of the crown.

At the upper left is a decidedly smart hat. This, too, is maide of horsehair braid in an attractive shade of ecru. Flaring high above the crown are masses of uncurled ostrich in the same shade and, as if to conceal the junction of feathers and straw, a band of dull blue grosgrain ribbon is drawn about the hat and bowed at the sides, the long loose ends falling well below the ear.

A wealth of flower trimming is revealed in the other little hat that is illustrated on this page. These are made of gauze in wonderful rose tones that harmonize well with the flesh crêpe from which the hat is evolved. A grosgrain ribbon of dull green gold encircles the crown and is lightly looped at one side, for ribbons seem to have won the good graces of Dame Fashion this season.

Veils of chantilly not infrequently soften the riotous colors of the blossoms that are lavishly strewn about the brim or plied high on the crown. While ostrich feathers are favored for some of the smartest hats, many of the trim street models are adorned with wings. These in the lovely new cyclamen shades are exceedingly beautiful and prove becoming to the young woman.

All sizes and shapes have apparently been approved by the leaders of fashion, for one finds tiny chapeaux of fine Milan that at first glance look especially like skull caps. On closer inspection, however, one finds that they often boast of a daring feather trimming that stands far from the hat, although some are merely encircled by a narrow ribbon.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

FROM time to time some one writes asking what is the best way to make coffee and what is the best pot to use. In a letter on this subject, which came some time back, was the following sentence: "The uncertain outcome of boiled coffee left to the discretion of various and sundry cooks makes me wish for a recipe that cannot fail."

Is there such a recipe? I should say not, and yet I cannot see why filtered coffee cannot always be good ,and filtered coffee is the saftest to drink. The filter or drip method is that quite universally used for making black coffee, or that in which cream and sugar are not used, and with good reason. With a good coffee, filtered coffee cannot have that under or metallic taste that boiled coffee has, and that percolated coffee often may have. The best and most famous coffee makers in the world use the filter.

There are all sorts of adaptations or compounds of the filter, but in the south during the most meager years of that section any high container over which could be stretched a cloth was used. Today with a strainer in which we can lay a piece of linen doubled, set into the top of any coffee pot, may take the place of a filter top.

"You cannot make coffee without using coffee," said a cookery expert in her lecture recently, and she was wholly consistent to this when she made it, but she used four times more granulated coffee than is needed of pulverized coffee by the filter method. If not pulverized just the amount she used is correct even for the filter. She took three-fourths of a cup of granulated coffee to three measuring cups of boiling water for the old fashioned coffee pot, that is, four level tablespoons of coffee for each cup of water. For percolated coffee she used even more, and this was consistent, for stronger coffee can be made by boiling.

Like many cooks she would not use pulverized coffee because there might be grounds in the liquid. In fact, it is nearly impossible to make what we consider ideal coffee by boiling pulverized coffee, although Turkish coffee is made with this.

But notice! I, or anybody else, with good coffee pulverized, can with one level tablespoon to one measuring cup of boiling water, make a coffee of fine flavor, clear and bright, and strong enough for the ordinary drinker. It will also, from the health standpoint, be the safest coffee that can be made. You cannot make percolated coffee of equal strength and flavor with this small amount, or I cannot, and boiled coffee need not enter into the question. Using the same piece of double linen, scalding all my utensils so as to have them hot, wetting the coffee first, and then slowly adding the rest of the cup of water, I cannot with granulated coffee get a beverage of equal strength without the four tablespoons.

It is safe to say that at least nine people out of ten use four times as much coffee and four times as much fire as they need in making coffee, and then get a poor article. Yet thrift is no longer scoffed at among the intelligent. In fact, large numbers of people are taking delight in being thrifty because it enlarges the possibilities of life so greatly.

A young American woman whom I know, who has never been able to live on any modest sum, loves to tell of one of the things she heard in a home in Germany where she was a guest. The mother in the home asked the daughter how many coffee beans [wie vielen bohnen] had been used in the morning coffee. This guest insisted that they counted them one by one, but probably they were measured by spoon or cup. Yet why should it not be a good question to ask? A rounding tablespoon of the best coffee costs about the same as a 2 cent stamp, and who would use four stamps where one would do?

At any rate there is no excuse for not using pulverized coffee when making coffee essence or coffee for cold drinks." It is almost impossible to get a cold boiled coffee that does not have an under taste which comes out when it is used for flavoring and is anything but lovely.

When the Hundred club was organized in France some years ago for the sake of preserving the culinary art of that country, one of the precepts of the gourmet members was: "One recognizes a good hotel from the coffee it supplies. No chicory! Coffee is made slowly with boiling water. Any coffee prepared beforehand is necessarily bad coffee."

One of our own leading lecturers on the home gives the following rules which are of the best: When coffee is to be served at different times during a reasonable period it should not be allowed to cool and then be heated up again, but should be kept hot. Reboiled coffee is most unwholesome. Allow at least five minutes for coffee to settle. The cloth used in making coffee should never be allowed to dry, but should be scalded daily, and sometimes boiled with a little soda.

Morning Coffee.

One tablespoon of pulverized coffee to each cup of freshly boiling water. Use heavy unbleached cotton for filter or coarse old linen doubled. If a quantity of coffee is to be made, the best effect is obtained by adding enough water to wet the coffee the first time and then add more at intervals of five minutes or so. For a cup pour the cup of boiling water slowly over the coffee. For black coffee use twice the measure of coffee as for the morning cup.

Cold Coffee.

Cold coffee well made is nearly or quite as satisfactory as coffee frappé and less expensive. Use two tablespoons of pulverized coffee for each cup of boiling water and filter. Add to the coffee while hot from one to four tabelspoons of sugar a cup according to taste. For each cup of coffee allow two-thirds of a cup of milk and a third of a cup of cream. Bring these to a boil and cool. Put the two together and chill.

Before serving in cold glasses whip with same eggbeater that you use to whip cream. In serving stir in a little whipped cream if you choose. If egg yolks are used this mixture is cooked over the fire until it thickens.

Coffee Essence.

However made, the rule for coffee essence is to use three times the coffee used for making the beverage. This is a safe rule when pulverized coffee is filtered by the above method.

Percolated Coffee.

Use fresh cold water for percolated coffee. It will commence to percolate almost as soon as it is placed over the special iron plate or as soon as the electricity is turned on if made that way. When it is time for it to boil watch carefully. The steam on the glass decides the time rather than the steam through the spout.

Mocha Cake Filling.

Many of the recipes for mocha fillings give a recipe which is nothing but a hard sauce flavored with coffee, vanilla, and often two teaspoons of cocoa to make it darker. Both the cocoa and vanilla seem to enhance the coffee flavor. But it is hard to get this filling smooth, and a finer filling and icing may be made with a custard foundation, as follows: Sift three-fourths of a cup of powdered sugar and work into it four egg yolks until the whole is light and smooth. Add to this, a little at a time, one cup of boiling milk, stirring over the fire all the time. Remove from fire, flavor and strain, and stir frequently while cooling. Two tablespoons of coffee essence ought to be sufficient. To one-half cup of this custard when it is lukewarm add four ounces of creamed butter, and beat the two until light and smooth. A little vanilla may be added extra, or the cocoa, to make it darker. This custard basis is a good one for ice cream, Bavarian cream, etc.

Worried About the Future.

It seems to me that at times I have the happy—or unhappy—faculty of "feeling in my bones" things that are about to happen. At any rate, I awoke one morning a few months ago with a strong feeling that a young man in whom I was much interested would call that morning.

Accordingly, I did not put on my regular working outfit, but dressed my hair with great care and donned a pretty pink dressing jacket and a white skirt. My feelings proved true, as about 8 o'clock the bell rang and on opening the door there stood my friend. He had tried to reach me by telephone, but failing, had come around to invite me to a party that evening. He had never seen me except at night and I could see he was pleased and surprised at my appearance at so early an hour.

Well, after the party he told me that I had looked so neat and so sweet in the morning that he had decided I was the girl for him.

We are to be married soon, and although I am happy still the future worries me, because I am a woman that cannot work all fixed up nor cook in a frilly jacket, and perhaps as my husband he will be disenchanted.

Made Him Pay Up.

When I attended school I was the treasurer of my class, and among other duties I was forced to put the names of all who were delinquent in payment of their dues upon the board. Among the girls of the class I had but little trouble, but the boys were so forgetful. Jack was about the worst of all at the beginning of the year, and time after time it was my painful duty to write his name on the fatal column—painful because I secretly admired him. The thing seemed to prey on his mind, and made him less forgetful, and at the end of the term Jack's name was never on the board. And when he proposed he said it was all because I broke him of the hateful habit of carelessness, so he thought I would be a good helpmate on other things. O, yes, he said he loved me, too.

"It's an Ill Wind——"

I was hanging out the clothes one windy day, and after having the line well filled one of the supports of the clothes line gave way, letting the clothes fall to the ground. I was having my own troubles trying to get things straightened out when a young man a few doors distant saw the trouble I was in and came to my assistance. Thus we became acquainted, and after a brief courtship we were married, and I am proud to say that to this day my husband continues to assist me on washdays whenever it is possible.

No Chance to Get Away.

One day when I was still in the hands of the free my girl and I were walking past a group of boys playing cowboys and Indians. One of the boys threw his lasso and it lit right over us, the boys pulled it tight, and there we were tied up. The girl said to me laughingly, "They have tied the knot," and I replied that we ought to have it done over again. She consented.

Her Favorite Picture.

My best girl friend had been keeping company with a man for four years. They both "cared," but he seemed to lack the courage to pop the question so I made up my mind to help him.

My friend is somewhat of an artist and had just finished another of her paintings. He was to call that evening and as he loved her work, too, I changed the picture for the mirror and covered the easel as usual.

A few minutes after his arrival I drew him over to the easel and said: "Jack, this is the one Mary loves best out of all her work."

You can imagine Mary's surprise. She came up behind him and they were reflected there together in the glass. I beat a hasty retreat and he popped the question.

Now He's Taming the Shrew.

Edith and Tom were the best of friends and quite fond of each other's company, yet they invariably quarreled when together. Edith was known to be a spirited young woman, possessed of a quick temper and a scorching tongue. Tom was easy going, humorous, and a little inclined to tease.

On one occasion, when Edith was upbraiding Tom for his indolence and lack of ambition, she said to him stingingly:

"You need a wife who would bully you—a regular spitfire, with a dreadful temper and a shrewish disposition."

"Woman, it is your duty to marry me," retorted Tom solemnly.

They are married now, and Tom insists that it was Edith herself who convinced him that she was his true mate.

My Most Embarrassing Moment.

Cackled and Laid Egg.

I was going out to Maywood one day on a West Madison street car when along the line somewhere an Italian woman got on carrying a chicken with its legs tied.

She sat next to me, putting the chicken under the seat between us. The car was one of the old type with long seats facing each other and comfortably filled.

As I was about to leave there was a great flutter of wings at my feet and on looking down on the bottom of my gown was a new laid egg. The woman's face had a broad smile as she picked up the egg and chicken and she said: "Good-a chick." The car was simply in an uproar as I stalked out.

She "Fell for" Governor.

It occurred at a woman's club meeting, where Gov. Deneen was to give an address. I was to be the accompanist for the singer, and as I was gayly tripping (or gracefully, as I supposed) toward the piano I tripped on a rug and fell headlong before the entire audience, and, being of somewhat large proportions, it required some time for me to arise, but I reached the piano at last and played for the singer. Upon being introduced to the governor after the meeting I remarked: "Well, Gov. Deneen, you see I fell for you all right."

Lest We Forget

A GOOD MOTHER teaches her boy early to brush his teeth with Calox. Unless you are different from most folks you have perhaps thought of tooth powder, however, as somewhat similar in its action to silver polish. It is true that cleans the teeth and renders them pearly white. But it does more than this. When moistened it generates oxygen, nature's germicide and destroyer of dead organic matter. Oxygen works itself into the gums and deep recesses between the teeth, purifying and cleansing these spots so subject to decay.

CALOX

The Oxygen Tooth Powder

A test of Calox efficiency—try it on your child's teeth for a week—note the way it removes the stains and leaves them glossy white.

By the way, are your own teeth white? Try Calox—a generous sample may be had on request from your Druggist or from McKesson & Robbins, 91 Fulton St., New York

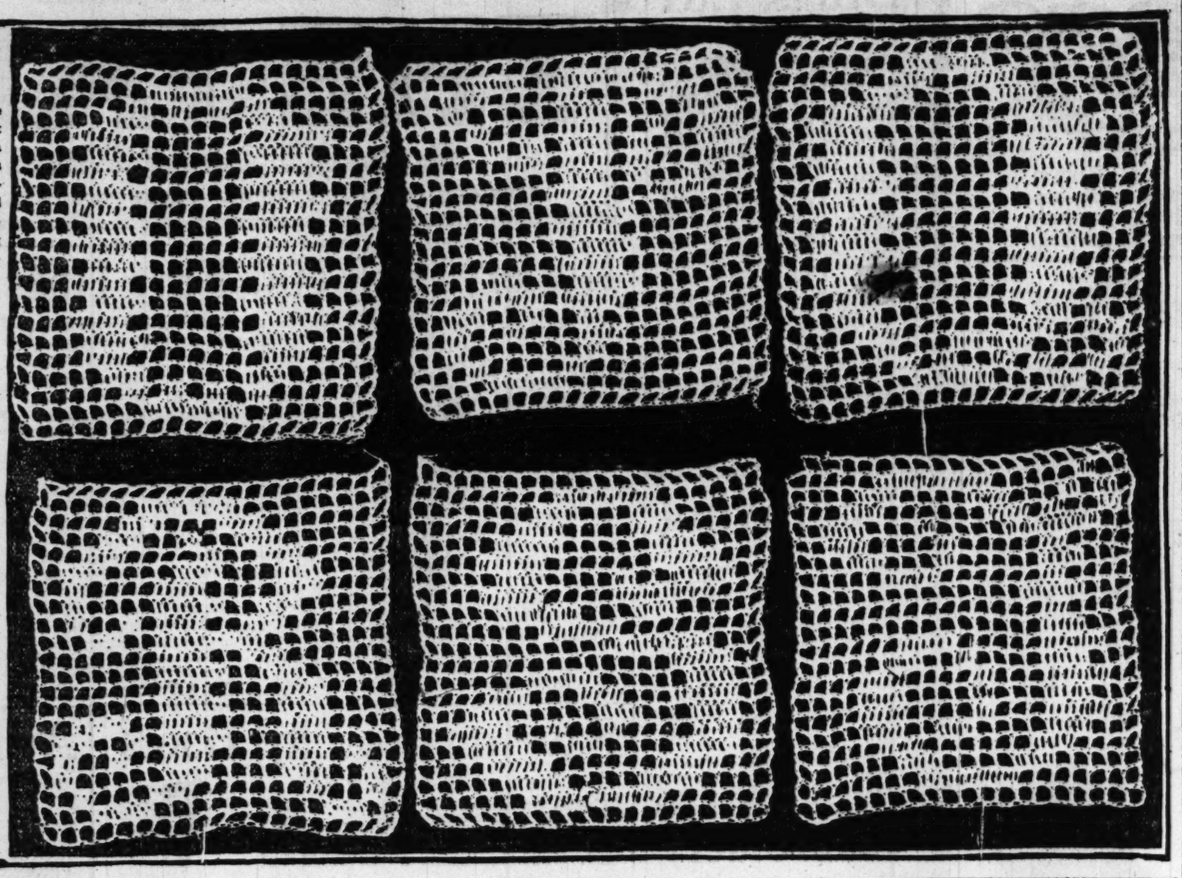
Theodore Haviland Limoges FRANCE

The Third Group of Initials in Filet Stitch.



These initials in filet are easily made and suggest many uses. The gift of a dresser scarf with initials inserted neatly and a pretty crocheted edge added certainly has a touch of individuality when coming directly from giver to receiver.

The size of the letters depends upon the number of the thread used. No. 30 is always a good number, neither too coarse nor too fine for ordinary uses. The smallest possible square for the letters is 19x19 meshes, and it is best to begin and finish with a row of plain meshes. All the letters shown are 19x21. If desired larger, crochet around the finished letter, adding any finish desired. A few rows of open meshes show the letter distinctly. By following the outline of the letter with a little practice a good initial is sure to result. Care is necessary to keep the letter well balanced, with an equal number of meshes on each side.

Before and After Marriage.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on marriage disillusions. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." Write on only one side of the paper.

He Was No Romeo.

I knew my husband only a few months before we were married, but in those few months I learned some mighty good traits about him. He did not drop on his knees like a Romeo and ask me to marry him, nor ask if I was some beautiful daughter of a millionaire. He simply said one blessed day: "Let's get married, kid."

My answer came in just two more words, "You bet." They came like a young Kansas cyclone. No lollypoppin' in the love line for me.

We have been married ten years, and I am positive there isn't a man on earth who could take his place in my affections. We will remain to each other what we have always been, "just sweethearts." The word "divorce" should be unknown in this world. E. B.

The Vacant Stare.

When we were planning our coming marriage he sat gazing at me in such a sweet way, and when I asked him what he was looking at he replied: "A cat may look at a queen." Since we have been married he looked at me in the same way—or so I thought—one day and I ventured to ask him what he was looking at and he answered: "Nothing much." G. J. M.

Those Awful Courting Days.

When I first knew him I vowed each time he called that would be the last. He stammered and stuttered and blushed when he spoke to me; he fidgeted and did not know what to do with his hands and feet; his tie crawled up and he had one unruly lock that would stand up in spite of constant smoothing; when he stood up his trouser legs stayed caught up on his shoe tops.

I laughed at the thought of ever marrying such a man, although he was good looking, extremely neat, and clever in an embarrassed sort of way. But I did marry him—he had an irresistible way about him. I found that he was only embarrassed in my company and that before we were married, for now he is the most attractive husband imaginable.

I tremble to think how near I came to "turning down" the best man in the world. We often laugh together over those "awful courting days." D. L.

FEEL YOUNG!

It's Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets for You!

Beware of the habit of constipation. It develops from just a few constipated days, unless you take yourself in hand.

Coax the jaded bowel muscles back to normal action with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel. Don't force them to unnatural action with severe medicines or by merely flushing out the intestines with nasty, sickening cathartics.

Dr. Edwards believes in gentleness, persistency, and Nature's assistance.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets open the bowels; their action is gentle, yet positive. There is never any pain or griping when Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are used. Just the kind of treatment old persons should have.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color. Take one or two occasionally and have no trouble with your liver, bowels or stomach. 10c and 25c per box. All druggists. The Olive Tablet Company, Columbus, Ohio.—Advertisement.

YOU CAN make your skin what you would love to have it

Your skin, like the rest of your body, is continually changing. As old skin dies, new skin forms. Every day, in washing, you rub off the dead skin.

This is your opportunity—you can make the new skin what you would love to have it by using the following treatment regularly.

Just before retiring work up a warm water lather of Woodbury's Facial Soap in your hands. Apply it to your face and rub it into the pores thoroughly—always with an upward and outward motion. Rinse with warm water, then with cold—the colder the better. If possible, rub your face for a few minutes with a piece of ice.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is the work of a skin specialist. This treatment with it will make your skin fresher and clearer the first time you use it. Make it a nightly habit and before long you will see a decided improvement—a promise of that lovelier complexion which the steady use of Woodbury's always brings.

Do this today! A 25c cake of Woodbury's Facial Soap is sufficient for a month or six weeks of this treatment. Go to your druggist or toilet counter today and get a cake. Begin at once to get the benefits of this treatment for your skin.

Woodbury's Facial Soap is for sale by every dealer and druggist in Chicago and, in fact, by dealers everywhere throughout the United States and Canada. Made by The Andrew Jergens Co., New York and Cincinnati.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

By MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"I WONDER if some of your kind people would care to write to me. I get terribly lonely and homesick sometimes, so that life seems hardly worth the living, although I have many blessings, too. But we came here a year ago, leaving friends, mother, and everything. I feel much alone most of the time. I have three darling children and the best husband ever, but I am just hungry for a few women to know. I do hope some of them will care to write. I am just 22 years old and a true Yankee. Mrs. H. M."

To me 22 seems young to be the mother of three children and I don't wonder the poor young wife feels lonely when she is transplanted from the midst of her family and friends and set down in an alien environment. I hope most sincerely that some one may be moved by her note to write for her address, inclosing stamp for reply, and thus get in touch with the little woman.

Hopes for Pen Friends.

"Along comes another reader with the hope of making pen friends through your Corner. I have always been interested in the west and so I wonder if perhaps some western readers would care to write to me. I am especially interested in large ranches, but would be pleased to hear from others, living in town, cities, or up in the mountains. Perhaps it would be best to say that I keep house for my daddy and am still on the sunny side of 20. Inclosed you will find some stamps, which is all I can give just now to the Corner. A. A. F."

Stamps are so welcome that it hardly seems reasonable to apologize for sending even a few, much less the generous gift that came with this letter. I should think there would be little doubt that correspondents would present themselves who would be glad to get in touch with this girl and write her the sort of letter she desires.

From Shakespeare's Play.

"Please say to C. C. B. that in act II., scene 3, of Shakespeare's 'Merchant of Venice,' she will find 'All that glistens is not gold; often have you heard that told.' I hope this may be of some use to you. E. V. M."

This is in reply to an inquiry regarding the phrase "All is not gold that glitters." I am obliged to E. V. M. for her thoughtfulness.

Making a Flower Garden.

"I am a widow with four children, the eldest 13 and the youngest 4. The only income is what I make from day to day, washing and ironing, or doing anything else I can. Two of the children go to school and I send them all to Sunday school. I want to do a little something to help others and will gladly send pieces for quilts to the woman asking for them, one of a kind; if she will send me her address and the pattern of the quilt I will cut out the pieces. I can also supply some recipes if these are desired. I would like to have flower seeds, as we are going to try to have a small garden this year. Here is a recipe for eggless cookies: One cup of lard, two cups of sugar, one cup of buttermilk, half teaspoon of soda, and flour to make a dough that can be handled. Roll out thin and cook in a hot oven.

"A. D."

If A. D. had given the signature of the friend who asked for quilt pieces we could have supplied the name and address, but as it is all we can do is to print the offer in the hope it may be of service to some one else. I am sorry we cannot print the larger part of the writer's appeal, but it is against the rules of the department to ask for clothing and I am therefore obliged to cut out the part of the letter containing her requests along that line.

Stacks of Old Magazines.

"I am not a Cornerite, but I read that department frequently, and thought perhaps I might help a little. I have stacks of old magazines, some of them running back years. I also have some of the current magazines, and would be glad to send any of them on to any one who would care to pay the postage on them. I have one paper every week and would send it on to some one who wishes to pay postage as I finish reading it myself. H. S."

I think the writer of this letter has qualified as a Cornerite by her kindly offer. I will put her name on file and give it gladly to any one who writes for it, inclosing stamp for reply.

Helps to Soften Hearts.

"I wonder if you could tell me how to pickle both green and ripe olives at home for family use and to gather them in order to obtain the best results; that is, how ripe should they be? Are they usable after dropping from the trees? I think the Corner is a splendid idea. I read all the letters each week, and wish I might help in every case. But I find all I can do and more right about me. I believe it helps to soften our hearts a little just to read or hear of those we are powerless to help. Please do not misunderstand me. It makes me feel sorry every time I hear of a sad case. But I mean that it makes us more kindly towards every one to know of the needy persons, even when we cannot help. We need to be reminded occasionally how really fortunate we are as compared with many others. I hope that the Corner may live forever! Such a number have been helped by it, and so many more need help.

This correspondent is so ready with her good words and works that I wish much I could give her the directions she wishes for putting up olives. This has been asked before by others and all I can do is to send forth a plea for assistance from some of the Helping Hand who know how to put up olives for home use and will give me the information. It shall appear in this department as soon as possible after it comes into my hands. I think we all agree with H. H. L. on the softening effect upon our hearts of learning of the trials of those less fortunate than ourselves.

Wild to Raise Some Chickens.

"I never miss a chance to read the Helping Hand and I wish it were in my power to give to each and every one who asks, but I am poor myself and come again with a request. I want to inquire if there is any one who can and will give me a setting of eggs and a hen. I am wild to raise some chickens, but I can't afford it. If some one could help me I would be so thankful and if I could get an incubator that some one does not need any longer I would be glad to return the favor by any means in my power. I see that Mrs. M. S. wishes to piece quilts on shares and I would be pleased to have her piece mine in that way if she has not already found all the work she needs in that line.

"Mrs. V. A. L."

I hope her desire for the eggs, hen, and incubator may be gratified. I have to report that Mrs. M. S. has already secured all the assistance she wishes in piecing quilts.

What Cornerite Forgot.

"I read that B. R. wants paper dolls for her 7 year old daughter. I am 12 years old and received some paper dolls in a magazine. I would be willing to send them to B. R.'s daughter and I hope no one else has got ahead of me. I would like to help in any way I can.

"Cornerite."

I am sorry that this would-be little helper omitted to give any signature or address which would enable me to supply her with the address of B. R.'s daughter. I hope this letter may meet the eyes of the 12 year old girl and that she will then tell me how to send her the address of the little girl who craves the paper dolls.

Would Write Entertaining Letters.

"I should so enjoy writing to some lonely people. Especially would I like to write to the children and the dear grandmothers. I am sure I could entertain them. Will they send me their addresses?

"Patience."

Who will accept this attractive offer and secure a delightful correspondent?

See a Physician.

"A Home Reader" asks for a doctor's prescription for her child. That is something we cannot give, and in the case she describes her best plan will be to take the child to a good physician and get a remedy. Such troubles as she mentions are not uncommon with young children, and are sometimes outgrown, but on the chance of there being a menace in the condition it is wiser to consult a doctor and not trust to any chance recommendations of the laity.

Cornmeal Cleans Fur.

"When cleaning white fur caps use cornmeal, working it in carefully; then shake it out. The meal will clean the fur nicely. It is cheaper than flour and after using can be given to the chickens as food, while the flour would be wasted. I have a year's number of magazines I would be glad to pass along to any one who would appreciate them. If some one who is hungry for good reading would care to pay the charges on them I would be glad to give them. I would like to arrange with some one for the exchange of something for roots of rhubarb. I will exchange a quilt top with some one for cretonne, calico, or anything I can use. I say a request a while ago for a washing fluid that had salts of tartar in it. I think the following is what is wanted. At any rate it is a good recipe and saves much hard work: Potash, one pound; sal ammoniac, one pound; salts of tartar, one ounce; five quarts of water. Use soft or rain water. Keep the mixture in an air tight receptacle. Use one cup of the fluid to three pails of water. When ready to boil or when soaking clothes over night add a little to the water put with them. C. E. E."

This is a helpful letter, and I was much interested in the personal note which accompanied it. I hope some one may be found who wishes the magazines and who can make the requested exchanges.

For and By BUSINESS GIRLS

Mary King.

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Miss Mary King, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Etiquette in the Elevator.

NEARLY all working girls have occasion to use the elevators in stores, factory, and office buildings, and they would do well to consider how they deport themselves in these public lifts. Whatever restraint the girl worker might feel at her desk or behind the counter seems to leave her when she gets into an elevator; particularly if she is with some one else she is so apt to talk and laugh out loud and indulge in facetious remarks for the benefit of the other passengers of the car.

If she were to see the effect her behavior often has on the remaining passengers after she leaves the car, I am sure she would conduct herself in a more seemly manner. Just let her hear the snickers she excites, and the unfavorable comments, and she would soon be in reality the demure yet dignified young woman she probably always thought herself to be.

A ride in an elevator takes so little time, even if one is going to the twenty-first floor, that the little restraint one might exercise, if noisily inclined, would take little effort.

Let me cite an instance of a breach of elevator etiquette that happened to come under my notice recently. Two young girls got into the car at the main floor. They were talking excitedly and laughing. As the car was about to stop at the sixth floor, they both shouted, "Fifth floor." The elevator man stopped the car, reversed the switch, and dropped back to the fifth. The girls giggled hysterically from the time they discovered they had passed their floor until they got out, and, of course, never even said "Thank you" to the elevator man, who would have been justified in putting them off at the sixth floor, leaving them to walk down to where they belonged.

Etiquette in an elevator is something we would hardly give a thought to until such an incident as the above is brought to our attention. The effect on others of our slight lapses of good behavior might seem a little thing to most girls, but it is just these things that make lasting impressions, and if we intend to succeed we cannot afford to let our manner produce unfavorable impressions on any one with whom we come in contact in the business world.

Last Saturday I went into a department store with a friend. We stopped at a counter to make a purchase, and when the girl came to serve us we both noticed that she wore a bracelet of great value. It was a flexible string of diamonds, at least a hundred of them, with each stone in a platinum setting. They were unmistakable real, and the bracelet fastened with a safety clasp. The girl was plainly dressed otherwise. When we walked away from the counter my companion remarked: "It's unusual, to say the least, to see a girl behind a counter wearing jewels like that."

Unusual it is, and also ridiculous. This girl may have acquired the bracelet in an innocent way, but she was doing herself an injustice by wearing it, as it undoubtedly excited suspicion as to how she came in possession of it. At least she might refrain from wearing it except in the evening. Women who own many jewels rarely wear them except at night. This is especially true of diamonds.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

Courtesy at Home.

Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

NOTHING makes so much difference in daily home life as the observance of little courtesies and points of etiquet. Practice makes such observances as easy in the course of time as the omission of them.

A man who omits to let his wife pass through a door ahead of him, or to see that she is seated before he is, or to pick up her handkerchief if she drops it, when he was punctilious about these attentions before marriage, is sowing the seeds of trouble in as needless a way as the wife who comes to breakfast or any other meal in unkempt attire, with hair in curl papers, slipshod footgear, and untidy dressing gown.

Family manners should be as good as company manners. It is the only way to preserve respect and affection.

M. A. W.: It is difficult to describe exactly how to hold the fork in the left hand when cutting meat, but don't grasp it as if it were a bludgeon with which you were attacking a foe. Grasp it, not too lightly, with the index finger extended down the handle toward the prongs. Do not dip the napkin into the finger bowl to wipe the mouth. This should be done with the tips of the fingers slightly moistened.

B. A.: Go to call on the bride who is at home after June 20 and leave one of your cards and two of your husband's. It is of course more courteous to return the calls you receive while visiting in another town, but if you don't have time to do so—and a visitor is not always mistress of her time—send your calling cards with the initials P. P. C. in the lower left hand corner to those who called on you. These letters stand for the French words, "Pour prendre conge," "To take leave," or "Say good-by" in English. I'm sorry if a letter from you was overlooked. It was inadvertent.

Found Simple Remedy That Relieved Child

Mild Laxative Compound Corrects Stubborn Case of Constipation.

An important duty that devolves on parents is the regulation of their children's bowels. Health in later life depends in large measure on early training and a child should be taught from infancy to regular habits.

When from any cause the bowel becomes congested with stomach waste a mild laxative should be employed to open up the passage gently and carry off the congested mass. A most effective remedy for this purpose is the combination of simple laxative herbs known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. Mrs. W. D. Bulls, of Reed, Okla., used Dr. Caldwell's Syrup of Pepsin for her baby boy, Harley Buren Bulls, and says "It did him more good than anything we have given him. His bowels are very stubborn about acting, but they act easily every time I give him Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin."

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains no opiate or narcotic drug and is a splendid remedy for children and older people as well. It has been on the market for more than twenty-five years and is the family standby in thousands of homes. Druggists everywhere sell it for fifty cents a bottle. A trial bottle, free of charge, can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 454 Washington St., Monticello, Ill., for whom this advertisement is published.

Narrow Table with Bench Beneath, Mirror Above, Sole Furnishing of a Small Hall

Low Hall Wardrobe, One of a Pair

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

SOMETIMES the little problems about some furnishing are as difficult to solve as the large ones, and like most petty annoyances they are more vexatious. "How shall we furnish the front hall?" is as frequently asked, as "how shall we furnish the living room?" and the question is often harder to answer because of the limitations of space, light, etc.

Once in a while a thoroughly convenient article of furniture passes into disuse. Every one rails against it. It is jeered at and derided and utterly condemned with the exclamation: "Why, I didn't know any one ever used that nowadays." Presto! Vanishes the offending object, only perhaps to reappear with gusto fifty years hence.

The hall piece that is now banished by fashion is the hat rack—the poor old thing! Think of being banished after years of such faithful service! And by some sort of reactionary principle the piece that is reclaimed from iniquitous desuetude is the wardrobe.

Not only movable hat racks but the built-in type of thing, the looking glass with hooks at each side and arms extended in embracing curves to support wilty wet umbrellas—old familiars, that seemed downright essential to all well regulated halls a year or so ago—are irrevocably doomed. The sad fact must be faced: "They have gone out of style!"

In conformity with the general trend toward better taste in home furnishing, nothing is allowable that has an untidy air, and certainly nothing was ever more untidy in appearance than the hat rack burdened with a miscellaneous lot of hats and wraps hanging in dejected folds, and not only exposed to view but, what was ever more lamentable, exposed to dust. Unsightly and unhigienic was the verdict at the post-mortem.

All good architects see that built-in closet room is a part of their hall planning, and where this is done the furnishing of the hall simplifies itself. Just the fewest pieces are then required. The selection must, of course, be judicious, as the hall is the key to the furnishings of the rest of the home.

If furnishings are elaborate throughout the hall pieces are, of course, correspondingly so. Simple taste often calls for the most expensive materials. A hall may boast nothing more than a good piece of tapestry, a fine gothic chest, and a pair of torcheres, a paneled wall and mosaic floor, with a fine pelt thrown down on it—all this is simple enough—only one piece of furniture really—yet its cost would completely furnish the average home.

We can always strike a happy medium. Instead of a genuine tapestry we can use an attractive little mirror, one that will conform to the style in which our furnishing is done. Below this may be a table, with chair at either side, or, if space forbids, a chair on one side only. It is a great convenience to have a small clock, preferably an inexpensive little eight day clock, on the hall table. Here must also rest the maid's little silver card receiver, and it is quite necessary that the table should have a drawer and that pen and ink, pencil and pad should be kept in this drawer, so that signing of receipts at the door for parcels and notes, etc., can be attended to without the confusion of having to run around and look for writing materials while a messenger waits.

Halls seldom are light enough. It is therefore well to have the wall done in a color that will reflect the most possible light. Buff is best—cream, pearl color, and other light colors next. Often it happens in rented homes that one has to make the best of some ugly stationary contrivance, and this with a little ingenuity can usually be done.

A built in hatrack in one of the small "reception halls" common to all apartments that are not up to the minute can be successfully altered without bringing down on one's head the wrath of the agent and the agent's landlord and the landlord's lawyer. No real damage need be done.

First of all unscrew all of the wood or metal pegs on the hatrack, and put the pegs carefully away so that you can put them back again before you move. The same for the umbrella brackets. Fill up the little screw holes with putty or plaster of paris and touch up with paint to match the wood. The mirror thus left alone probably will not be objectionable. Put a narrow wall table or low chest of drawers directly in front of it. If you have not a narrow table adjust a simple shelf just below the mirror. Now it can be flanked with a pair of neat little wardrobes (they come in pairs or singly).

One such wardrobe is shown in the accompanying sketch. In height it is rather lower than the old fashioned wardrobe. When a pair is used one is for coats and the other for hats. Chintz covered hat pegs are at either side and at the back, and hats may be pinned to these if so desired. The other one, used for wraps, is fitted with a hook that projects a foot or more forward and has a series of shoulder hangers suspended on it.

At attractive effect can be attained at but little cost by following the plan advised above, and using plain chintz covered pine boxes stood upright on either side of the hall mirror. The boxes can be made by any carpenter and covered with chintz at home. They can either have chintz covered doors on hinges or be fitted with chintz curtains, or plain pine boxes can be painted to match the other woodwork of the hall, or painted in any decorative manner.

Hanging mirrors are to be had now in all sorts of shapes and sizes, and in conjunction with them a fascinating novelty of the season shown in the sketch is the pair of cords and tassels, designed for hanging mirrors in halls. The cord is wire filled and made in various colors and different sizes. The cords are fitted with brass molding hooks. The tassels may be adjusted to any height and an attractive rosette finishes the top of the cord. Similar cords are used for picture hanging in living rooms.

Among the newest architectural designs for halls is one that shows what appears to be a plain paneled wall, but the panels prove to be sliding doors covering a series of shallow cloak and hat closets.

Another novel feature is a little window in some fetching style built into the wall. It is fitted with tiny leaded panes, of opaque glass, and being a blind window has an electric light adjusted into the inclosure that the window covers. It is small and placed on the stair landing serves as a unique hall lamp.

While good taste forbids recommending naturalistic looking artificial flowers for use as decoration, a new kind of artificial flower is now being made entirely of enameled metal. An abundance of conventional blossoms and leaves, all in the brightest colors, comprise the queer looking pairs of flowering plants. They make a wonderful splotch of color in the hall, where they are formally placed at either end of a small table. To say that they smile, is mild—they almost grin a greeting, and making no pretense whatever at being natural, they rightfully claim their place as things artistic.

Answers to Inquiries.

J. W.: If you had sized over the old calcimine before applying paint to it you would not have met with such an adventure. The size should be of an ordinary glue of paint consistency. What you must now do is to use a good varnish remover and with a blade of some kind scrape the paint and spoilt calcimine from the wall, then size and then paint.

E. C. H.: Could you not place a screen before the alcove formed by offset? You didn't tell me how deep the offset is. It might be an effective place for a lamp. Could you not hang a portiere in front of it, putting the curtain pole well up towards the ceiling? Because your description is rather inadequate, I do not know whether the space is five feet high or five feet broad, but will answer more fully when better informed.

A. J. K.: The most economical and best wearing paint for any interior walls is white lead and oil. White lead can be flatted for interior painting with turpentine. This can be readily washed, but if a high gloss paint is desired we would suggest that white lead and linseed oil be used as follows: One hundred pounds of white lead, four and one-half gallons of raw oil, one pint of turpentine, and one pint of turpentine drier. All calcimined walls should be washed, if possible, and sized with glue, paying particular attention to any loose parts which cannot be loosened up when repainting. For this particular wall, which has been sized with gloss oil and calcimined, if it has been calcimined but once it will be enough to wash off the calcimine; the formula recommended above will give the full gloss finish.

ORGANDY is to be in great demand this season. It trims the tailored suit in the capacity of vestee and collar; it makes up into the sheerest imaginable frocks for midsummer wear; it is indispensable for blouses of all kinds and descriptions.

Never was the new neckwear prettier than it is these days. The daintiest of these models are featured in organdy of all shades. Pale blue, pale pink, lavender, and yellow seem at the present moment to be the favorite colors. Then, too, there are lovely models in batiste, exquisitely embroidered and just as pretty pieces in Georgette crêpe.

Chiffon is one of the prettiest materials for a dressy bodice, while lawn, chiffon voile, taffeta, Georgette crêpe, and crêpe de chine are among the most satisfactory materials.

The two designs which I am offering in pattern form today are inclusive of the newest and best fashion tendencies of the moment. There is hardly any material purchaseable and intended for summer wear in which they would not be attractively made up.

Next week I am showing three extremely attractive children's patterns and the week following will appear three bathing suits for the crowning sport of summer sports.

A neighbor and her three small children were calling. The youngest, a little boy, cannot talk plainly. He had been chattering for some time when his hostess asked the older girl if she knew what he was trying to say. After hesitating a minute she said: "I don't know, but I think he is saying, 'Give us all a lunch.'"

Mother needed some cookies for lunch, so gave Alice a dime and sent her to the corner bakery. A neighbor, seeing her pass, asked her to get another dime's worth for her. Alice was delighted to do her errands and went merrily on her way with a hop, skip, and a jump, jingling her money in her fat little hands, when, alas! she dropped one of the dimes and it rolled under the sidewalk out of sight. Alice continued on her way with a thoughtful expression, and after receiving the two bags handed the man the remaining dime and airily said: "Please just charge our neighbor's cakes, as I lost her dime."

My aunt has delightful little twin girls 3 years of age who look so much alike that few outside the immediate family can tell them apart. So, of course, they overhear a great deal of the grownups' talk about them. One day Lois was out on the lawn playing, while Louise was inside with her mamma. After standing at the window looking seriously at her sister for some time, she turned to her mother and said: "Well, I jus' don't know whether that is Lois out there or whether it's me."

While Josie was a small girl, too young to go to school, and being the only girl in the family, her brothers thought it would be great fun to have her name put on the program for a recitation for the last day of school. Josie's mother dressed her up for the occasion, putting on her best white dress, and to keep it clean until time for her to speak, put over the dress a gingham apron, charging the boys to be sure to remove the apron before Josie went on the stage, but as such things generally terminate, the apron was not thought of again. As soon as Josie reached her home, she ran in the house, saying: "O, mother, I said my piece through my apron after all. The boys forgot to take it off."

Betty, discussing with her mother the setting of a hen which in youth had been Betty's pet chicken, and half of whose chicks were to belong to Betty, asked: "Mother, how many eggs do you put under a hen?"

"O, usually thirteen," her mother replied.

After serious thought, Betty remarked: "Well, mother, I guess we better only put twelve under this hen—they'll divide easier."

The AMATEUR GARDENER

by Eben E. Rexford

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

All questions relating to the cultivation of gardens will be answered if addressed to the Amateur Gardener, "The Tribune," Chicago. Please write on one side of the paper only.

The Aster.

IN many respects the aster is an ideal plant. It is of the easiest culture, succeeding well in almost any soil, and doing well under conditions which would work against the welfare of most annuals. It is a wonderfully profuse bloomer, and it has the merit of coming into full bloom late in the season after most annuals have passed their prime, and continuing until the coming of cold weather.

Indeed, we often have it in excellent condition after heavy frosts have killed nearly every other plant in the garden. Its range of colors is so wide that all tastes can be suited, and there are so many more or less distinct types of it that it is often a difficult matter to make a choice among them, as all of them have special features which make them desirable for garden decoration and for cut-flower use.

The best all around variety is, in my opinion, the "branching" type. The flowers of this class are charming in form and color and bear so close a resemblance to those of the chrysanthemum that they are often mistaken for them. Many dealers sell them for chrysanthemums in fall and—"where ignorance is bliss 'tis folly to be wise," is an old saying that holds good in this case as in many others.

The flowers of the branching type are borne on long stalks, and are therefore better adapted for cut flower work than those of any other class, as they can be arranged more gracefully. The most desirable colors are the soft, pale pinks, the pure whites, and the delicate lavenders. The bright pinks, the crimsons, and the dark blues are fine for garden decorations, but they are not as satisfactory for use in the house.

The "comet" aster has fluffy flowers something like those of the ragged Japanese chrysanthemum. The "ostrich feather" variety has flowers of great size, with long, loosely arranged petals, and will be a favorite with those who like flowers that have little regard for formality.

The "cocardeau," or crown type, has flowers of medium size, double, and borne in such profusion that each plant seems a bouquet in itself. The "rose perfection" class is probably the finest of all for garden use, as its flowers are ideal in form, and its range of colors includes all that are desirable. The "king" aster has petals more or less quilled and will be prized by those who like flowers that are rather out of the ordinary.

Two new varieties are announced this season. One is the "enchantress," with large, double, wide petaled flowers, almost globular in shape, of the soft, pale pink color which characterizes the popular carnation of that name. The other is introduced as the "royal," which closely resembles the late branching variety in form and color, but has the merit of coming into bloom much earlier in the season.

This plant should be given a soil of rather heavy loam, which has been enriched with a liberal quantity of bonemeal or some other good commercial fertilizer. It is a good plan to change their location yearly, also to make liberal applications of wood ashes or air slaked lime to the soil in which they are planted, as these have a tendency to prevent the attacks of a worm which sometimes does great injury by boring into the root immediately below the surface of the soil.

Sometimes they are attacked by the same black beetle which does so much harm to chrysanthemums. This is a most voracious creature, and it will do a vast amount of harm in a short time if not fought promptly.

Be on the lookout for it, and as soon as the first one is seen, spray the plants with an infusion of tobacco. Let it be strong, and apply it twice a day until the enemy is routed.

We have no flower that keeps better after cutting. If the water in which they are placed is changed daily and a bit of the stalk is clipped off each time a change is made, they will retain their freshness for two weeks. For church decoration the aster stands at the head of the list.

It is important that this plant should go steadily ahead from start to finish. When flowers for cutting are desired set the plants not less than a foot apart in the row, with rows two feet apart. When wanted for garden decoration only they may be planted nine inches apart, and the best effect will be secured by setting them in a mass.

Painful Swollen Veins Quickly Relieved and Reduced

Mrs. R. M. Remler, of Federal, Kansas, writes an interesting account of her success in reducing a severe case of enlarged veins that should be encouraging to others similarly afflicted. She suffered with badly swollen and inflamed veins (in fact, one had broken) for more than seven years before she became acquainted with Absorbine, Jr., and used it. Absorbine, Jr., was faithfully applied for several weeks, and to quote from her letter, "The large knots in the veins left, it was all nicely healed, and has not bothered me since."

Getting a History Lesson.

CERTAINLY you would least expect a romance to grow in the young woman's finishing school I attended in the south last winter, where the gardener and the principal's chauffeur were the only men about the place. But one did grow.

The underlying cause was short and pert; my history notebook was due and I had not a word written in it, all of which sounds simple, but was a real tragedy, for I feared the wrath of the history teacher like poison. Moreover, they had to be handed in the next day, and I was desperate. I had no excuse whatsoever.

Something providential occurred that day. It was that in English class where the air was rather hot and stifling I toppled over in a neat little faint on the floor, a real for sure faint. When my robust English teacher carried my 101 pounds up to her sitting room I revived, but I kept my eyes closed, for I was mentally carrying out a brilliant scheme that might save the day—I must be seriously ill.

Fortunately, I had so impressed the teachers, for they bundled me off to the infirmary. However, after I had been duly established in a little white bed with nurse, Miss R., in charge, a few flaws in my so far successful plan appeared.

In the first place, they would call the doctor, an old man, but shrewd, and the soul of honor. He would know there was nothing wrong with me and then all would be up. But as I heard Miss R. talking hope again entered my sad heart, for she said our old doctor was not here, but Dr. W. would came in his place.

I awaited with no little trepidation the coming of Dr. W., for it all depended on him. And then he came. Hope grew stronger in my breast, for he was young and he had a flashing smile.

English teacher and Miss R. looked on anxiously as he felt my pulse and looked at my tongue. Pulse normal, tongue a healthy color. I inwardly cursed my ruddy cheeks. Beyond doubt, I was the picture of hea[lth].

Dr. W.'s bro[ws] were drawn together and his lips met in a straight line, but I'm sure there was a twinkle in his eyes as he answered my anxious teacher's inquiries as to what he made of it, with "I am rather puzzled." As, no doubt, he was.

"I must see you alone, doctor," I said in a low, tense voice that sounded awfully queer.

At his nod the teachers left. Dropping his professional tones, he said confidentially, "What's the game, little girl? You're not sick, you know."

Well, as I said before, he was a young doctor and he was laughing and looked sympathetic and—well, sort of understanding—so I told him all. Notebook due, feigning sickness to get out of it, had to keep the game up now, but was truly repentant. He laughed out loud this time.

"We'll see about it," he said.

I was still in fear. Of course, he would tell Miss W. But he didn't. He just said when she came in: "I advise a rest. I leave medicine here with you. Keep her a few weeks at least."

Even the thought of taking medicine didn't keep me from fairly squirming with joy under the covers. But—"A diet, too, is advisable. Chiefly eggs." I groaned. Dr. W. saw the expression on my face and laughed again.

I detest eggs—but here's a secret. My dear Dr. W. has a soft heart and he brought me candy the next day—smuggled it in, of course—and then the next day, too. The third day he brought my history notebook (he got it from one of the girls), and together we worked for two hours that afternoon, he dictating out of the history while I, sitting up in bed, scratched away in my notebook. The teachers, of course, thought that my illness required these long daily visitations. Once they almost notified my parents. Praise be, they didn't!

My notebook was soon all written up. I left the infirmary and for a long time I was a sort of heroine around the girls and teachers—the latter handled me as if I were fragile china.

But why shouldn't they, for didn't I receive daily, long professional (?) visits from my Dr. W.? Wouldn't that show that I was a hopeless invalid?

And, though I am out of school now and my serious illness has terminated, I am still receiving long visits from Dr. W. wherein lies the romance. M. I.

His South Bend Smile.

I was working as an apprentice in a beauty shop, and one of my duties was to clean the showcase in the reception parlor. One day while doing this a drummer entered. You know, the-world-is-at-my-feet kind.

He came over and leaned his arm upon it. I informed him politely that the case was wet in that spot. He turned and smilingly pointed to the other half of the case and asked:

"Is that part wet?"

I answered no and then he leaned his elbow on the dry part and remarked, "This is like Chicago is supposed to be, but," he added, touching the wet part, "this is how it really is."

I drew my forehead into a deep frown, for he made me weary. I frowned as hard as I could, whereupon he reached over and took my hands in his, and leaning close with one of those South Bend smiles he said:

"Pretty, straighten up your face and give me a kiss."

My patience went out of the city limits right there, and reaching for the pan of water, I let him have it right in the face, exclaiming, "This makes you like Chicago."

But he never stopped to listen. M. H.

Jardine Jarred Her.

Why do you always pick on the nervy male flirts? The daughters of Eve are equally guilty. They, perhaps, may be so much more subtle that they are not always caught. I know of one extra nervy one that got what was coming to her. Jardine is prosperous looking, used to the world, but a true companion of "friend wife."

He was riding early one evening on the L towards the loop and happened to sit beside a fine looking, sophisticated woman, dressed in the latest mode, wearing a wedding ring, and surely quite attractive. She took stock of Jardine, and after the train had gone several blocks she turned and said, "What's the matter with your taking me to the La Salle for dinner and then to the theater?"

"Nothing wrong with that," said Jardine. So they got off at Clark street and taxied to the ladies' entrance of the La Salle. The doorman opened the door and Jardine indicated that his companion should enter. Then he pulled the door shut and was soon lost in the crowd on Madison street. F. D. J.

He Did Have "Crust."

I was standing at a hosiery counter in one of the department stores trying to match a very odd shade of blue. After the clerk had shown me about three dozen pairs, a masculine voice beside me said: "Gee! That's a peach of a match." I gave him what is called the "cold shoulder." As usual, the clerk asked "Cash or charge?" As I was searching for the money the same voice said: "Charge," and gave a name and an address on the north side. I was so taken by surprise that I could not utter a sound, and stood staring with bewilderment at the stranger, who I thought possessed an unlimited amount of nerve. By this time the clerk had arrived with the package, and she, naturally thinking the young man was with me, handed it to him. He calmly accepted it, and, taking my arm, we passed into the street. We walked about two blocks and he talked a blue streak. I couldn't get rid of him. Honest, he was so nervy I admired him. I still do. Miss H. H.

Was He Afraid.

Some years ago when I first came to Chicago to live and had quite a "countrified" look I was hurrying along Clark street towards the Polk Street station one evening after dark when a little dude scarcely 5 feet tall walked up to me and inquired, "May I walk down the street with you, miss?" I am 5 feet 7 inches, weigh 160, and I considered it an opportunity for a little fun. So I inquired most considerately, "What is the matter, are you afraid alone?" My little dude made some stuttering remark and disappeared around the first corner, while I proceeded on my way without an escort. Mrs. H. A.

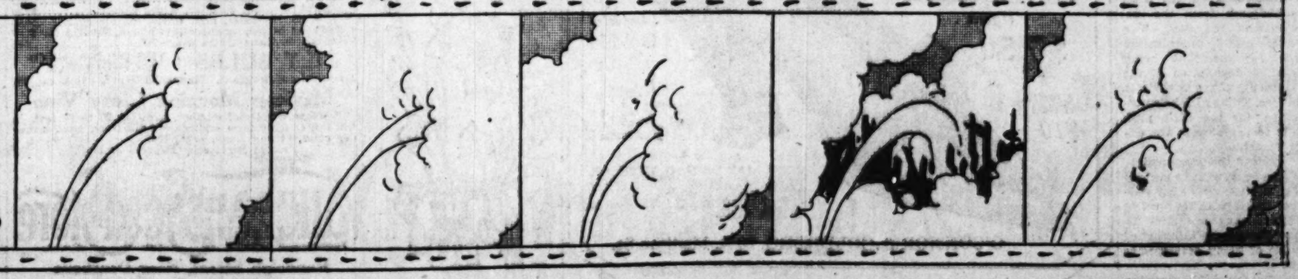
MARBLE YARD AT SLEEPY EYE, MINN., BURNS TO THE GROUND

SCENARIO BY W. D.



Comment by Mme. X.

Week More Serene with War Element in the Background.

By Mme. X.

JUST why it was it would be hard to say, but up to Friday there was a decidedly happier feeling, an unmistakably serener state of mind, last week than there was in the week before. For one thing, there were during that time several social distractions quite unrelated to the war, even remotely.

Bernard Shaw's play "Major Barbara" offered that double distilled essence of wit and Shavian wisdom which gives each individual in a Shaw audience the subtle satisfaction of feeling in addition to a veritable joy in the performance that he or she is a really clever fellow to understand and relish it so thoroughly.

The fashion show at the South Shore Country club was a most entertaining and delectable occasion. More and more does the real old Chicagoan marvel at Chicago's calm way of accepting various institutions that, were they anywhere else, would be trumpeted from one end of the land to the other. The South Shore Country club and its new building is one of these. On Tuesday night they dined there 1,200 people as easily and comfortably as another club would dine twelve. On New Year's eve 2,500 diners were served there. The club membership is nearly 3,000.

Built on Vast Scale.

The remodeled clubhouse is a marvel in its way. From the dining room north wall to the ballroom south wall it measures 480 feet in length. The entrance to the whole affair is a stately piece of architecture, an oblong ovate peristyle, a double colonnade, many hundred feet long, connecting, in a quite superb sweep, the main gate with the club's chief entrance. A fine solarium faces you on entering—a big, glassed-in lounge furnished with comfortable, low, wicker chairs and tables, and commanding a wide view of beach and lake.

Everything is on a rather vast scale in this club. In this way it misses one of the prime functions of such an enterprise, the intimate and exclusive feeling which is such a source of satisfaction to many club members, but it gains in the variety of its aspects, in the wider social horizon it offers its members. It is really more like a kursaal or casino in a foreign watering place than anything else we have here, and is for its very bigness to be cherished.

The Tuesday night diners were much distracted from the excellent dinner in the beautiful Adam dining room by the never ending procession of fashion models that walked with that extraordinary, mincing gait and preening manner characteristic of their kind up and down the elevated passageway built for them between the densely packed dinner tables.

Sport suits of all kinds, such as bathing dresses, riding habits, tennis frocks, golf costumes, and garden party frocks, "toilettes de danse," afternoon muslins, and rainy day, transparent rubber caps and coats were all shown on a pretty batch of living models, blondes, brunettes, and Titian reds. The men's comments were guided by the pulchritude of the wearers of the costumes, while the women's trained and appraising eyes were mainly concerned with the frocks, hats, and other accessories.

After the dinner and show the company adjourned to the big ballroom where the one or two hundred couples who danced on the best dancing floor in Chicago glided around with plenty of room and to spare.

The ride home through the parks and over the long stretches of boulevards is not one of the least attractive features of a visit to the South Shore Country club.

Russian Choir Crane Protege.

The wonderful concert given by the Russian choir at Mandel hall last Tuesday afternoon was attended by a large deputation of society folk, among whom were Mrs. R. T. Crane Jr., Mrs. Tiffany Blake, Mrs. Arthur Meeker, and Miss Suzette Ryerson.

This Russian choir is one of Charles R. Crane's pet protéges. Its only rival is the biological laboratory at Woods Holl, Mass.—a wonderful institution. Each of these widely differing enterprises is indebted to Mr. Crane for an enthusiastic and generous support—financial and moral—which much enlarges the sphere of both. He brought these Russian singers over, at his own expense, from the musical conservatory at Moscow, and presented them to the Russian church in New York.

This Moscow school is the great musical shrine of Russia. There is nothing quite like it anywhere else in the world. For newly arrived as Russia is in the modern civilized world, her musical tradition far antedates that of any other European country, except possibly that of the Roman Catholic church in Italy.

Mr. and Mrs. Crane are escorting the Russian choir in their tour about the country and spent a day or so in Madison, where the choir gave a concert before coming to Chicago.

A delightful musical oasis was Thomas Whitney Surette's trio of talks on the three big B's—Bach, Beethoven, and Brahms—when he took his listeners' thoughts far away from war's alarums, from politics and suffrage, from spring clothes and housekeeping, and gave them a glimpse into the lives and trend of thought of these composers. The talks, being late in the day—beginning at 5:30, p. m., preceded by tea—gave an opportunity for men to drop in on their way home from business and many availed themselves of this. The drawing rooms of Mrs. Arthur Ryerson, Mrs. George Higginson Jr., and Mrs. James B. Waller were a charming setting for these musical seances, and, as every one was seated in a comfortable chair, there were none of the rigors and drawbacks usually incident to such symposiums.

Garden Club Hears Perkins.

The Garden club meeting at Mrs. George Higginson Jr.'s on Wednesday afternoon, was another occasion when the mind was utterly withdrawn from the turmoil and anxieties of the day. The members of this useful organization lost themselves for the time being in Dwight Perkins' description of the proposed park-forest reserves to encircle Chicago, and in Mrs. Tiffany Blake's presentation of plans for the little park which the club is to engineer at the entrance to Lake Forest.

Mr. Perkins described the unappreciated beauties of Palos Park, with its curious wooded mounds, and the charming possibilities of the Skokie with its wooded islands. We Chicagoans are slow to realize the many features in this part of the world capable of being developed to local advantage.

Late in May the Garden club is planning an excursion to the sand dunes at the south end of Lake Michigan. It is only of late years that people hereabouts have awakened to the wonders of this district, with its moving, shifting low sand hills, supporting a growth of scrub pines and sheltering secluded pools that mirror the sky and clouds and are rimmed with rare, exquisite, many colored wild flowers.

Foreigners were quicker to recognize this remarkable territory than we. A few years ago, when a learned society of European scientists were coming to this country they wrote to the Americans who were arranging their visit for them that there were three wonders they especially wanted to see—Niagara falls, the Yellowstone park, and the sand dunes at the south end of Lake Michigan.

But all is not melody and flowers. The Casino movies are valiantly getting into shape to astonish and delight an expectant world and to coin money for the American Red Cross.

The French war shop made a tidy sum for its summer work at the Monday evening entertainment at Orchestra hall. Its promoters are most anxious to keep the shop open all summer and to continue the flow of those much needed supplies.

Miss Irene Manby Monday evening certainly gave her auditors a vivid idea of the realities of life in a military hospital and of the void filled by such contributions as those sent by the American committee for the fund for French wounded.

Mrs. Russell Tyson, who will be at Lake Forest for the summer, will continue in charge of the shop.

Perhaps the most strenuous group of women at the moment is that occupied with the preparations for the suffrage parade on June 7. Mrs. Tiffany Blake has organized a committee of north side women to secure pledges to march, and to direct the growing interest in and enthusiasm for the enterprise. Among those on her committee are Mesdames Charles Hamill, Robert Hamill, Arthur Bissell, Arthur Ryerson, William J. Calhoun, Joseph Winterbotham, R. T. Crane Jr., Julian Mason, James Keeley, Percy Hammond, George Packard, and J. M. Patterson, and the Misses Cornelia Conger, Suzette Ryerson, Margaret Bentley, Virginia Pope, and Adela Barrett.

Meanwhile another scheme of surpassing merit is a great convention ball and garden party to be given by the Chicago Equal Suffrage association on June 6, the afternoon and evening before the two conventions open here. This will take place in the Harold McCormick gardens on the Designer of Costumes for Children's Home Benefit Performance.

Mrs. James Ward Thorne of 1200 Lake Shore drive has designed the costumes for the young girls who will appear in old fashioned dances on Tuesday evening at the American War Song concert which will be given under the chairmanship of Mrs. William J. Chalmers at the Auditorium theater for the benefit of the Country Home for Convalescent Children. The costumes will be of tarletan in delicate shades and will be hooped up with little clusters of rosebuds. White hose, black slippers, and white gloves just to the wrist will be worn. Mrs. Thorne has won for herself an enviable reputation as a designer. She was the originator in Chicago of the transparent brimmed hat which took the city so by storm. At the Arabian Nights ball a few seasons ago she was called the most perfectly gowned woman on the floor, and when she was congratulated upon her gorgeousness she laughingly said: "Why, I just threw it together this afternoon."

NEWS OF THE CHICAGO WOMEN'S CLUBS

Club to Give Party to Aid New Charity.

By Hazel Whitaker.

THE West End Catholic Woman's club is now in its fifth, flourishing year, with a membership of almost 400. Organized originally as a church society, it has gradually evolved into one of the most prominent woman's clubs on the west side, both in social and philanthropic circles. Working in close coöperation with the club is the Young Ladies' auxiliary, which numbers sixty members. These young women are now planning a card party for the benefit of one of the recent charities undertaken by the club, to be given May 20 at the Garfield park refectory.

The annual spring luncheon of the club will be held on Saturday in the gold room of the Congress hotel. Mrs. Edward Honkamp is in charge of the luncheon and Mrs. Thomas F. McDonald of the program. Mrs. James Shea, the newly elected president, is to deliver the address of welcome; Mrs. William J. Shanks is to act as toastmistress, Mrs. William N. Brown, Mrs. G. F. Mulligan, and Mrs. Bernard McDevitt will respond to toasts, and Miss May Hildreth will be the representative speaker from the auxiliary. There are to be songs by Frank Dunford and Thomas McGranahan, and music by Peirce's orchestra.

The three departments of the club, the social, the educational, and the philanthropic, all have most gratifying reports to make of the last year's work, but especially widespread and helpful have been the club's charities. Not only has regular financial assistance been given, but in many instances time and services. The auxiliary during Lent sewed for St. Margaret's home and donated all materials, and recently entertained the crippled children for an entire day.

Some of the organizations assisted during the year were the Catholic League protectorate, the Park Ridge Home for Girls, the Catholic Church Extension, St. Vincent de Paul, St. Margaret's Home for Girls, the American Red Cross society, St. Joseph's home, Illinois Industrial Home for the Blind, Ephpheta society, Christ Child society, and more than 100 poor families. The most recent philanthropy undertaken is that of giving emergency help to the penniless girls who are freed by the Juvenile court. A permanent fund is to be established for this purpose, to be used at the discretion of the court.

During Mrs. D. R. McAuley's competent régime the broom industry was inaugurated and proved of great benefit to the destitute blind. To help with this branch of its philanthropy the club takes charge of the Sixth district pound party once a year. This year a musical program was given at the Douglas Park pavilion and forty baskets provided for the destitute married blind.

Social programs are held twice a month at the Colonial clubhouse in Oak Park, and the field covered has been both entertaining and instructive, ranging as it has from lectures by prominent people to several afternoons of song. Study classes met once a month at the homes of the members, and many special musical and dramatic afternoons were arranged by the auxiliary young women.

The list of officers for the year 1916-1917 is as follows: President, Mrs. James Shea; first vice president, Mrs. William Shanks; second vice president, Mrs. W. T. Keating; recording secretary, Mrs. W. N. Brown; corresponding secretary, Mrs. J. E. McNichols; financial secretary, Mrs. E. Finegan; treasurer, Mrs. Otto Niehoff.

The directors are Mrs. G. F. Mulligan, Mrs. Thomas F. McDonald, Mrs. Edward F. Honkamp, Mrs. Frank Quinn, Mrs. E. L. Finegan, Mrs. Sara C. Mullin, Mrs. P. J. Raftis, Mrs. George B. Eddy, Mrs. Robert E. Cantwell, Mrs. D. S. Shanahan, Mrs. J. H. Bowman, Mrs. T. J. Sullivan, Mrs. M. J. O'Leary, and Mrs. Albert Frawley.

Miss Marie Higgins

Among the large parties to be given soon are the annual charity ball of the auxiliary of the South Side Catholic Woman's club and the ball of Our Lady of Providence alumnæ. Miss Marie Higgins and Miss Mary Gavin are working for the former, which will be held on Friday. The proceeds will go to the St. Vincent de Paul society. In the alumnæ ball Miss Isabelle McDonnell and Miss Beatrice Bergeron are active. It will be held on Friday, May 19.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY by MME. Z.

Service School and Horse Show Events of Week.

President and Mrs Wilson Inspecting National Service School For Women.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—[Special Correspondence.] — Society of the capitalized sort, either financially or alphabetically, has shifted its interest during the week from the opening of the National Service School for Women at Chevy Chase on Monday to the opening of the horse show down in Potomac park on Saturday, which is "some shift," the one involving the flower of Washington girlhood, with considerable outside additions, the other all the local equine stars, also with considerable outside additions.

The National Service school, which is under the direction of the woman's section of the Navy league, began work on Monday morning with a drill and a class in semaphoring, and had its formal opening in the afternoon, with any number of notables in attendance and the president making an address of welcome.

Mrs. Wilson was on hand listening to her husband and looking attractive in a tailored costume of white cloth, with white fox furs and a small black hat with the inevitable goura stickup.

At the Horse Show.

It is assumed that she and the president will be present also at the opening of the horse show and the management is looking forward to having the White House box occupied by them, which it has not been during the present administration, the president's daughters having heretofore done the honors. Of course they are to be on hand, and Mrs. McAdoo, as newly returned from her South American trip, will undoubtedly divide interest with Mrs. Wilson.

During the beginning of the week polo was still the attraction down at Potomac park, but it did not attract Mrs. Wilson. She has enjoyed the park's beauties, but not when the crowd was out and the polo ponies were tearing over the sward. But bright and early in the morning she may be met, almost any day, tramping briskly along the lovely drive. Sometimes Miss Benham is with her, and frequently Miss Bones, who, having recently lost her father, is not appearing at social doings.

On these morning walks Mrs. Wilson wears a plain tailored suit of dark material and a small hat and looks rather smarter and handsomer than when she is more elaborately turned out. Her golf clothes, too, a short skirt and hip length coat of cadet blue and a medium brimmed leghorn with a white scarf twisted around it, are notably becoming.

Making Summer Plans.

Wherever spring may lead the young man's fancy, it leads his elders to serious consideration of their summer plans. To them May means migration, and the question that everybody asks everybody these days is, "Where are you going this year?"

The fortunate owners of some of the beautiful suburban homes of Washington are not put to it to answer that question. There are places like the Causeway, the home of th James Parmelees, formerly of Chicago, and the Palisades, the Leiters' Virginia place, which play a more or less conspicuous part in the mid-winter festivities, being kept in commission the year round. There are others like the Kauffmans out near Takoma, and the Noyes and the two Blair places at Silver Spring, which play their delightful part only between seasons.

The Montgomery Blairs have betaken themselves to Falkland this week and begin almost immediately a series of hospitalities for which cards have been out for a week or two. The Gist Blairs, whose home, the historic old Blair place par excellence, the new war secretary and Mrs. Baker greatly coveted and vainly tried to rent, follow soon.

Bakers Take Fairchild Place.

The Bakers have taken "In the Woods," the David Fairchilds' lovely place out on the road to Kensington, not far from Chevy Chase lake. It is a roomy, picturesque stucco house completely hidden, as its name indicates, by trees. The grounds are lovely, and, as one would expect from the agricultural department's horticultural shark, who is always digging up new plants for Uncle Sam, full of rare and beautiful plants and shrubs. They are particularly proud of the Japanese cherry trees, all same, like those of Potomac park, and generally have a good deal of company while they are in bloom.

Secretary Baker spent the last week end in Cleveland and went to New York with Mrs. Baker before returning to Washington. Mrs. Baker plans to get here about the first of June, when every bud and leaf at "In the Woods" is at its prime, and she and the children can live out of doors as they loved to do at their suburban home in Cleveland. Mrs. Baker is fond of golf, and she and Mrs. Lansing, with their husbands, ought to make a fine cabinet team on the Chevy Chase links.

No Long Vacations Planned.

Obviously the Bakers are counting on staying right here most of the summer and the other cabinet families are not planning for any extended vacation. The Lansings go, if they can, to their happy hunting ground on Lake Ontario. The McAdoos have sold their cottage in Maine and the only rumor concerning their plans is that they are likely to settle not far from Shadow Lawn at Elberon, N. J., which the president has selected as the summer White House this year.

The Danielses do not as a rule migrate. They arrange all sorts of pleasant little junkets and attractive week ends on the Dolphin or the Sylph, official yachts of the navy secretary. The Burlesons, alas! have no official yacht, but they usually divide the summer up into sections of two or three weeks and do some visiting between trips.

The Gregorys, at least Mrs. Gregory and the young people, will go to Blue Ridge Summit, which they have found satisfactory for the last three seasons, and where the attorney general can occasionally join them.

The Houstons have found nothing they like better than Wood's Hole on the Massachusetts coast, for Mrs. Houston with a family of young children prefers a quiet place where they can lead something like the simple life.

Spring-Rice at Wood's Hole.

Both of these will have diplomatic company at their chosen resorts. The British ambassador and Lady Spring-Rice have leased Rose cottage at Wood's Hole, and Lady Spring-Rice and the children are to go up there by the end of this month to see the gardens there blossom even as they have watched them here.

At Blue Ridge Summit the Japanese Ambassador and Viscountess Chinda will probably occupy the same quarters they had last season, and many of the Latin American diplomats make their summer home near by. The Brazilian ambassador and Mme. da Gama are among the exceptions, however, for they spend their summers at Heron hall, Mme. da Gama's beautiful summer home at Long Branch, where they will be comparatively near neighbors of the President and Mrs. Wilson, and, if rumor proves true, of the McAdoos also.

Newport and the north shore claim most of the allies and the neutral Europeans. The Russians and the Spanish embassy go to Newport, which they have in the past seasons found much to their taste. So, too, have the Germans and the Austrians, but it would never do for these diplomatic diplomats to go where they might meet the enemy. So Prince Von Hatzfeldt has rented a group of cottages at Rye, N. Y., where the German embassy will have its summer quarters. And the Austrians have rented another group at Patchogue, L. I., where Baron Zwiedenek and his associates are to establish themselves for the summer. Certainly these quiet little towns will be astonished to find themselves centers of high diplomatic society.

Jusserands Stay in Capital.

The French ambassador and Mme. Jusserand will as usual remain in Washington until late in the season. They used always to go home for a month or two while the embassy established itself on the north shore. Now they stay right here, except for short trips, when things are particularly quiet. The Belgian minister and Mme. Havenith, as told in this column, have bought a most attractive place in Maryland and are now preparing to move into it. They are, for the time being, in an apartment in Connecticut avenue, since Mrs. Ffoulke, Mme. Havenith's mother, whose Massachusetts avenue home has been rented as the Belgian legation for several years, is back in Washington and wanted her house before the Haveniths' country home was quite ready for them.

The Argentine ambassador and Mme. Naon have taken Windeclyffe, the beautiful Manchester estate of Mrs. William J. Boardman, which has been the girlhood home of Miss Mabel Boardman and her sister, Mrs. Murray Crane. It is one of the show places of the north shore, with wonderful grounds and a splendid view, and is most luxuriously furnished.

The Swedish minister and Mme. Ekengren are taking a fine roomy place at Edgartown, on Martha's Vineyard, en route to Nantaucket, and the Siamese minister and his interesting family and staff will go to East Gloucester, where Siam floats her flag each summer, being the only foreign government, if memory serves, that owns a summer embassy in the United States.

Koos Busy Entertaining.

The Chinese minister and Mrs. Wellington Koo seem to be about the only prominent members of the diplomatic corps whose summer plans are not thoroughly formulated. Apparently they have been too busy to make any plans. They have been giving a series of dinners and have now started in on a series of luncheons. The last of their dinners set all Washington quietly chuckling. It was given last week and had been announced with considerable formality fully two weeks ahead of time as being in honor of the Japanese ambassador and Viscountess Chinda. About two days before the date set the Chindas sent out notices canceling all engagements "on account of recent bereavement." While there has been no official announcement, it is understood that they have lost a son, who remained in Japan, and whom Washington consequently does not know.

The Koos rose to the emergency and promptly announced that their dinner, under those circumstances, would be in honor of the secretary of the navy and Mrs. Daniels. Why waste a perfectly good dinner? Why, indeed? But Washington blinked. It is the first time that any one of the official importance of a cabinet member has been asked to "fill in" at a formal dinner, and as honor guest at that.

Another of last week's dinners that is still being talked about was the one Representative Slemp of Virginia gave on Saturday night to Representative and Mrs. Mann. It was a most elaborate affair, with sunken garden effects in decoration, and followed by a musical program, the real hit being the clever little souvenirs in the form of a booklet made up of Berryman cartoons, depicting "The Seven Ages of Man," Berryman being a popular local cartoonist.

And, by the way, the Delanos' dance on Friday night of last week was a most distinguished success, being particularly distinguished for the number of diplomats who turned out in force for it. Diplomats are not as plentiful as they used to be at Washington functions in these days of strained relations, but at the Delanos' party it was Baron This and Count That until the beaux about town and the army and navy men found their noses quite out of joint.

Eighty Candles for Cannon.

Oh, and while Illinois folk are under discussion one mustn't forget that next week, when Uncle Joe Cannon celebrates his eightieth birthday, the house is planning such a demonstration as never was, and in the evening there is to be a wonderful dinner in his honor, with eighty guests to do him reverence, and eighty candles to his cake, and every possible change rung on the fact of his four score years.

And that again reminds me that the most prized of the many invitations showered on little Miss Elizabeth Stevenson while she was here with her father and aunt making a little family house party for Mrs. Carl Vrooman during holy week and Easter week was a dinner which the Cannons gave for her. She was also one of a group of honor guests for whom Mrs. Marshall entertained, and of another group for whom Mrs. Lansing entertained, and along with her father, the Illinois secretary of state, and her aunt, Miss Letitia Stevenson, she was received by the president the morning before she returned to Bryn Mawr, which was quite a list of "functions" for a school girl to crowd into a few days.

Mrs. Vrooman's little house party is pretty well broken up. Miss Letitia Stevenson stayed on through this week, but she also was to leave by the end of it. Mr. Vrooman, who has been making a tour of the agricultural colleges and speaking at most of them, should be home by now, and Mrs. Vrooman hopes to settle their summer plans soon. She has been looking for some pleasant place in the mountains near enough for Mr. Vrooman to come out frequently and quiet enough—even dull enough—for Mrs. Vrooman to be able to settle down to the work of finishing the novel of Washington life which she has been writing and for which her friends—and enemies, if she has any—have been waiting. She says there is perhaps six weeks' work coming to that book, but she simply cannot find time for it.

Mrs. Joseph Fish

Mrs. Joseph Fish will represent "Motherhood" in the living picture entertainment, "Charity," which is to be given by the woman's board of the Chicago Lying-In hospital on Friday evening. Mrs. Fish is president of the Mothers' aid of the hospital.

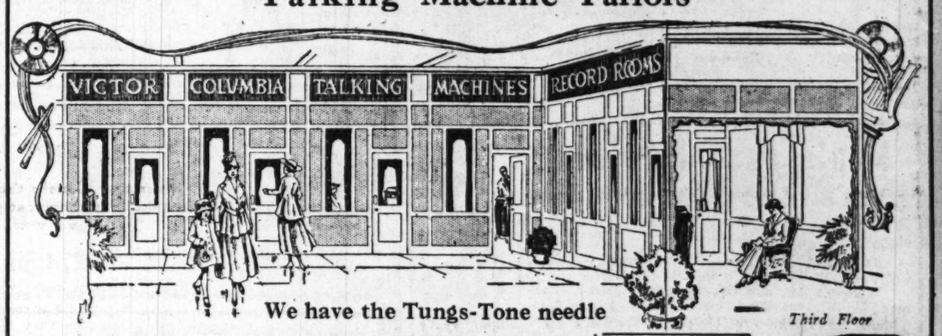
Introducing Our Greatly Enlarged and Improved New Talking Machine Parlors



We have the Tungs-Tone needle

Third Floor

A practical innovation that marks the closest approach to perfection in the selling end of the talking machine industry—ready tomorrow, in our third floor parlors. Separate sound-proof rooms handsomely furnished and equipped. No jarring, jangling babel of sounds, but just the coziest, "comfiest" scheme of arrangement in the city of Chicago—for now you hear the full melodious worth of a machine or a record in the confines of a space that excludes the tumult of the street, the buzz-buzz of near-by depts., or the confusing sound of other machines. Really, the last word in talking machine selling system awaits you tomorrow.

The illustration gives you a partial view of the new parlors, and they're very appealing to the eye—but the impression on the ear is what will sound good to you—do not fail to try it—tomorrow.

NEW YORK SOCIETY by MME.

Gorgeous New Features Seen in Bridal Dresses.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The season just over has belonged to the brides. Never have they blossomed forth in greater numbers and gorgeousness. Bridal dresses are departing from the conventional, and the society editor can no longer do them justice with a dash of the typewriter mentioning that the costume consisted of white satin, covered with a long tulle veil.

Mrs. George B. Post Jr., who was Miss Irene Langhorne Gibson, startled the community by appearing with a wreath not of white orange blossoms but of white wheat. It fitted on her head like a coronet, and the little shocks arose at intervals of some three inches like aigrettes.

Mrs. Henry Clapp Smith, who was Miss Beatrix Buell, took her way to the altar in a dress of walking length, below which descended a long train of satin and tulle. The gown itself was of white taffeta, veiled with white tulle and embroidered in silver and crystal. The full tulle veil was arranged to envelop the coiffure like a mist, and it was caught at the top with sprays of orange blossoms. Her matron of honor, Mrs. Robert Emmett, wore a costume of brilliant blue taffeta that had a short straight skirt, finished with a cord. The corsage was tight and unpointed at the waist line. The top of the corsage was cut out and the sleeves were short, full puffs of silk. Her yellow Leghorn hat was bent to a poke bonnet shape. It was tied with ribbons and it had one nodding pink plume at the back. She carried a large nosegay of pink flowers. Needless to say, this was an 1830 effect.

Mrs. Henry Herbert Jessup, who was Miss Eugenia Griffin Baker, was another bride whose costume was all but sensational. It consisted of a white satin gown, with a court train lined with cloth of silver and an Elizabethan lace collar; a chaplet of pearls held the tulle veil in place. She wore a monstrous moonstone pendant set in a diamond framework, which was a gift of the bridegroom.

Mrs. Charles J. Warner, a bride of the week, wore a gown of silver tissue over silver lace, and a veil of rare old lace, held with orange blossoms.

Many Engagements Announced.

It would seem as if everybody who isn't getting married is getting engaged. Large as is the spring crop of weddings it will apparently be followed in the fall by one no less distinguished.

Mr. and Mrs. Winthrop Chanler the other day made known to a few friends the engagement of their daughter to Lawrence Grant White, son of Mrs. Stanford White. He is following in the footsteps of his late father, who was famous as an architect, and is famous as a member of the firm of McKim, Mead & White, of which his father was the head. He was graduated from Harvard in 1908 and took his post-graduate course at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris.

Like her fiancé, Miss Chanler finds congenial work in art, and she has shown marked versatility as a sculptress, portrait painter, and interior decorator. Following three years of study abroad, she returned to make portraits in oils and drawings in black and white of many of her friends in this city and at Newport, R. I., where, during the summer of 1914 she gave her first exhibition in the rooms of the Newport Art association. Mrs. E. Henry Harriman lent some bronzes and decorative sculptured pieces Miss Chanler had made, and there were shown also several panels she had designed for Adrian Iselin's dining room.

Miss Chanler does most of her work in Washington and in her studio here, and has an apartment at 149 East Fortieth street. Her relatives are many here and in Newport. Lewis Stuyvesant Chanler, Robert Winthrop Chanler, John Armstrong Chanler, and Mrs. Richard Aldrich are her uncles and aunt. Through her grandfather, the late John Winthrop Chanler, she is descended from the first John Jacob Astor.

Miss Chanler and Mr. White will be married soon.

It is the ambition of each year's crop of debutantes to announce a greater number of engagements than in preceding seasons. Until a short time ago the number announced this year had not been up to the mark, although eminently satisfactory as regards the social prominence and the future if not the immediate financial standing, of the contracting parties. The latest returns are apidly bringing this season's quota of engagements up to the standard.

Another interesting point is that the announcements are not confined to the younger set. Middle aged people are blithely announcing their engagements without comment or apology. At one of the recent smart weddings, the bride was attended by her debutante daughter, and rumor has it that this daughter is shortly to wed.

Summer Resorts Promise Gayety.

It is too early in the summer to pronounce with certainty which will be the gayest of the summer resorts, Southampton, Bar Harbor, Newport, and Narragansett are all giving excellent promise, with cottages renting well and in great demand, and with owners of houses refusing to lease. This may seem somewhat paradoxical, but you can reason it out for yourselves that it sound prosperous. Southampton has perhaps the longest season; houses open there early and do not close until late in the autumn. Although regular entertaining is not supposed to begin there before July 1, there are always, from the first of May, auction parties, week end parties, and dinners. Southampton is too many miles from New York, but it is so much nearer than Newport and Bar Harbor that it is a more possible all summer resort than the other places.

As ever, the question of great moment in each summer resort regards the visible supply of men. Will there be plenty of them? Not mere week enders, but men who will spend their summer there With the attractions and the distractions that an abundance of wealth procures the average man cannot be depended upon for a long stay anywhere. If he can only be persuaded to make some place his headquarters, that place will have as a rule a brilliant supply of feminine guests. But no well informed woman of the world is now rash enough to count with certainty on there being a sufficient number of dancing men available to warrant her in planning summer entertainments. Except for week end dinners, you cannot begin to count on them to show up. Mrs. Oliver H. P. Belmont was telling me one time just how her son stood on the matter of fashionable entertainments. You can scarcely lure them to Newport; they say they cannot waste their time in such idle dissipations and they do not bother to go to entertainments nor do they always send regrets.

Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor celebrated their second wedding anniversary last week at Ferncliff, their country home at Rhinebeck on the Hudson. This romantic place was also the scene of the first days of their honeymoon and of their early acquaintance, when they both were mere children. Naturally they were overwhelmed with congratulations from their many friends of the fashionable upper Hudson colony. They spent the day quietly and had dinner together tete a tete. Mrs. Astor's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Robert P. Huntington, whose estate joins that of Mr. Astor, are now at Staatsburg, where the Astor wedding took place on April 30, 1914.

CANADA For Your Vacation

THE Canadian Highlands of Ontario—comprising the notable districts of Muskoka Lakes, Lake of Bays, Timagami, Algonquin Park, Kawartha Lakes, French River, Nipissing and Georgian Bay—lie north of Toronto. Toronto is the gateway, from which Muskoka Lakes, the nearest resort, is but 112 miles distant.

They invariably please, because they are delightfully cool, the average temperature for June, July and August being only 63 degrees.

Balsam-Laden Air and Lingering Twilight

The Canadian resorts are popular because of their high altitude—from 1,000 to 1,800 feet above sea-level—the rare, clarified, spirit-lifting, delicious, invigorating, pine and balsam-laden air being a revelation; an ecstasy.

You will be impressed by Canada's long summer days and lingering twilight; those peculiar attractions of northern latitudes which characterize Scandinavia—the land of the midnight sun. The infinite tranquility of a homeward, twilight paddle across crystal Muskoka is likely to produce one of the out-standing memories of a whole lifetime.

Fine Hotels or Camp Life

The Canadian resorts are visited by people of refinement. Courtesy and hospitality are characteristic. The most successful people, some of the oldest families, go year after year. One feels happily at home.

Among the Highlands of Ontario are many lakes, hundreds of clear, cold streams, and boundless woods. In fact, part of the district is a government park, like the Yellowstone. The attempt to keep the country's beauty unspoiled has been successful, the railway entering being practically limited to one—the Grand Trunk. And our line has appreciated its exclusive advantages by co-operating in the construction of a number of fine, big, first class hotels, building rustic camps, and especially seeing to it that communication between the other hotels, boarding houses, private camps, cottages, settlements and stores by steamers, motor launches and rail, is frequent and convenient.

You will find each and every outing pleasure. At the big hotels, dances, cards, golf, tennis, riding, swimming, and canoeing. Then there is hunting and fishing with guides who will take you through Nature's unspoiled preserves by winding streams which, for over half of every year, only Indians navigate.

Get Our Comprehensive Free Guide Books

A trip to the Canadian resorts is a successful search for Nature's chiefest pearl; a crusade through that romantic land of which we so often read, yet so comparatively few of us ever visit.

And that is probably because the ideal, the romantic, seem so far away, when, in reality, they are very near indeed. There are hundreds of summer resorts which seem more distant, but, in reality, are no further away than Muskoka and the shores of Georgian Bay. It is also a fact that your living expenses while in Canada will be considerably lower than in many other resorts far less worthy of visit.

If interested, please call at our Chicago City Ticket Office, 301 So. Clark St., cor. Jackson Blvd., Chicago (Phone Wabash 1757) or address J. D. McDonald, Asst. General Passenger Agent, 112 W. NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY.

Lake Shore drive and will be attended by all the noted visitors to Chicago—and the city is to be "chock full" of them then—as well as all our local notabilities.

Mrs. Arthur Ryerson is chairman of the committee in charge of this entertainment—in fact, the idea for it sprang Minerva-like from her brain—and it promises to be the big social function of convention week. After the two political powwows are in session there will be little opportunity for anything like a general gathering of the clans. The chiefs of the various political factions represented here will spend their evenings in committee meetings and spectators will be too worn out with all day sessions to care for anything more than small and intimate dinners and suppers.

Goes to Lake Forest Estate.

Mrs. C. M. Ely has moved out to her Lake Forest abode. While the main house of her new estate is still on paper, the porter's lodge and gardener's cottage, which flank either side her entrance gateway, are finished, and she is going to occupy these this summer.

She is furnishing them simply, but with all that artistic quality for which she is celebrated among those who know her. She is giving a touch of Holland to the cottage she is to occupy herself. Quaint old Dutch tiles, Dutch china, and Dutch painted woodwork will aid her in this.

She has such innate good taste, such a natural gift for house building and house furnishing that had she not been born well provided with this world's goods she could have made a handsome living for herself as an interior decorator. In fact, a few years ago she seriously contemplated starting such a business to be directed by herself, and only gave up the idea when she realized the excessive physical tax it is on one who undertakes it.

She has rented her charming town apartment on the Lake Shore drive to the Edson Keiths for the month of May and the early days of June. They have taken it so as to give there the wedding of their daughter, Miss Katherine Keith, to David Adler, which will be celebrated about June 1.

Miss Keith will make a lovely bride. Her beauty is of an unusual order. Her features are clear cut, like a cameo, her coloring is striking—golden brown hair, delicate black eyebrows and lashes, and exquisite, shell pink complexion, and her whole effect is highbred and distinguished.

The ground will soon be broken for Mr. Adler's house in what—"faute de mieux" I must call—the Ryerson-Porter subdivision in Lake View avenue.

Welcome Former Chicagoans.

Two well known former Chicagoans arrived here last week and were warmly welcomed by their friends. Mrs. Roswell Miller of New York, spent two or three three days with Mrs. James B. Waller, who gave a luncheon for her on Thursday, while Mrs. Watson Blair entertained her at luncheon on Friday.

Mrs. William James of Boston, formerly Miss Alice Runnells of Chicago, brought her two small children last Tuesday to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Sumner Runnells. Mrs. Runnells gave a tea for her on Tuesday and a luncheon at the Saddle and Cycle club for her on Thursday.

The Saddle and Cycle, always popular, is coming into its own nowadays, for the spring and early summer see it at the zenith of its attractions.

The strange and monstrous looking new hotel to the north of it will not blight its outlook in that direction quite so much when the foliage on the club trees and bushes comes out in full leafage. The inevitable query, on looking at this amazing structure, is, Does it turn on a rotary base? Can the guests go to sleep at night looking at the sunset and wake in the morning with an outlook on the sunrise?

The Szukalski Exhibit.

If you have not seen the Szukalski exhibit at the Art institute, and if it be not too late to do so, go study it. It is a truly remarkable and worth while experience. There is one emotion expressed in the statues and drawings, one that dominates all the others, and that is suffering—pain, anguish, misery. Expressed it is with truly wonderful power.

When you know the story of the artist, Stanislaus Szukalski, you understand better the spirit that animates his work. He was born in Gidle, Poland, in 1893. He studied art at the Fine Arts academy in Krakow, where he received two gold medals and six prizes. A couple of years ago he joined his father in Chicago. His father, who was a workman, was killed here by an automobile last autumn, leaving his son alone and nearly friendless. The young man's mother is alone and poverty stricken in the war zone in Poland. His sister, a girl of 19, who was with her, is lost in that same terrible district.

When sympathy was expressed for such tragic afflictions he said: "O, we are used to sorrow in my family. My grandfather had nine sons. Eight of them were either executed or sent to Siberia as revolutionists. My father was the only one to escape."

His air as he told the tale of the Szukalskis was quiet, almost cheerful. But the tragedy of the Szukalskis is all portrayed in that room in the Art institute.

This long haired, rather undersized Polish lad, with the face of a poet, has undeniable genius—and don't forget that the difference between genius and talent is that "genius lights its own fires."

With all the gloom and fatefulness of most of his sculpture a certain grim humor is shown in such a drawing as the one entitled "Argument."

The spirit of his drawings, the anatomical vagaries of his sculpture, give one the impression of a soul in travail, in an agony of self-expression. Also he reminds one of Durer, of Michael Angelo, and of William Blake. Altogether he arrests the attention and startles the imagination. Go to see his exhibit.

The poets' contention that poetry is the natural expression for those laboring under injustice and in the grip of some supreme conviction is borne out by the case of Miss Emily Larned, who in one day burst into poetry in two of our dailies, each one voicing her cry—and she represents most of us in her cry—for double decker motor busses on our boulevards and pleasure drives. Don't let any one misunderstand us when we say that Miss Larned's poetry is a two edged sword. However, we don't care what kind it is if it will only bring the day of motor busses nearer.

WEDDINGS.

"Arms and the Woman"

Well-groomed women remove the hair from their underarms with El Rado. It leaves a graceful ease and perfect freedom of arm motion not otherwise possible. "I feel frolicsome,"—one woman expressed it in her first outburst of El Rado enthusiasm. "I just love the sensation of comfort and cleanliness," said another. "I hardly need any shields now, my underarm feels as cool and fresh as a baby's," volunteered a third.

Whether on face, lip, neck, or arms, El Rado removes the hair in a manner altogether unusually. It is a sanitary liquid toilet preparation that practically weakens the hair off by dissolving it in a few moments without harming the skin. El Rado does not increase or encourage later hair growth, as is the case with shaving. Easily applied with piece of absorbent cotton. Money-back guarantee. At all Toilet Counters, 50c and $1.00.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD.

Bible Society Completes 100 Years of Work.

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

TODAY is world's Bible Sunday. Throughout the United States and in many foreign countries the day will be recognized. It marks the one hundredth anniversary of the organization of the American Bible society. The interest other countries feel in the American Bible society grows out of the work of the society in behalf of other nations and especially the non-Christian nations.

During the 100 years of its history the American Bible society has published at home and abroad 115,000,000 copies of the scriptures. It has received and spent in money over $38,000,000. The prosecution of the work employs 2,000 persons in addition to many who assist without monetary compensation.

The society circulates the Bible in 150 languages and types. It issues the scriptures in thirty more languages. It issues Bibles for the blind—three systems in English, two in Arabic, one each in Spanish, Armenian, Armeno-Turkish, Japanese, Korean, and Siamese. It prints the Bible in five languages for the American Indians and in eight languages of the Philippine islanders.

In Washington, D. C., President Wilson will deliver at 4:30 o'clock the anniversary address in Memorial hall. Mrs. Wilson was chairman of the Bible pageant which was given last evening in Convention hall, Washington, by the Sunday school children.

At Unity Evangelical Lutheran church, Balmoral and Magnolia avenues, today at 10:45 a. m. there will be a thanksgiving and praise service celebrating the successful conclusion of the new church campaign, which resulted in the completion of a fund of $25,000 for the proposed new church. The choir will sing the "hallelujah chorus." Miss Hattie Engelhardt will be the soloist.

The United Charities appeal to the churches of Chicago for additional help. Contributions, the officers say, have decreased while the demand for assistance is greater than ever. A false notion prevails, in the opinion of those who have tried to account for the failure of many to respond to the misconception on the part of the public that there is less distress than last year. The reverse of this is true. One person out of every 25 in Chicago applied for help, while 1 out of 417 contributed towards the funds.

The Rev Herbert B. Gwyn

The Rev. Herbert Britton Gwyn will conduct his first service as rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of the Holy Comforter, Kenilworth, at 8 o'clock today, when he will administer the holy communion. He will preach at 11 and at 7:45 o'clock.

Last Sunday he preached his farewell sermon at St. Edmund's church, where he has been priest in charge for the last year. He established St. Simon's church, Sheridan Park, in 1902, and served the parish until 1912, when he resigned in order to become editor of the Churchman of New York. He is the Chicago correspondent for The Living Church, and editor of the diocesan organ, The Diocese of Chicago.

Mr. Gwyn has been active in social service and in Sunday school work. He has been secretary of the Chicago Law and Order league. He is a member of the social service commission of his denomination and helped in establishing the cathedral shelter house.

He is a graduate of the University of Toronto, Canada, and was ordained in St. James cathedral, Toronto. He is the son of a clergyman, his mother also being the daughter of a clergyman.

Next Friday the international convention of the Young Men's Christian associations of North America will meet in Cleveland, O. Chicago delegates will include the following: Cyrus H. McCormick, W. F. Hypes, E. P. Bailey, W. P. Sidley, E. M. Bowman, Frederick T. West, Francis P. Butler, L. H. Webb, E. A. Halsey, C. C. Hatfield, James L. Houghteling Jr., R. R. Western, A. R. Jackson, and George R. Arthur.

The convention will represent 2,000 associations, nearly 700,000 members, and 4,000 employed officers. The value of the buildings and grounds is nearly $100,000,000. The amount of missionary money spent in home work is $354,000 and in foreign work $443,000. The annual expense for maintenance exceeds $13,000,000.

The call for the convention says: "This will not be a popular meeting for effervescent youths nor an evangelistic rally. It is a serious summons to the responsible men of the movement—mature in judgment, seasoned in service, and capable for undertaking. It is the only legislative assembly of the whole movement."

The convention aims to interest the lay members of the associations rather than to turn the work over to the paid secretaries.

Among the Chicago speakers will be Bishop W. F. McDowell, the Rev. Dr. John Timothy Stone, and Raymond Robins. The Rev. Dr. J. H. Jowett and Robert E. Speer of New York also will be among the leading speakers. The convention will close May 16.

The Hopkins Park Baptist church will be dedicated today. The pastor of the church is the Rev. J. B. Little. He will be assisted at the dedication by the Rev. E. P. Brand, state superintendent, and neighboring pastors.

Ground will be broken tomorrow afternoon for the building of the nave of the Protestant Episcopal cathedral church of St John the Divine in New York. Bishop Greer will officiate and Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia university, will be one of the speakers. It is expected to take five years to complete this part of the cathedral.

Next Sunday the conference sermon of the national conference of charities and correction, which meets in Indianapolis, will be preached by the Rev. Worth M Tippy, pastor of the Madison Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, New York. The conference will begin next Wednesday and will continue until the following Wednesday. Harry Olson, chief justice of the Municipal court; Mrs. Louise Osborne Rowe; Miss Minnie C. Low; Eugene T. Lies; James Mullenbach, and Ald. Charles E. Merriam are among the Chicago representatives.

Dean Michael F. Weldon, pastor of Holy Trinity Catholic church of Bloomington, Ill., will be invested next Wednesday with the title and honors of monsignor by the Rt. Rev. Edmund M. Dunne, bishop of Peoria. The ceremony will take place at 10 o'clock in the church. Bishop Dunne will celebrate pontifical high mass in connection with the ceremony.

Bishop E. M. Dunne will celebrate pontifical high mass on next Tuesday in connection with the Illinois state meeting of the Knights of Columbus at La Salle, Ill.

Archbishop G. W. Mundelein will dedicate this morning the Holy Family Catholic church at North Chicago and administer the rite of confirmation. On Tuesday at 10 a. m. he will celebrate pontifical mass at the golden jubilee of the Alexian Brothers' hospital.

The Alexian Brothers' hospital, located at 1200 Belden avenue, which is celebrating this month and particularly on next Tuesday its golden jubilee, is one of the big hospitals of Chicago. It has opened its doors to persons of all creeds and no creeds. The record shows it has cared for 101,623 persons. Of the number 50,905 were Catholics, 37,775 were Protestants, 6,430 were Jews, and 6,523 made no religious profession. Thirty-five thousand and eighty-two were nursed without charge, 15,200 paid in part for the service, and 51,351 paid the regular rates. Brother Peter Vesper has been rector of the hospital since 1913.

The early buildings of the hospital were destroyed in the great Chicago fire in 1871 and the buildings next erected had to be moved to make room for the Northwestern elevated road in 1895. The next year, 1896, twenty years ago, the present site was purchased and the buildings erected. In the meantime the Alexian Brothers established hospitals in Oshkosh, Wis., St. Louis, and in Elizabeth, N. J.

Let Us Show You Nemo Wonderlift Corsets Through a Doctor's Eyes

Third Floor—Center

And you will understand why they have within so short a time become so very popular—as shown here

Nature herself has taken the greatest of pains to properly support and protect the internal organs of the body with bony and muscular coverings.

The brain is covered with bone. Practically no harm can reach the brain from the outside.

Heart and lungs are protected likewise with a bony framework of ribs, only here there are spaces between for necessary expansion.

The organs of the abdominal cavity of women are not so well protected and held in place. Nature could not use bone here, because bone would interfere with the expansion of this region. So nature has covered the liver and stomach, the intestines and bladder with muscles for support and protection.

But, with most women, the abdominal muscles get weak, so that they cannot perform their task—the NEMO WONDERLIFT Corset furnishes ANOTHER SET OF MUSCLES.

That is the wonderful thing about the Wonderlift—it provides an extra set of oblique muscles. It is the only corset that furnishes another set of muscles that never fail to support. It promotes health by giving perfect physical support. It also prevents the corset from riding up and twisting, thus preserving smooth, fashionable lines.

It reshapes and reduces a too-full figure, and builds up and rounds out a too-slim figure. In other words, it corrects natural figure-defects; insures comfort.

The Nemo "bridge" assures freedom from pressure over the gastric region, promotes free breathing and good digestion, i. e., HEALTH. It also induces an erect, graceful, fashionable pose, without which real STYLE is impossible.

And it can do these things for you if you have them fitted properly and wear them properly. Our corsetieres, the best and most experienced in Chicago, will fit and instruct you gladly—for this service no extra charge is made. The Nemo Wonderlift Corset is..... $5

Stock Is Keeping Our Basement Tremendously Busy

The entire stock and everything marked at a new low price that should crowd Our Basement again Monday to its capacity. The values are so astonishingly good that it is no wonder we've been kept so very busy. Architecture or the Drama: Rupert Hughes on Photoplays.

By Percy Hammond.

MR. FAVERSHAM'S fiery Shakespearean enthusiasm has persuaded the Drama league to foster a movement for the erection of a Shakespeare memorial theater at a cost of, say, $500,000. At least it is so reported from St. Louis, where the organization has been debating recently the problems of the art which it so competently conserves. Six hundred dollars, it is said, has already been subscribed toward the building of the sanctuary, which is to have, of course, New York City as its capital; and a site near that of the Century theater, once a similar shrine, but now erstwhile, is suggested as an appropriate situation.

The subject of plays to be performed in this fane and of actors to perform them, it is understood, was lightly, if at all, touched upon in the deliberations. Therein, it seems, the Drama league and Mr. Faversham permit the laudable exuberance of their sentimental imagination to get the better of their judgment. It is not theaters that the drama needs, but dramas, and a public with taste enough to enjoy and support them. Now, if the Drama league would raise a fund of $500,000 to subsidize certain good actors and certain promising playwrights, American or otherwise, it would be doing more for the drama if less for architecture and real estate. For example, the half million might be allotted among Miss Grace George and Bernard Shaw; Miss Barrymore and Pinero and Ibsen; Mr. Faversham and Shakespeare; Miss Anglin and Langdon Mitchell; John Barrymore in fragments by Schnitzler and other Continentals; Mrs. Fiske in such old English plays as are deemed necessary to our esthetic development, and Maggie Teyte in musical comedies not by George V. Hobart or Irving Berlin.

Let these or other expert players operate beyond the urban limits which confine the arts; let them give to the eager inhabitants of the small towns the good and the glory of the drama, since American villages may not have the fine things in pictures or in music. The uplifters, I suspect, seldom stop to think that literature is the only art available to the majority who populate the hamlets. One may read Arnold Bennett or Walter Pater in Yellville, Ark. (the birthplace of our new postmaster), but he may not see there the dramas of Galsworthy, the pictures of Degas, the sculpture of the sinister person who committed "Goethe" in Lincoln park; and he may not hear the Chicago Symphony orchestra, Frederick Stock conducting, in Mr. John Carpenter's Perambulator suite, unless he make a distant and difficult pilgrimage.

Since the Drama is the culmination of all the arts, the Drama league ought to abandon its somewhat egoistical attitude and adopt one more in keeping with its announced purpose. As the Salvation Army of the theater, it should open the pearly gates to those who live in Alpena, Mich., as well as to the emigres in New York and Chicago. Mr. Faversham's Memorial theater will not, one fears, have as much evangelistic effect through all its years as one week of "Major Barbara," played by Miss George's company, would have in Wilkesbarre. Every time I hear of a subsidized theater building I think of the municipal playhouse once erected by a western city. After many solemn reams had been written about this structure and its significance in the serious magazines its dedicatory performance was given by Primrose and Dockstader's minstrels.

Mr. Hughes Has Hopes.

Mr. Rupert Hughes, the author of Miss Billie Burke's "Gloria's Romance," contributes to the color section of this edition of THE TRIBUNE an essay in which he sets forth with admirable sincerity the promise of the cinema as an art. He finds that the photoplay is opening vast, hitherto unused channels for the expression of human life, and so, penetrating the desert places of the drama, is becoming an instrument of culture, limitless in its possibilities. Mr. Hughes, as you know, is one of the few American novelists whose product may be read by adults, and it is sophisticated, observant, audacious, and frequently brilliant. He was born and reared in Keokuk, Ia., I believe, and though successfully resident in New York for many years he maintains a sympathetic attitude toward those he left behind.

In this TRIBUNE article he asserts that the day of bunk in the photoplay is past. No longer does the motor car, containing a dummy of the heroine, thrill the populace by its plunge over the precipice. The absurd, the inexplicable, the dishonest, the merely scenic photo thing is diminishing in its power to please. Mr. Hughes says that he believes an author of cinemas must now be on the level. He must exhibit his characters in all their moods, and, developing them, show motives human and veristic. There should be a reason, he thinks, for every thing that is done. These movie miracles, Mr. Hughes suspects, have been performed by him for Miss Burke in "Gloria's Romance," and he claims that though the lady's experiences are stirring they square with the flexible ordinances of existence. In case Mr. Hughes is correct in these assumptions there is about to be added to literature another art available to those who do not live in the cities. Hope for that outcome may or may not be inspired by the invasion of the photoplay business by the theatrical managers who at present are so brilliantly directing the adventures of the drama.

News of the Theaters.

The decorative Miss Quinn, illustrated elsewhere, is among the soubrette forces of "A World of Pleasure," the first performance of which, by the way, will occur on Wednesday, May 17, instead of Sunday. Clifton Crawford is also of the cast, as are Conroy and Le Maire, Collins and Hart, the Courtney sisters, and Miss Venita Fitzhugh.

Miss Fannie Brice, the soubrette, and Carl Randall and Bernard Granville, song and dance men who classify as "neat," will be in "The Follies of 1916." The three, in various editions of the Ziegfeld annual, are familiar performers.

Miss Patricia Collings will tomorrow evening originate the principal part in "Coleen," a play by Mrs. Cushing, who wrote "Jerry" and footlighted "Pollyanna." The tryout will be in Richmond, Va.

"The Boomerang," which has been running all season in New York City, is to be tried this week in London. The Misses Doris Lytton and Nina Boucicault will be in it. Miss Lytton is remembered in Chicago as the ingénue of "The Blindness of Virtue," Miss Boucicault a child of the famed Dion, has not acted in this country for nearly a generation. She was the first actress of Peter Pan.

Henry Sophus Sheldon, who wrote "The Havoc," has a new one, called "Men," which was last week experimented with in a small town in the east.

E. H. Sothern is to act eight weeks for the camera. Miss Maggie Tyte, whose Mimi in "La Boheme" was among the many delights of the Blackstone engagement of the Boston Opera-Pavlowa company, also is to act for the films. Her vehicle will be "I' Pagliacci."

Miss Maude Fulton, the attractive young woman who for so many seasons danced vis-a-vis with William Rock, is credited with success as the author of "The Brat," and as its principal player. It is on view in Los Angeles.

Victor Herbert has composed a special musical accompaniment for "The Fall of a Nation," a new photo spectacle by the Rev. T. Dixon, whose fiction furnished the theme for "The Birth of a Nation." Heretofore exhibitors of motion pictures have helped themselves in the matter of music.

If the Diaghilaff dancers return to the United States next season it will not be under the patronage of Otto Kahn. They are going to Spain for the summer, and are considering a proposition to come back under the management of the impresario of "Experience," he being the man who induced Miss Geraldine Farrar to become an actress for the films. The proposition involves Nijinski as the art director and formal head of the troupe.

Miss Mary Mannering, who has done no acting since the New York City run of "The Garden of Allah," 1911-12, is eager to resume.

Jack Norworth, once the husband and stage associate of Miss Nora Bayes, recently appeared before the king and queen of England at Buckingham palace.

Lionel Walsh is among the English actors known here who are fighting for their country. He is a captain. He is recalled as a good performer of musical comedy fops and swells.

It is stated that the sum of $50,000 represented the British war tax on the profits of the London run of "Peg o' My Heart" to April 1.

"Peter Piper" is the name of a new play by George C. Hazelton, author of "The Yellow Jacket" and "Mistress Nell."

Hall Caine's actor son, Derwent, has ceased acting for the present. He undertook to tour Canada in "Pete," dramatized by his father from "The Manxman," but the Canadians were not interested.

Miss Charlotte Granville of Miss Grace George's company was a member of the Drama Players whose efforts in behalf of the uplift were notable in the Lyric theater just before it became Great Northern Hippodrome. With Edward Emery she acted in the cast of "The Divorce?" which played a considerable engagement in Chicago soon after the close of the Drama Players' career.

Miss Florence Nash has become an heiress, according to the mimeograph. Her uncle, John Mack, recently deceased, bequeathed to her his books and pictures valued at $50,000.

Rollo Timponi, the alert and courteous treasurer of the Illinois, has been made treasurer of that theater, succeeding Augustus Pitou, who withdraws that he may take more intimate charge of his theatrical enterprises which include Fiske O'Hara, the Irish actor.

A Harbinger of the Summer Shows

Ears Toward Summer Music; Ravinia's Good Foot Forward.

By Eric De Lamarter.

UNLESS the stars are liars the merry little game of "saving Ravinia" will become an obsolete sport this year, for the leading summer music park of the west appears to have acquired the most alluring attraction of its history for the coming months of negligée art. If you care little for the "New World" symphony, played by a first rank symphony orchestra, you still may turn to the lithe grace of that justly famed première danseuse, formerly of the resident opera and now of the Metropolitan, Rosina Galli. If you still yearn for other ministrations there will be the opera, from "The Jewels of the Madonna" to "Lohengrin." Since the engagement of Lydia Lopoukowa there has been no dancing interest at Ravinia comparable with this, and Miss Lopoukowa, though a star of the popular Russian school, is still less known to this immediate neighborhood than the dainty little Italian, whose admirers of the opera public chanted her praises season after season.

The opera ensemble, with Mmes. Berlza, Wentworth, and Garrison and MM. Kingston and Henri Scott in the foreground, should give the casts more authority than they have had heretofore. And there is no demand for explanation of the Chicago Symphony orchestra's presence; its standards have never been equaled at Ravinia. Frederick A. Stock, the conductor, will not be on duty, it is true. One of his substitutes, Richard Hageman, is a known quantity, however, and worthy. If some benevolent judge with a penchant for al fresco music will put one J. Pluvius under bonds to keep the peace, now——

There is something particularly enticing in such a summer park, with the savonaceous strains of Goldmark's "Rustic Wedding" symphony, or the flamboyant pageantry of Tschaikowsky's "1812 Overture" vying with the voice of the night wind in the trees. Once there were mosquitos in that Elysium; worried, of late, have been the inveterates of the north shore, as they thought upon this matter and reflected as to the modistes' decrees for the summer. Determined onslaught last summer, however, has brought results, according to the report of an inhabitant of Wilmette, who attended a massmeeting of rejoicing the other night. He is offering a bounty on every scalp taken north of Howard avenue.

Gone, too, the days when one packed a day's provisions as he started for north. The Northwestern railroad has promised a generous allowance of trains; a new, cheap substitute for gasoline is about to be put on the market; the electric roads melt in tenderness as they scheme for adequate schedule. But the dinner basket will come in hardy, all the same, for the orchestra members have set the fashion for al fresco pabulum between ministrations of al fresco music. The whistle of that nine-something fast express, too, will be muted so as to make less impression upon the slow movement of the "New World" symphony. Twice, in the past, have we heard it cut squarely in two by that abhorrent squeal.

Certainly, the promise of summer music, dancing, and opera is the best promise of any season in its history.

What the Russian Singers Suggest.

The Russian singers from the Cathedral of St. Nicolas, New York, were one of the joys of the season rapidly drawing to a close. Part of the reason, of course, was their novelty and the peculiar beauty of their literature; but by the strict canons of musical art they justified the encomiums wafted themward. The salient points of that concert (very much in the nature of a church service) were touched upon briefly in chronicle of the event.

It may not be too late, however, to suggest that their success concerns our own liturgic music's future very surely. In the first place, it is another influence toward popularizing à capella singing, and in the second, the rich, simple, colorful beauty of the repertory cannot but leave its traces on an art which has needed a vitalizing touch for some years. Merely to hint the nature of these influences, let us suggest that the sharp contrast between the German, English, French, and Italian schools and this newer school lies in the basic fact that the Russian is essentially a chant form, while the others put either melodic of polyphonic beauty first in importance.

Again, the multiplicity of "doubled" parts creates a soft sonority sensuously exquisite. The emphasis laid upon declamation necessitates a frank, direct style. The fidelity to the phrases of the texts, no considerable elaboration being permissible, contributes to the same end. The immediate benefits should be increased efficiency by reason of singing without accompaniment; keener judgment and higher standards of tone and interpretation; the inclusion of a novel beauty in the literature. The remote dangers may be a loss of structural strength (for this style of composition cannot be imitated; it demands as great skill and as exacting canons as any other), and an easy interest in things merely eccentric. It is an influence, you see, similar to that of Russian opera and ballet.

The death of Edward J. de Coppet in New York a few days ago takes from the musical world one of those rare men whose ideals are high, whose appreciation has breadth and insight, whose judgment is good, whose generosity knows no stint, whose purse is the able servitor of these virtues. He is the man who conceived the idea of the Flonzaley quartet and made it the thing of beauty it has proven itself to be. Mr. de Coppet's name has appeared modestly in relation to his quartet's activities, but his influence in New York and its environs has been of incalculable good to the art in general. The Evening Post was moved to comment editorially in the words, "New York has seldom seen a wiser patron of the arts or a more complete realization of the communal responsibilities which wealth brings to the man of conscience."

Ratan Devi, a singer of East Indian ragas and Kashimiri folk songs, comes to the Little theater this evening for the first of a series of recitals. Her success in New York has been remarkable, and, so far as memory serves, she is the first authoritative interpreter of this oriental art to appear in this city, excepting only the group of musicians in Ruth St. Denis' company playing at the Studebaker theater some four or five seasons ago. Ratan Devi is an Englishwoman who married Dr. Ananda Coomaraswamy, the leading art critic of his country, according to the New York Evening Post, and "lived in India so long that she became as one of the natives in her sympathies and accomplishment." These recitals will be "costume" affairs, and the accompaniments played on the tambours. " . . . . as though a moment of life had caught there, an emotion had come to a sudden casual perfection," commented W. B. Yeats.

Burns Mantle's New York Letter

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Money may make a mare go, but it is poor fodder for a muse. Vide the New theater, the hundred or more unhappy "movements" preceding and following that venture and any god's quantity of productions about whose frail bodies the purring sounds of angels' wings have registered deep distress.

Take our most recent sample of failure in such circumstances, a musical play called "Come to Bohemia." This production, as previously related, was financed by a coterie of art lovers with money to spend. Some twenty or thirty of them, again feeling that something should be done for art, especially an art that occasionally returns large profits, agreed to advance $1,000 apiece.

With this money the Stuyvesant Producing company was organized, the rights to "Bohemia" secured, and a publicity campaign filled with glittering promises inaugurated. Nothing that seemed necessary to the production was denied it. There were brand new velvet coats for the happy ha! ha! ha! students and new breakfast caps to give studio atmosphere to the la! la! la! girls.

When the jokes of George Chappell, the librettist, grew stale at rehearsal gentlemen who specialize in such things were employed to write new ones. When the music of Kenneth Murchison, the composer, seemed to need more zip, a Chicago tune tinkerer, one Raymond Hubbell, was engaged to impart it. The scenery was not grand, but it was good.

Yet "Come to Bohemia" failed to achieve anything like a promising premier. A conventional affair of the most common sort it proved to be—a composer hero wedded to his art and neglecting a soprano heroine who would give all for the privilege of singing the principal rôle in his opera. Poor child, she is thereupon forced to engage herself to a duke and sing a dramatic finale, not getting back to the composer until the last act.

So with all that money could do for it there was still a noticeable absence of brains employed in the production of "Come to Bohemia." It is of the stuff that college plays are made of. Natalie Alt sings prettily the heroine's rôle, and others engaged include Clara Palmer, Walter Percival, William Danforth, Fritz Williams, Denman Maley, and Olive Reeves-Smith, the last named a daughter of the English actor who played with Laurette Taylor in "Peg o' My Heart" all last season.

There is one moneyed enterprise, however, that is just now promising results. That is the Drama society. This is a

A Letter About "Major Barbara" from Its Author, Mr. Shaw

The following letter from Mr. Shaw to George C. Tyler explains vaguely why "Major Barbara" was not played by Miss Eleanor Robson, for whom it was written:

My dear Tyler: You have made the most stupendous mess of this business. That is the worst of you Americans; you are uncommonly nice people personally, but you have no notion of practical affairs. I went into the Haymarket business with Harrison months ago; and I should have liked to go to his house if it were possible, but it isn't. Now that our project has come to grief, there is no use wasting our time in telling you why; you must take my word for it.

Vedrenne's report of your interview was virtually the same as yours; but Vedrenne, of course, being, if not English, at least Norman-English, did you in the eye. He wanted Annie Russell, who had been talking to him a good deal; and he did not want Miss Robson, whom he never saw. . . . Of course, he greatly preferred to take Miss Russell if he could do so without losing me. You can imagine his delight when you—YOU, George Tyler, great baby as you are—began to play into his hands by making difficulties and talking about the Haymarket. He had all the cards in his hands except Miss Robson—the fashionable Shaw Theatre patronized by the king, the educated Shaw audience, the library guarantee, the repertory system which makes an open failure impossible, and the knowledge that Granville Barker was absolutely indispensable to the cast, not to mention Calvert and Miss Filippi, whom Harrison could, perhaps, have replaced without actually wrecking the play. You see he had heard half the play and knew I was depending on all the court cards for it. So he sat tight and snorted at you; and you rose at it and snorted at him as the keeper of a two-penny-half-penny outside theatre; and Miss Robson lost her play and will never forgive you, and serves you right!

You ought to go straight into a penetentiary for at least six months.

Now I must make pitiful apologies to Miss Robson. She will never forgive me, either, but, as for you, she will never speak to you again unless she is as magnanimous as she is lovely.

G. BERNARD SHAW.

P. S.—My wife says that you didn't want Miss Robson to play Barbara, either; and that you and Vedrenne have simply outwitted me and Miss Robson between you; but, on consideration, I reject this view, though, of course, if you had really wanted a thing to come off, it would have come off.

separate organization from the Drama league. It was organized some two or three years ago, first to help its members select worthy plays at the theater, and second, to bolster such plays as were recommended by its playgoing committee while they were most in need of help. Its members are obligated to attend at least ten plays during a season, pay current box office prices for their seats, and make it a point to go during the first weeks of the run.

Mrs. August Belmont, who was Eleanor Robson, is a prominent member, and John Corbin is the secretary. An early season advertising campaign boosted the membership of this society, and this has been its best year. This spring, wanting to do something for Shakespeare and the people, the Drama society decided upon an Elisabethan performance of "The Tempest" at the Century. And now, determined to bring that production within the reach of the people they have called for contributions to pay for tickets "at movie prices" for all school children who cannot afford to buy tickets for themselves, even at 10 cents.

Last week the society sold blocks of seats to many schools, the students of which attended in a body, two and three hundred youngsters at a time marching bravely toward the drama. So successful has this practical theatrical philanthropy proved that it is now announced a similar experiment with a classical production will be engineered by the society each spring.

It was not expected that Arnold Daly would make a particularly impressive Beau Brummel, and he did not. However, he is too good an actor and this is too "fat" a part for him to fall utterly in, and far from doing that he is some part of a success. Just how big a part the next fortnight probably will tell.

To the older playgoers who recall Mansfield's beau, and any who saw it are bound to recall it readily, for it was that kind of a performance. Daly's revival seems rather a presumptuous undertaking. But the resentment is purely superficial. He really does very well with the part. He has neither the figure nor can he assume gracefully the manners of a dandy. His rather unusual personality, however, does in a way fit into the various niches cut by Mansfield for Mansfield. He plays the first act, in Brummel's lodgings, fairly well; the second, at the Carleton, and especially the third, on the Mall, through the episode of meeting and snubbing the blustering Wales, well indeed, and the last act quite ineffectively.

Speaking of the amputation of the ancient "aside" E. H. Sothern has had the good judgment to leave those that presumably incumber the script of "If I Were King" just they were written. And you are much surprised to discover that they are not in the least in the way and that they rather add to the interest the audience takes in the proceedings.

Of course, "If I Were King" is an artificial sort of a fairy play, anyway. Almost any liberty might be taken with it without harm to the story. And it is real cute, by way of novelty, to know just what Villon or crafty Louis happens to be thinking.

The Sothern revival, the proceeds of which are to go to the Actors' fund, is a complete, even glorious success. The seats for the fortnight's engagement are practically all sold, many of them at a premium. There was $6,000 in the house the opening night, so the box office gossips say. It is a thoroughly good revival, too, in every way. Virginia Hammond, leaving her Chicago home to have a part in it, lends her blonde beauty and better than a fair enthusiasm to the playing of Huguette, sharing the histrionic honors of the evening with Mr. Sothern and Alexandra Carlisle, a cold but charming Katherine.

Margaret Anglin's revival of "A Woman of No Importance" lives by its wit alone. Dramatically it is not the best of the Wilde répertoire by a good deal. It seems, in revival, a frank attempt on the part of the author to write a play that shall have as little body as possible and still be interesting. No suggestion of story or plot until the middle of the second act, and then the familiar situation of the mother discovering her son, brought up in ignorance of his illegitimacy, about to accept a position in the employ of his father, her lover of other days.

There is drama in her confession to the son, good drama, and more in her refusal to bow to convention and set matters right by marrying the man. But it is twenty years since it was in any sense a daring situation. Miss Anglin dutfully gowns herself in black and modestly weeps as the worried mother, doing much thereby to make her revival interesting. Holbrook Blinn is the naughty Lord Illingworth, but it is not the type of part he does with any particular distinction. Therefore he is not altogether happy in it.

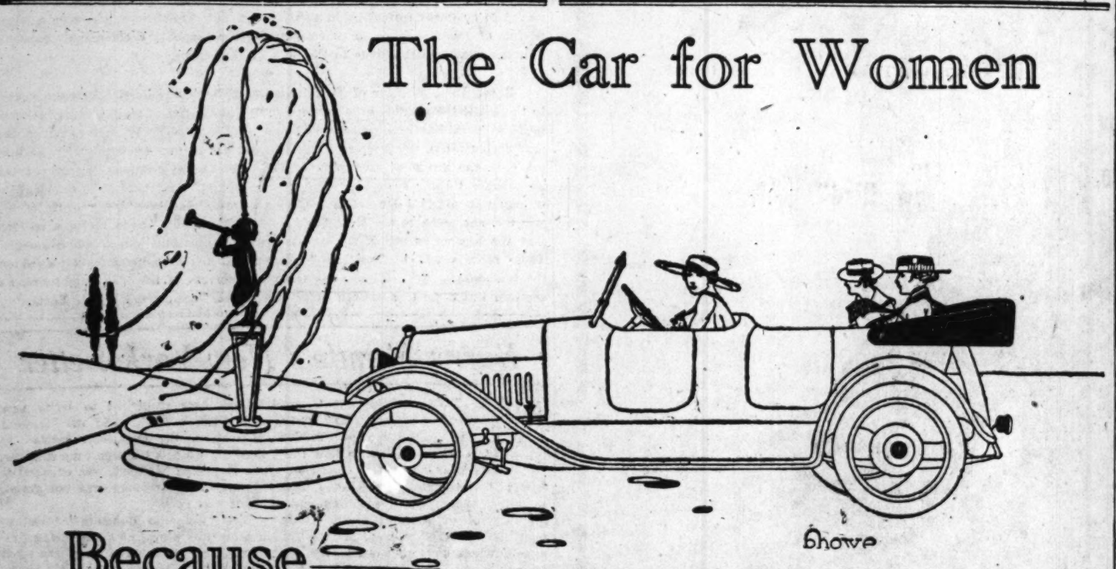
The Car for Women



Because—

One needn't be a mechanic to drive the Detroiter Six. Its makers have built dependability under its beauty. Milady is safe to drive where she will, without fear that something will "go wrong."

Its beauty is built by the most artistic designers. Its lines are those of the world's greatest motors. Its finish is striking, virile, in best taste.

It is so easy to drive the Detroiter Six! Clutch is on double leverage so that her small foot moves it easily. The brakes take firm hold with little effort. The foot accelerator is convenient. The gearshift is at natural arm's length. The big wheel comfortably placed guides the car untiringly.

Comfort is built all over the strength of the car. Seats are spacious, in comfortable position, leg-roomy and wide. Upholstery is genuine leather, deep, springy and soft. The big Continental motor purrs easily.

The price of the Detroiter Six, taking in all the equipment, conveniences, high character, material and finish, establishes completely as the ideal woman's car, the MAJESTIC.

The Farber girls:

"Do you like to dance?"

"Yes, the boys say I'm awfully light on their feet."

"Do you like music?"

"Why, I know every bar from here to Hammond."

"Don't you think the Blue Danube is intoxicating?"

"Yes, but I can get mine just as quick on Green Mountain."

"I met a Johnnie last night."

"Did you make a hit?"

"I should say so! He'd get down on his knees and die for me."

"What is more important, will he stand up on his feet and work for you?"

"There are two things you can't disguise—a married man and a Ford."

"How can you tell?"

"By their clutch."

"Do you know artists are seeking me all the time to pose for them? Fisher has been after me for weeks, and—"

"Fisher!"

"No other. He's simply crazy about my profile."

"You mean to tell me that you're going to be model for the great Harrison Fisher?"

"No—Bud."

Cressy and Dayne:

"Liquor makes men do desperate things, doesn't it?"

"I should say so. It made me spend 50 cents to hear Bryan lecture."

"I don't see why you want to stay in the show business. What do you get out of it?"

"I got this car out of it."

"I mean something that's worth while."

"That will be all from you. At that, though, an automobile is a great deal like a man; it smokes and kicks and comes home at night lit up. By the way, what was the last show that played here?"

"'Ben Hur.'"

"Was it a success?"

"Yep, it kept me pretty busy sellin' tickets. There was a line outside the theater, but they finally got in—both of 'em."

"Did the cast make a hit?"

"Yes, Ben he did pretty well, but the audience didn't seem to take to Hur."

James B. Carson in "The Red Heads":

"Give me some orders, will you?"

"Yes, I'll give you two right now."

"Well—"

"Get out and stay out."

FEATURE FILMS OF THE WEEK

"A Stranger in New York"—Three act Selig feature with Otis Harlan in an all star cast.

"The Elephant's Gratitude"—Selig drama starring Edith Johnson, Harry Lonsdale, and—an elephant.

"Elusive Isabel"—Six reel Blue Bird picturization of the novel by Jacques Futrelle. Florence Lawrence in the lead. The plot has to do with a foreign power against the neutrality of this country. There are many mysterious complications.

"Maria Rosa"—Lasky picturization of the play. Geraldine Farrar is featured. It was in the play of the same name that her husband made his fame. The story has to do with a peasant girl for whose hand two lovers compete.

"None So Blind"—Three act Lubin production featuring Ruth Seville.

"Peg o' the Ring"—First episode of the new Universal serial. Ruth Stonehouse and Eddie Polo play in the leads.

"The Beloved Liar"—Three reel Big U drama featuring Joe Jefferson and little Joe Bech.

"The Innocent Lie"—Famous Players drama featuring Valentine Grant. The plot is drawn around the story of a poor Irish emigrant.

"The Law Decides"—Vitagraph drama, with Dorothy Kelly, Harry Morrey, and Bobby Connelly playing the leads. Rather mixed up domestic complications form the plot.

"The Oath of Hate"—Knickerbocker star feature, with Henry King in the lead. A drama of the sea.

"The Resurrection of Hollis"—Three act Broadway star feature. Billie Bruce and Arthur Cozine play the leads.

"The Secret of the Submarine"—American serial picture starring Juanita Hansen and Thomas Chatterton. Interesting.

"The Snowbird"—Metro drama in which Mabel Taliaferro is starred in an all star case, among whom are Edwin Carewe and James Cruze.

"The Spirit of '61"—Three reel Thanhouser production, featuring Grace Carlton and J. H. Gilmore.

"Who's Guilty?"—New Pathe two reel series, starring Anna Ellsson and Tom Moore. These photoplays novels are based on social errors in modern society.

La Salle—"The Little Girl Next Door," Essanay drama.

Strand—"The Market of Vain Desire," Triangle-Kay Bee production, featuring H. B. Warner. Also an excellent musical program.

Studebaker—The first installment of "Gloria's Romance," George Kleine serial, starring Billie Burke and Henry Kolker. "Maria Rosa," Lasky picturization of the play. Geraldine Farrar is featured.

Ziegfeld—"The Snowbird," Metro drama, with Mabel Taliaferro, Edwin Carewe, James Cruze, and an all star cast. "Lying Lips," American production. Winnifred Greenwood and Franklin Ritchie are featured.

In a picture now being produced at the Pallas studios Myrtle Stedman has a wonderful part—rather she plays what amounts to three parts—mother, at two stages of her career, and the daughter.

Mirror Films are announcing with glee that they will be able to show a real alligator fight in a coming Nat Goodwin comedy.

MISS SISSON NO LONGER.

DICK ROSSON, American leading man, and Miss Vera Sisson, Vitagraph star, who was formerly with J. Warren Kerrigan, Universal, were recently married. The wedding was a quiet affair. Mr. Rosson and Miss Sisson slipped away and when they returned Miss Sisson was Miss Sisson no longer. Mr. Rosson is a brother of Helene and Queenie Rosson.

The Essanay company and Charles Chaplin are having a lot of fun these days' sueing each other.

Blanche Sweet is completing at the Lasky studios for early presentation a picture entitled "The Thousand Dollar Husband." James Young is the author and producer. Yes, the Mr. Young who was Clara Kimball Young's husband.

George Kleine, who is producing the great Billie Burke serial, called "Gloria's Romance," has insured the gowns which this young woman will wear for $40,000.

It is estimated that 1,000,000 people trace their source of income to photoplays.

Gladys Hanson is married to Charles Emerson Cook. The wedding took place in Atlanta, Ga. Mr. and Mrs. Cook will live in New York.

Clara Kimball Young will make a picture of Robert W. Chambers' novel, "The Common Law." The initial picture is to be shown under the auspices of the Clara Kimball Young corporation.

Says Sidney Drew: "Three-fourths of life should be laughter."

It is said that Essanay's seven act picturization of "Sherlock Holmes," with William Gillette himself taking the part, is one of the most expensive productions of recent days. Mr. Gillette himself is without doubt receiving quite enough money to keep him in peace and comfort for some days. Supporting him are several expensive persons who were with him in the play. It is a private opinion of this special person that Mr. Gillette is worth every red penny he can get.

WHEN the Goodyear Service Station Dealer talks to you about Goodyear Tire Accessories, credit him with trying to render a real service.

He will show you that the Goodyear Tire Saver Kit contains materials for making road repairs when accidents occur.

He will test your wheel alignment; he will suggest an Inside Protector if such can add to the mileage of an old tire: he will recommend Goodyear Tire Putty to fill tread cuts and prevent damage from dirt and water.

He sells tire satisfaction in addition to tires; he is not content until you are fully and finally pleased.

ART by Louise James Bargelt

TWO EXHIBITS THIS WEEK.

ALL preparations are being made at the Art institute for the two exhibitions which are to open on Thursday afternoon. They will follow the current exhibitions of the Palette and Chisel club, the Art Students' League of Chicago, and the work of Stanislaw Szukalski.

These two exhibitions will include altogether about 350 works. There will be a rotary exhibition of water colors and miniatures sent by the American Federation of Arts. The majority of these have been gathered from Washington and Philadelphia and from the New York Water Color exhibit. With these will be a small group of fifteen water colors by Alexander Robinson, which were greatly praised at the Panama-Pacific exhibition, and also a group of twelve unique and interesting illustrations by Douglas Stewart Walker.

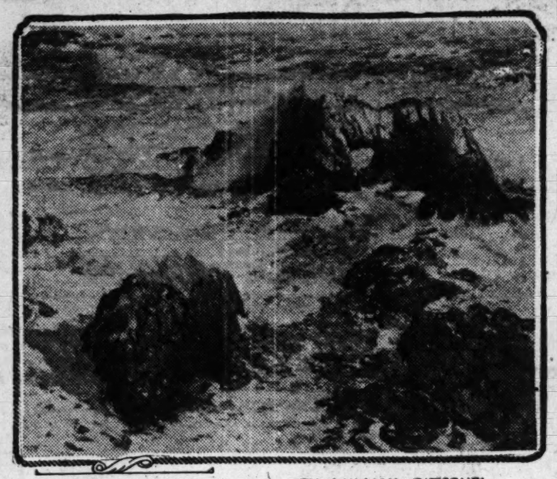
The public is promised a delightful treat in this display of exquisite water colors. Room 28 will be devoted to about sixty of the finest ones, which have been loaned by the Philadelphia Water Color club.

There are also to be shown twenty-five large oil paintings by William Ritschel of New York. He has been devoting much of his time this year to California scenery and many of his finest works will be included in this exhibition. Both exhibitions on Thursday will be opened by a reception.

Beginning Monday, May 15, two conventions, the American Association of Museums and the American Federation of Arts, will take place in Washington. The Art institute has appointed several delegates, among them Charles L. Hutchinson, Newton H. Carpenter, and Mrs. Herman J. Hall. Mr. Carpenter will talk on "How the Art institute of Chicago Has Made Itself Useful to the public" and "How Museums Can Increase Their General Usefulness." Mrs. Hall will discuss "The Art Museum and Its Relation to the Public."

The combining of these two conventions in the same city is expected to stimulate interest in their common cause. It is the eleventh annual meeting of the American Association of Museums and the seventh annual meeting of the American Federation of Arts. The conventions will be concluded on May 19 by a dinner at which will be present many of the country's best known authorities on the various branches of art.

So many questions are being asked concerning the art of Ralph Blakelock that an explanation of it briefly, in comparison with the works of other landscape painters, seems necessary.



CALIFORNIA BEACH BY WILLIAM RITSCHEL

Blakelock occupies a different field in the art world, just as Poe and Coleridge and Blake occupied strange fields in the literary world. He is a law unto himself. His genius has transcended previously established bounds. His landscape painting is a step beyond anything which has been produced in America. Not that it is greater than Martin or Wyant or Inness. Perhaps it is not even so great. But it is a thing apart, unto itself.

American painters are comfortably objective. To be sure, their works are stamped with their own moods, their own emotions and impressions. But they believe that true art is representative art. Their landscapes are landscapes to them as they are landscapes to the world in general.

But Blakelock's nature revelations are the revelations of his own soul. His moonlights reflect its lights and shadows, as his sunlights reflect its illuminations. His forests are the fantasies of his brain, and yet his trees are always strangely familiar.

The present generation understands Blakelock. Whether the one to come will or not is a question. Rules are dangerous things to break. Homer takes no chances. Nor do Martin and Inness. Blakelock awaits the judgment of posterity.

An extremely interesting exhibition is being held of oil paintings and water colors at the American Art gallery this week in the Postal Telegraph building.

Rita Gould: Dear old Boston. There's a city for you. You may talk about New York till further orders, but for me, the big beanery on Massachusetts bay. Say, did you ever go to the theater with anybody from Boston? You can take a Boston man to see Bernhardt, Langtry, Rehan, Marlowe, or Adams and before the first act is over he'll say: "She's good, but did you ever see Annie Clarke?"

Gossip of the Auto Trade

Spring automobile shows held by dealers in their agencies along motor row are a great success. This is the opinion of the officials of the Owen-Buxton company, which had the Reo on display during the last week. The interest aroused and the sales made exceeded the expectations of the Reo distributor. It is a curious fact that spring shows, although proposed back in 1908, have never met with the favor of the local trade.

The fact that the European automobile factories have been taken over for the manufacture of war munitions has caused a shortage of cars in all countries heretofore dependent upon the European source of supply. As a result American manufacturers are experiencing an enlarged demand from all quarters of the globe. The far away buyer in Australasia, China, Egypt, or wherever he may be, depends on the past reputation of the manufacturer and his known integrity as much as any other thing in buying his car. In the light of the world wide disturbances confidence in the product is an absolute necessity along with quality methods of building. The Velie Motor Vehicle company, manufacturer of the Velie Six, has recently inaugurated a special export department to handle the ever increasing correspondence and detail pertaining to foreign business. Velie literature is also being printed in several languages to eliminate the necessity of transiation on the part of both foreign

The Liberty Motor Car company is reported to have its first cars now on the road, and, according to Percy Owen, president and general manager of the company, it is expected that deliveries will commence early in July. As the company was organized but a few months ago, this is remarkably fast progress for this short time.

Jesse Edwards of the Edwards-Crist Manufacturing company proposes a motorcycle regiment for Chicago. He suggests that a thousand young men form a company equipped with motorcycles ready for their country's call. In this cry of preparedness he thought that a definite suggestion like this would meet with popular approval. Young fellows are all anxious to do something, but nothing absolutely definite has been really worked out. So the motorcycle companies, such as the Excelsior, Harley-Davidson, the Thor, and the Indian, are getting behind this movement to start a motorcycle regiment for Chicago and put it in active operation at once. Headquarters and general drill arrangements will be worked out as soon as possible.

President Eugene A. Sunderlin of the Pikes Peak highway and Spencer Penrose, brother of Senator Penrose, have appointed Worth Colwell to manage the first annual Pike's Peak automobile and motorcycle hill climbing contest, Aug. 10, 11, and 12, jointly with the Pike's Peak highway officials. Colwell will leave New York for Colorado Springs about the middle of July, and in the meantime has assurances of an entry list of considerable class, including the fastest cars and best known drivers in the world.

A car of the Willys-Overland company of Toledo set a new mark in Australia a short time ago by making the run from Albany to Armadale, a distance of 238 miles, in 6:32, one-third of the running time made by the express trains between the two points. The former record was 7:28:56. The run was made by Charlie Lewis, who holds the 150 mile championship in Australia, and Arthur Anderson of the firm of Anderson & Adams, Overland dealers in Perth.

A Tire, Time and Temper Saver

A tire inflated by hand is usually under-inflated.

In the first place you get tired and are out of wind; you strain your back doing it; and just let it go at that before your tire is properly or completely inflated.

Consequently your tire does not get enough air. As a result its life is short. Then you get sore and blame the tire manufacturers instead of yourself

A Stewart Tire Pump remedies this.

Your savings on tires alone will more than pay for your Stewart Tire Pump in a few months.

Its gauge indicates the correct pressure right to the dot.

All you have to do is to connect the pump hose to the tire valve then your automobile engine and your Stewart do the work while you look on; no work; no dirt; no bother.

Isn't such a convenience, time saver, tire saver and temper saver worth many times its cost?

The Stewart Tire Pump is only $12—complete.

You cannot afford to be without one!

For the sake of your comfort, convenience, economy and safety be sure that the next car you buy is equipped with Stewart Speedometer; Stewart Vacuum System; Stewart Warning Signal and Stewart Tire Pump. They should cost you nothing extra and are the surest sign of a car's real quality

SHE'S THERE BECAUSE SHE PERFORMS—
THE 3400 r. p. m. CHALMERS

Most cars start alike. But very few finish alike. Therein comes a mighty difference.

Step on the little button 10 months after date and you'll readily note the inequality.

One is sluggish, "dead", without emotion, and responds to the touch with the speed of old-time oxen responding to the lash.

The other is alive, alert, ready; radiates desire to plunge ahead.

This is the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers kind. The other kind is the species known to the trade as "one-year" cars.

Chalmers makes a five-year car. There's many an old 1909 Chalmers 30 Blue Bird giving a good account of itself today. You'll find the everlasting pep there five years from the day you take your first turn at the wheel.

Largely because of the 3400 r. p. m. engine. Which delivers mighty power with easy effort.

It's mostly in the design. The pistons are aluminum, about two pounds lighter per piston; the reciprocating parts lighter, which eases up the thrust on the bearings.

Then the crank-shaft, which is very heavy, and balanced to the weight of a hair in a special Chalmers device, spins at the rate of 3400 revolutions per minute.

It means excellent reserve power. For at 10 miles an hour the engine is turning up only 500 r. p. m. while at 20 she is doing about 1000 r. p. m. So that at excessive road speed she has the punch to deliver when called upon.

16% of her power is used at 10 miles an hour. So that she has 60% to 84%—when a twisting, hilly road looms ahead, when a sharp corner with a rugged grade hoves in sight; when the man ahead is showing you too much dust.

You'll like the 3400 r. p. m. Chalmers for one single little reason. She sure can perform.

Ask your dealer about Chalmers service inspection coupons, negotiable at all Chalmers dealers everywhere. This system is a most important consideration in buying your car.

Five-Passenger Touring Car,	$1090 Detroit.

FEDERAL

have been purchased by practically all of the large automobile makers and parts manufacturers. Their choice of the Federal is due entirely to its mechanical fitness. As builders of automobiles they know the Federal is a commercial vehicle that comes up to their rigid standards of construction.

Federal Motor Trucks are operating in practically every line of business. Right here in Chicago there are over 200 Federals satisfactorily handling a varied line of haulage problems. It will pay you to investigate the merits of the Federal.

ASTRONOMY
by CLIFFORD RAYMOND

PICTURE OF SUN SPOTS OBSERVED FEB. 2, 1916, AT 2. P. M.
Drawn by S. F. Maxwell.

SUN SPOTS.

IN 1859 two observers, at different stations, studying sun spots, saw two objects form and move across the face of the sun at incredible speed. In appearance the objects were luminous and shaped like new moons. They were 12,000 miles apart. Each was about 2,000 miles wide and 8,000 miles in length. They went eastward in parallel lines and before they disappeared had traveled 36,000 miles in five minutes.

This was, possibly, the most spectacular exhibition of activities on the sun which are associated with spots and faculae (little torches). The spots have considerable interest to popular imagination, having been invested with mysterious powers influencing earthly conditions.

That they do exert an influence is demonstrated. Imagination seeks to make that influence uncanny. It is in the phenomenon of magnetism that the influence is most clearly seen.

Sun Spots

It has been discovered that the oscillations of the compass needle are greatest at the time of the maximum activity of sun spots. To a considerable extent the spots are periodic. The maximum oscillations of the needle also are periodic and the two periods coincide. Furthermore, when peculiar and unusual activity is observed in the sun, there is a corresponding magnetic phenomenon on the earth.

Cause and consequence are established in this case. The Aurora Borealis bears a relation to magnetic disturbance and consequently to the sun spot activity.

The periods of the spots have been observed to be made up as follows: There are two or three years in which the spots are larger and more numerous than normal. Then for six or seven years they diminish in size and number until they reach a minimum. Then increasing, they reach their maximum in less than five years. These are the periods in which the oscillation of the needle of the compass varies.

The sun, on its surface, at least, is a gaseous body and its mass as a whole does not revolve as a rigid body would do, but at different speeds. The interior layers rotate more rapidly than the outer layers and out of this may come the explanation of the spots which appear on the surface.

It also has been supposed that they were caused by activities which might be likened to a whirlwind on earth. None of the spots is permanent. They vary from day to day and week to week, even from hour to hour. They have been observed for three hundred years, and it was by them that early observers detected that the sun revolved on its axis like the earth, taking, however, twenty-six days to make its rotation.

They also indicated that the surface of the sun was not that of a solid or liquid but of gas. Spots have been observed to fly apart and travel at a speed as high as a hundred miles a second.

The laws of the universe have only begun to reveal themselves in the obvious. That the sun warms the earth and keeps its life in existence is more important, but less suggestive of intricate relationship than the oscillation of a magnetic needle under the influence of a solar activity revealed in a sun spot.

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW
by FANNY BUTCHER

In the color section of "The Sunday Tribune" today you will find a page of some of the loveliest of the poems of that young god of verse, Rupert Brooke, whose golden lyre is still. The book from which they are reprinted is "The Collected Poems of Rupert Brooke," which is published by the John Lane company, and through whose courtesy these selections were made. It is a slender volume to be the sole monument to a poet, but a shaft which will endure.

NEW BOOK ON WAR.

STANLEY WASHBURN'S latest war book is "Victory in Defeat" [Doubleday-Page], which deals entirely with the Russian aspect of the great war. Mr. Washburn is the only American with the exception of the military attaché, Lieut. Sherman Miles, and Robert R. McCormick who has had any prolonged access to the Russian fighting lines. As correspondent for the London Times he was at the front with the Russian army from October, 1914, to November, 1915. The book is interesting typographically, because it was completely set up in three days.

"Two Plays" [Badger] is the title of a little volume which Morris M. Townley has written. The two are "Nothing Else to Do" and "Caught." Mr. Townley is a Chicago lawyer, by way of explanation, and "Caught," translated by Mrs. Townley into French, was presented by Le Cercle Français here in Chicago a month or so ago.

Rabindranath Tagore—one should prefix that with a sir now—has many followers as a poet and a dramatist. His first fiction to be available for English reading Americans will be a volume of short stories which will soon be published by the Macmillan company.

E. Phillips Oppenheim has moved to London because the coast of England bordering on the North sea is so frequently shelled by Zeppelins. "An Amiable Charlatan" [Little-Brown] is the forty-second novel from the facile Oppenheim pen.

Ian Hay's latest letter to friends in this country closes: "Personally I am very tired. I have just finished three months continuous slaving over my new machine gun company. We are out of the salient now and further south." Then in a postscript: "I reopen this to say that I have just received word that I am transferred to a job at home to be on the staff with the machine gun corps as an instructor." This means that the scene of "Carry On," the sequel to "The First Hundred Thousand," which is now running in Blackwood's and which will soon be published in this country, will shift from France to England.

"The Conquest of America" (Doran), Cleveland Moffett's startling tale of America after the great war, is now available in book form. It's a frightfully impressive thing, because he uses real names, cities, streets, buildings, persons, and translates them into a decade hence. It's as stirring a document on preparedness as anything could be, although—or perhaps because—it is sheer fiction. It's an old theory, but a sound one, that you can preach the gospel in a parable when a straight-away sermon falls on deaf ears.

Gardner L. Harding, author of "Present Day China" [Century], was probably the only white man in China who enjoyed the complete confidence of Dr. Sun Yet Sen and his party during the recent revolution. He was with Dr. Sen the night the revolution broke out. He followed the campaign from Shanghai to Nanking, where he was the only correspondent with the besieging army, and with whom he entered the city and lived through the terrible three days of sack and slaughter with which they took revenge. After the collapse of the revolution, Mr. Harding set to work to find out just what the republic had accomplished. He is convinced that the republican movement is a symbol of a profound and universal regeneration in China. This is the guiding idea of the book.

Stanley Washburn

William Howard Taft is the author of "The Presidency: Its Duties, Its Powers, Its Opportunities, Its Limitations" [Scribners]. With the country more than normally hazy about the president's job, this is an especially timely book.

Nathan Kussy, author of "The Abyss" (Macmillan) has had one absorbing ambition ever since he was a boy in high school, and that has been to write and to succeed at his writing. He wrote one day in his diary, "I will succeed. I will overcome everything. I will make the world bow to me to compensate for the disappointments I have suffered. I will crush every obstacle—trample upon it—but I will succeed if it is possible for man to do so. What Dickens is to England I will be to America."

The last letter Thackeray ever wrote was to Mrs. Leslie, the grandmother of Shane Leslie, who records the incident in his new book, "The End of a Chapter" (Scribner's). This is the letter, written the day before he died, declining an invitation to dinner: "Dear Mrs. Leslie—Since I wrote and said yes, I have been in bed two days, and fate and the doctor say no. Indeed, I am unfit to come (I have only this minute crawled down to my sofa), and nobody can be more sorry than yours, very faithfully, W. M. THACKERAY."

John Kendrick Bangs, author of "From Pillar to Post" (Century), takes no stock in the opinion that American humor is degenerating. He even asserts that we are so surfeited with first rate humor that we "can't see the wood for the trees." "A period that has produced a Dooley and an Ade, and an Irvin Cobb, and a Bert Leston Taylor," he says, "is surely not poor in humorous possessions. J. Montgomery Flagg is as much a master of effervescent foolery as ever was Artemus Ward. As for wits, if Oliver Herford were as lonely among wits as he is unique, I should still feel that we are rich beyond measure.

"Punishment" (Holt) is the title of a play of prison life which has been indorsed by Mr. Osborne, the recent warden of Sing Sing, and by several of the convicts. It is the work of Louise Burleigh, one of Prof. Baker's products, and Edward Hale Bierstadt, who writes for the New York Evening Post. Both the authors are 25—and very earnest.

The original name of Sir Sidney Lee, whose biography of Shakspeare (Macmillan) has become a standard, was Solomon Lazarus. While he was a student at Oxford he was a favorite pupil of Jowett, and it was at his suggestion and advice that young Lazarus changed his name to Lee.

The prize essay on war and peace of the Church Peace union contest, which was written by Washington Gladden, is available in book form. It has as its title "The Forks of the Road" (Macmillan).

For the Shakspeare tercentenary Moffat, Yard & Co. have a special edition of William Winter's "Shakspeare's England." Each copy will be signed by the author.

The Dorris

The Gracefulness of the Dorris does not stop with the beauty of its lines — it is expressed as noticeably in the noiseless, sweeping ease with which it moves — the way it floats up to a stop — the way it glides away from the standstill — the low murmur of the motor — the soundlessness of the gears in changing. All these things endow the Dorris with that grace which is inherent in well-bred people and things. This grace, the thorough elegance of its finish and the refined good taste of all its appointments make the Dorris the classic car — And all because it is built up to a standard—not down to a price.

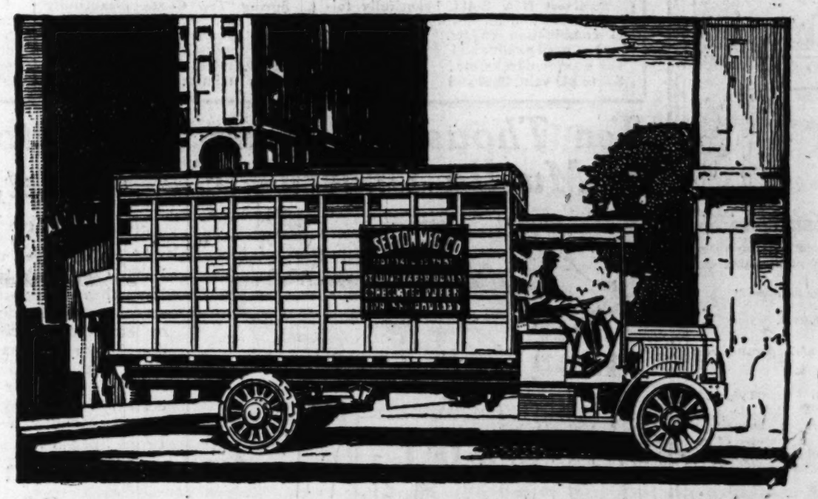
ASK THE MAN WHO OWNS ONE



NO VACATIONS
For Five Packards in Five Years

W. J. Evans, Jr., secretary of the Sefton Manufacturing Company, writes: "Five of our seven Packard trucks are five years old and have never been overhauled."

"This remarkable mechanical performance we attribute to the fact that Packard motor trucks are manufactured in the Packard factory and are not merely an assembly of parts."

After ten years' experience in the purchase and operation of motor trucks—both assembled and manufactured types—this remarkably successful concern has standardized Packards because the investment produces greater profits, the rate of depreciation is lowest, the maintenance cost least—in a word, because Packards do more work, for less money, than any other machines the company ever bought.

Telephone to Robert Hutchison, the Sefton Manufacturing Company's garage superintendent, and ask about the five Packards he has operated for as many years, and about his new chainless Packard.

There are seven sizes of Packard Chainless Trucks—1 to 6½ tons—with frame lengths and body designs to meet every requirement. Our transportation experts will gladly give you information of value to you.

Vaudeville Wit.

PALACE.

"The Highest Bidder":

"When a man marries he expects to be plastered with two or three relatives—that's history. And relatives often mean the divorce route. But, anyway, I never touched you in any but an affectionate way, did I?"

"You held my wrists that night."

"Yes, but that was in self-defense."

"Anyway, in my divorce bill I have stated that you have an earning capacity of $150 a week."

"Does the bill state that?"

"In black and white?"

"Now, that's funny; I've been trying to make the firm believe that same thing for two years."

PALACE.

Mack and Walker:

"I wish the Lord had made me a man."

"He did; I'm the man."

"When I and another girl went abroad we traveled by steamer. I spent the whole of my first day in my berth."

"O, it was your birthday?"

"No, I never had a birthday."

"And you've had so many opportunities, haven't you?"

"I do wish you could meet my sister. She's tall and awfully good looking—not a bit like me."

"No fishing on these premises."

McVICKERS.

Cranston and Lee:

"I understand you are separated from your wife."

"Yes."

"Tell me all about it. What did you do?"

"Nothing. She died."

"What's the difference between a pretty girl's mouth and a couple of impertinent country fellows?"

"I give it up."

"One is a pair of ruby lips, and the others a pair of lippy rubes."

"They say that famous marine artist was once a plain farmer's boy. I wonder where he developed his talent?"

"Drawing water on the farm."

"What kind of leather makes the best shoes?"

"Don't know, but banana skins make good slippers."

"It's funny, isn't it, that everybody in our family is some kind of an animal?"

"Some kind of an animal, indeed? What do you mean?"

"Why, mother is a dear, you know."

"Yes, certainly."

"And my baby sister is mother's little lamb, and I'm the kid, and dad's the goat."

PALACE.

Louis Madden and company:

"Yes, I spent the summer at one of those beach resorts. After I had laid in my bed three hours I got up covered with stone bruises? That's the kind of a hotel it was."

"Did you have a good time bathing?"

"O, the tide was out most of the time, but when it came in we had a real good swim."

"I suppose you met some of the girls?"

"Yes, I fell for a rich girl. Her father followed the horses, and . . ."

"I suppose he drove a horse car, eh?"

"Certainly not. She was a fine girl. She was one of those girls who don't know anything about makeup—and you know how scarce they are these days."

"Well, what was the trouble?"

"She was way beyond me. Just imagine her marrying a vaudeville actor. You know I never got any better than third on the bill, and you know what that would mean; she and her rich parents would be just starting on their soup when I was finishing my act."

What "Over 600,000 Circulation" Means

The Sunday Tribune contains about 100 pages. Each page has eight columns. A column averages 1,000 words. An ordinary novel contains less than 100,000 words.

Thus each Sunday Tribune is the equivalent of about eight novels.

But even the "successful" novel seldom reaches a circulation of 100,000 copies.

Therefore The Sunday Tribune on a single Sunday attains a distribution exceeding the combined distribution of several "best sellers" and each copy is as large as several books. The total issue of The Tribune on a single Sunday is about equal to the total issue of 50 popular novels.

The 50 popular novels take years in preparation and years in distribution. The Sunday Tribune, right up to the minute in every one of its 240,000 lines, is at your breakfast table 52 times a year. And you will find in today's Tribune as good writing and as vital thought as in any popular novel.

This tremendous achievement is at your service

—for pleasure
—for education
—for money saving
—for money making

Don't get in a rut in the reading of The Sunday Tribune. Read all departments—ads both classified and display, as well as news and features.

And if you have anything to sell —service or merchandise — use Tribune ads NOW.

WITH the victory of Eddie O'Donnell in the Fresno road race a week ago yesterday the center of the speed map shifted from the Pacific to the Atlantic seaboard, and next Saturday Father Knickerbocker will experience the thrills of which California has had a monopoly since the first of the year.

For the speedway racing season of 1916 opens in the east six days hence with the promotion of four events on the Sheepshead Bay course, probably the fastest automobile track in the world. Twenty thousand dollars will be distributed among the winning drivers in the following races:

Metropolitan trophy contest, 150 miles—$6,000 for first, $3,500 for second, $2,000 for third, $1,800 for fourth, $1,000 for fifth, $600 for sixth, and $400 for seventh.

Queen's cup race, 50 miles—$1,000 for first, $600 for second, $400 for third, $300 for fourth, and $200 for fifth.

Coney Island cup race, 20 miles—$600 for first, $360 for second, $250 for third, $200 for fourth, and $100 for fifth.

William Kemble cup race, 10 mile handicap for nonwinners—$400 for first, $200 for second, $175 for third, $125 for fourth, and $100 for fifth.

The inaugural meet of the eastern and middle western racing season has attracted twenty-three cars, all of which have been named for three of the four events on the card. Whether they will start in all of them is doubtful. Bustups in the first race of the afternoon probably will eliminate entries from the second and third.

In fact, in order to assure a full field of starters in the feature event of the day, the race for the Metropolitan trophy, the promoters have decided to stage that contest first, and put their trust in Allah that there will be enough survivors to furnish competition in the drives for the Queens and Coney Island cups.

The field for the Sheepshead Bay meet cannot be classed as especially stellar without a stretch of the imagination and a fracture of veracity. Of the seventeen drivers that have been named to date only six rank as headliners—Dario Resta, Ralph Mulford, Johnny Aitken, Eddie O'Donnell, Eddie Rickenbacher, and Joseph Christiaens.

In scanning the list of drivers one cannot help but notice that the names of Barney Oldfield, Ralph De Palma, Earl Cooper, Gil Anderson, and other speed kings of national repute are not "written there." In their stead we see the monickers of Grover Bergdoll, Billy Chandler, Dave Lewis, Pete Henderson, Carl Limberg, and Jack Lecain, who have yet to attain black headline prominence, and those of Aldo Franchi, Bill Miller, C. W. Thompson, Bert Watson, and George Adams, comparative unknowns except to the inner circle of the speedway fraternity.

There is class to the cars, without a doubt. The three French Peugeots, which will be piloted by Dario Resta, Ralph Mulford, and Johnny Aitken, have worlds of speed, and probably will rule as favorites among the team entries. The four Delages, also hailing from Poincare's republic, also are capable of burning up the boards, but it is problematic whether or not they will get as good handling as the Peugeots.

England will be represented by three Sunbeams, at the wheel of one of which will be Joseph Christiaens, the Belgian driver and the only European star who has been able thus far to flee the war swept continent in order to chase prize money in America. Christiaens will be a respected and feared contender, and many critics look for him to capture the Metropolitan trophy.

The prediction is common among the railbirds of the gasoline circuit and the drivers that the world's 150 mile record will be broken. The mark that the Metropolitan trophy contenders have to shoot at is 1 hour 27 minutes 10.93 seconds, an average of 103.23 miles per hour, established by Gil Anderson with a Stutz in the race for the Vincent Astor cup at Sheepshead Bay last October.

From La Porte go through Westville, Valparaiso, Wheeler, Hobart, South Gary, Highlands, Hammond, and South Chicago to Chicago, 100.7 miles. While the roads at this time of the year are not as good as they will be later on, you should have little trouble in driving over the route above named.

J. M. B., Indiana Harbor, Ind.

Here you will cross into Canada, going through Sarnia, Adelaide, and Hyde Park to London, 63 miles; Crumlin, Ingersoll, Woodstock, Brantford, Hamilton, 78 miles; Freeman, Trafalgar, and Lambdon Mills to Toronto, 47 miles. Before undertaking the trip you should purchase volume 4 of the Automobile Blue Book, which may be had from any dealer in automobile supplies or by addressing the Automobile Blue Book Publishing company, Mallers building, Chicago.

Besides maintaining a bureau of information as to the best automobile routes throughout the country "The Tribune" is prepared to answer all technical questions about automobiles. Address all inquiries to High Speed, care of "The Tribune," Chicago.

I am planning to leave Chicago in July for a trip to Quebec, and would like to have you furnish me with information as to the best route. From what I can learn, there are two possible routes, one from Chicago to Detroit, then along the north side of Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence river, and the other to Toledo and Cleveland and Buffalo and then along the south side of Lake Ontario and the St. Lawrence to Quebec. Which route would you advise me to take? On the return trip I would like to go over a good scenic route to New York, thence to Washington and Chicago. What is the charge for passing through Canada?

E. B. CARON, Oak Park, Ill.

The route along the north side of Lake Ontario is shorter than the other you mention but many of the roads through Ontario are wretched, and in case of bad weather you might be compelled to ship your car between some of the points. I would advise you to take the following route:

	Miles.		Miles.
South Bend	101.0	Albany	94.6
Toledo	165.8	Saratoga	87.6
Cleveland	120.1	Plattsburg	137.6
Buffalo	191.9	Montreal	72.0
Syracuse	154.3	Quebec	176.7
Utica	49.7

The above named route appears to be the most popular with the tourists and is given the preference by the Automobile Blue Book, principally on account of the good roads and the large cities it passes through. However, if there is any reason why you prefer the route nearer Lake Ontario you might go from Buffalo through Batavia, Rochester, Oswego, Watertown, Alexandria Bay, Ogdensburg, Malone Rouses Point, and then north through Montreal. Under a recent ruling the Canadian customs department now permits American tourists to drive their cars in the dominion without taxation for a period of ten days by applying to the collector of the frontier port for a permit. After ten days it is necessary to pay a fee. On the return trip you might go through Plattsburg on Lake Champlain, Lake George, Saratoga Springs, Troy, Albany, and down the Hudson to New York, thence through Philadelphia and Baltimore to Washington, coming back to Chicago by way of Hagerstown, Uniontown, Wheeling [or Pittsburgh], Lima, Fort Wayne, and South Bend.

MAY

The Conquering Green.

THERE is a fringe of green on the roof of the woods, on flowering maples and budding oaks, and the catbird sings from a half green thorn. Meadow rue has unfolded its tightly packed leaves, willows are lustrous, and the full tented camps of the May apple have pushed their way up from the soil and are spread.

The wax white petals of the blood root are dropping, hepatica are fading, Johnnie jumpups erect their pulpits, and violets are ready for bloom. The chewink sings in the thickets and a half dozen white throats sing in the wild grape vines, while a half hundred feed where seed has been thrown out.

The appeal to the perception is that of the dominant, returning green, covering the earth and roofing the woods. Here is delicate fragility and conquering force combined. A piece of steel, steam driven, could not have come up through the clay more certainly than the blade of grass which may be flattened under the light feet of a juncoe.

Beauty of color and of youth thus has the astounding power of great force. The delicacy of green which spreads under foot and begins to roof the groves is that of a thing irresistible in essence and fragile in form.

Grackles mate and the flicker cries for the elm. The shad bush prepares its blossoms and the wild rose is red budded along its branches. Honeysuckle is approaching full leaf. Everywhere the green runs and climbs, with the climbing sap.

WITH this issue of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE the automobile department inaugurates a new feature that we believe will be of great value to motorists under the heading, "How Are the Roads?" Today and each Sunday hereafter during the automobile touring season, highway bulletins, telling of road conditions and construction work necessitating detours will be published. These reports, which will be prepared exclusively in THE TRIBUNE, are prepared weekly by the road scouts of the Automobile Blue Book Publishing company, which has nine pathfinding cars out, and contain fifty-ninth second information.

ILLINOIS.

Chicago to South Bend—Travel via Valparaiso and Laporte to Bootjack. At four corners, mileage 84, turn sharp right; go south 1.4 miles, then left 3.6 miles to big tree in middle of road; turn left, go north 0.6 mile, then right, going 4 miles to end of road; turn right, go south 1.5 miles, then left around Polish saloon, entering South Bend in Division street, about 7 miles.

Chicago to Milwaukee—Not good. Shore road probably best for next few days, although dry weather will put inside routes in shape quickly.

Chicago to Lake Geneva—In good shape. Route by way of Elgin and Algonquin advised. Lake Geneva reports all roads in good shape. Harvard, Ill., reports that roads now are poor due to the rains but that three weeks of good weather will improve conditions materially.

Chicago to eastern and southeastern Illinois—Use Indiana roads. For Danville and Champaign go via Morocco and Ambia; to Attica, go Thayer, Morocco, and Goodland.

Chicago to Kankakee—In good shape. Route from Blue Island into Chicago Heights is reported rough at south end.

Momence and points south—Use Indiana roads.

Shelbyville to Indianapolis—Road via Mattoon, Paris, and Rockville is reported good.

Effingham—It is reported that all roads have been dragged and are in good shape, although, being dirt, rains are liable to make them heavy.

Dixon—Repair work going on east of city on Chicago-Clinton section of Lincoln highway.

INDIANA.

Indianapolis to Paris and Shelbyville—Reported good.

Indianapolis to Louisville—Go via Columbus to Seymour; via Brownstown to Vallonia to Salem; via Bedford, Pekin, and New Albany to Louisville. All good road except between Pekin and Borden, a five mile stretch, which will be found bad in wet weather.

Vincennes—Roads reported in good condition, although route to Paoli, via Washington and Huron, is only fair in many places.

IOWA.

Des Moines to Omaha—Road via Atlantic and Adair is good.

Des Moines to Davenport—Road by way of Newton, Grinnell, and Iowa City is good.

Ottumwa to Chillicothe—Use road via Lineville and Trenton in preference to that by way of Newton and Osgood in case of rain.

MICHIGAN.

Detroit—This section reports that concrete roads are about the only ones that are in good shape. Other highways are fair now, but will be bad in case of much rain.

Detroit to Toledo—Road from Erie to Toledo is closed. Until repairs are completed travel by via Wyandotte, Monroe, Ida, Temperance, and West Toledo.

OHIO.

Cleveland section—Tourists going from Cleveland to Canton, Akron, or Pittsburgh are warned against using route through Bedford and Twinsburg. A stretch of seven and one-half miles is under repair and closed until May 20. Go via Solon and the Laing road, which, however, is not good at present.

Sandusky—Road to Clyde via Castalia is now open, but is being graded and will soon be closed for paving.

Cincinnati section—It is reported that the roads are generally cut up, due to winter travel, and good weather will improve conditions, but rain will seriously affect them.

Columbus section—Route between Columbus and Cleveland will be found poor for a stretch of twenty and one-half miles between Delaware and Marion.

Columbus to Wheeling—Road between Columbus and Newark has a two mile stretch that is closed, making detouring necessary.

Lima—It is reported that recent rains have softened the roads somewhat.

Prepare Highways for Summer Tour.

WITH details settled for the Yellowstone park sociability tour, to start from St. Paul and Minneapolis on July 20, road improvement work along the National Parks highway route has already been inaugurated. Every county through which the tour will pass in North Dakota is preparing to compete for the honor of providing the most "highly cultured" right of way for the motorists.

The pathfinding car, to be furnished by the Chalmers Motor company, left the factory at Detroit, Mich., last Tuesday and is being driven through to the Twin Cities. It is scheduled to reach there on Wednesday, where it will be outfitted for the trail blazing tour to Gardiner, Mont. The pathfinder will be finished in battleship gray and bear an inscription relating to dates the tour will start and calling attention to the bridge dedication ceremonies at Medora, N. D.

Telegraphic equipment will also be carried and a coterie of machinists will accompany Pathfinder C. S. Harrington on the trip. It is expected that the routine speed of the tour itself will at least be made by the path finders, while some of those who will make the route making excursion predict that the distance will be covered in even faster time.

J. P. Hardy, secretary of the National Parks Transcontinental Highway association, has been visiting North Dakota cities along the route the last week. He says that everywhere great enthusiasm prevails over the coming sociability excursion. Mr. Hardy has received letters from eastern motorists asking for entry blanks. They have told him that the committee is to be commended for holding the daily distance to be traveled down to 129.9 miles. This will permit owners who tour purely for pleasure to join.

Gov. L. B. Hanna of North Dakota is expected to accompany the tourists part of the way.

Studebaker

Take the Judgment of the City that knows how cars are BUILT—and the State that knows how cars PERFORM!

There's no surer judgment, no more trustworthy advice to be had anywhere than that of Detroit and the State of California.

In Detroit

the city that produces three-fourths of the country's cars—where people know cars from the technical and manufacturing sides better than they do in any other city on earth—more Studebakers were registered according to official figures in the year of 1915, than any other cars selling at more than $500.

In California

the State of wonderful roads and weather—the State where people have more miles of good roads to drive over and more opportunity to use their cars than in any other State in the Union—the official figures for the year of 1915 showed 15,718 Studebakers registered—2,895 MORE than any other car listing at more than $500.

California KNOWS cars from use on the roads—Detroit knows cars from having the bulk of the industry centered in its limits. Both have made Studebaker favorite by a long lead. What better judgment can YOU follow in buying?

And the reason is simply that every time a man makes even the barest comparison of a Studebaker with other cars, he finds that to get as much power, size and quality as a Studebaker offers, he must pay from $250 to $400 MORE. So they're buying Studebakers—and SAVING that $250. Why don't you see the cars—then go make that $250-saving comparison.

NO. 4—DARIO RESTA, PEUGEOT.

If you doubt that America is a land of opportunity, just ask Dario Resta and have your skepticism thrown into reverse.

Resta landed in New York during the Christmas holidays of 1915. At the end of ten months he counted his bankroll and found that he had amassed $43,750 in prize money in addition to several rich bonuses that he received for entering several events.

The invader was the season's sensation. He was in the public eye from February to December. In his first American campaign he smashed more records than a mad bull in a graphophone shop.

At San Francisco he captured the Vanderbilt cup and the grand prize, an unprecedented achievement. In the Indianapolis international sweepstakes he forced De Palma to extend the Mercedes to the limit to win. He won the 500 mile event at the Chicago speedway, establishing a new world's record for the distance of 97.58 miles per hour; defeated Burman, Cooper, and Oldfield in the Chicago 100 mile challenge race, and came within eighty seconds of equaling the world's 100 mile mark of 107.93 miles per hour, established by the twelve cylinder Sunbeam at Brooklands three years ago in taking the Harkness trophy at Sheepshead Bay in the fall.

The blots on his 1915 escutcheon are his failure to finish in the 300 mile Sioux City race, the 500 mile marathon with which the Twin City speedway was dedicated, and the 350 mile contest at Sheepshead Bay.

Resta hails from Italy, being a native of Milan, but he has resided in England so many years that he has become inoculated with British mannerisms of speech and customs. His first race was in 1907 when he piloted a Mercedes in a forty mile contest at Brooklands, but was disqualified on a minor technicality after leading the field to the tape.

Later the same season, after capturing three blue ribbon events at Brooklands, he took the ninety horsepower Mercedes to France and won the Prix de la France, run on a course in the vicinity of Boulogne.

After four years of speedway racing in England, Resta cast his fortunes with the Sunbeam team in 1912. Showing the way to the field in the small car division of the French grand prix of that season for 950 of the 956 miles, he was signaled by pit attendants to slow down. They thought that he had a greater lead than he actually did and the error cost him the race, his teammate, Victor Rigal, finishing one minute ahead.

In the last grand prix, run at Amiens shortly before the outbreak of the European war, Resta's car was the first Sunbeam to finish, trailing three German Mercedes and Goux's Peugeot over the tape.

Resta is a skillful, cunning driver. His forte is speedway competition and he probably is without an equal in a short distance event.

Exhaust Echoes

In view of the increasing use of closed cars for all year driving the Studebaker corporation is producing the six cylinder all year sedan model in quantities. This car is of the semi-convertible type and is being offered to meet the large demand which has come from dealers. Mounted on the stock six cylinder chassis, this all year body can be quickly changed from a fully inclosed car to one that is adaptable for enjoying touring even in the balmiest weather. In the converting process the top remains permanent, but the windows at the sides can be removed from view so that the car has every advantage possessed by the touring car.

If the present contest among motor car owners for economy records keeps up the suggestion has been made that a set of rules for the game be formulated. This season, as never before, gasoline mileage is the favorite topic of the automobile fan and it is no longer necessary for the motor car companies to have tests. The owners are doing the testing. This spring several reports from owners have been received unsolicited by the Saxon Motor Car company. They come from all parts of the country and they bear a single message: "The Saxon six averages better than twenty miles on a single gallon of gasoline. William Coy of San Francisco kept a record of the mileage of his car and also of its gasoline consumption during the months that he was conducting a jitney service for visitors to the Panama-Pacific exposition. He traveled more than 11,000 miles in all kinds of weather and his average mileage was better than twenty on one gallon of fuel.

"It is interesting to observe the contrast among buyers," says C. F. Woods, local King distributor. "Perhaps the two most exacting buyers I ever heard of were concerned more with the fittings of the car than with the motor matters. One of them, who purchased a limousine, insisted upon having two speedometers—one for the chauffeur on the instrument board and one for himself inside the body where he would keep his eagle eye on it. Then there was the man who bought a chassis. He wanted a body that would gracefully carry a much prized trunk on the rear. He sent the trunk, a most peculiarly shaped affair, worth probably $50, so that he could have an expensive body built around it."

The borderland route that parallels the Mexican boundary line was the honeymoon trail of H. A. Riemers and his bride, who made the trip from New Orleans to Los Angeles in twenty-nine days. They allotted their Haynes the whole of February to make the leap year trip and on the twenty-ninth day the last leg of the journey brought them down Pico avenue in Los Angeles. The wedding took place in the Crescent city on the morning of Feb. 1. Bundling their baggage into the compartments of the motor car they immediately pointed the hood of their Haynes roadster westward, with more than half the breadth of the continent in front of them. They had to ship their cars through the flooded regions of western Louisiana, and after crossing this territory, which was impassable to all travel except railroad trains, they then drove through Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California over what the southwest calls the borderland route.

The theory that the market for commercial cars is restricted pretty much to large cities is disproved in figures compiled by the Studebaker corporation and announced through Henry T. Myers, sales manager of the commercial car division. "Commercial car sales in towns from 5,000 to 50,000 inhabitants are considerably greater in proportion to the population than in the large cities," says Mr. Myers. "We can name instances even where Studebaker commercial car sales in certain small towns have been in excess of pleasure car sales during the last four months."

Newly invented offset or Bell sprocket.

¶ The Maxfer ends experiments. It is far and away the most economical and guaranteed to be the best truck-maker offered at any price. You cannot afford to overlook it. See it. Compare it. Try it. We rest the case on your good judgment.

¶ It is made in a complete factory, with materials actually purchased for the coming year. It will be delivered to you on the day promised.

¶ The Maxfer is the best-engineered truck-maker on the market. It is not a makeshift. It is designed by expert engineers and constructed by expert truck men to serve a definite and valuable purpose.

¶ The Maxfer is the only truck-maker using the Ford rear axle just as it comes, full width and unchanged. With the Maxfer the Ford axle does not have to be shortened or a substitute provided. This is achieved by our own patent-applied-for, tested and proved invention, the offset or Bell Sprocket. It means added strength, better service and long life.

¶ The Maxfer is quickest to attach. We challenge any manufacturer of a similar truck attachment to a test, the loser to forfeit $50 to the American Red Cross Society. And the same challenge holds good when we say that the Maxfer is the quickest to detach and reconstruct into the original Ford roadster or touring car.

¶ The Maxfer saves money in operation—it consumes less gasoline—reduces motor heating—because it requires less turning over of the engine to carry one ton one mile.

¶ The Maxfer rear axle is the strongest in the market today—comparisons are eagerly invited. Remember, the rear axle system is the working and load-carrying part. It is equipped with the Baldwin special analysis heat-treated steel sprocket.

¶ The Maxfer has endurance built into it. The frame is fortified with four cross members, while three are the most others have.

¶ When you buy the Maxfer you make a real truck deal. The Maxfer is backed by a company of substantial business men who take a pride in their product, believing it to be the most honestly and efficiently engineered attachment to be bought for $350. They are investing for the future—as you should, in purchasing your truck-maker.

The Maxfer is sold on a more liberal policy than any other.

How They Helped the "Cause" Along at the Radical Ball.

By Gordon Seagrove.

THERE are Maydays and Maydays. There is one kind where small boys and girls gather around a May pole and sing "a tisket, a tasket, a green and yellow basket," etc. And then there is the other kind when socialists gather around and indulge in May-polemics. That is, they "bawl out" capital.

This was the kind of a party that took place not so long ago in a time-honored dance hall on the dark fringe of Little Italy. It was in honor of the Mayday of the socialists, a sort of international labor day, for one thing, and to save a book shop that deals in radical literature from the inevitable heel of poverty, for another.

As in years before, the party was attended not by socialists alone, but by members of the literati, Mrs. Rorer's pastry class, smart young debutantes and matrons from expansive and expensive homes upon the Drive, tango rats, loop-hounds and artists here and there, a gunman now and then and various others, whose life ambition was to tread in the forbidden wilderness of socialism.

The hall, with its dingy paper and soiled woodwork, was crowded; through planes of eddying smoke the "reds," carrying the scarlet rose as a symbol of their creed, hurried to and fro, some in overalls and sweaters, others in more refined attire, but one and all gravitating toward the tables—and the beer.

Any one could see at a glance that they were free thinkers, for long hair was in abundance. Suddenly the music began. The beer stopped flowing and the "reds" began to dance with communistic fervor. Weaving to and fro with the easy motion that expressed the poetry of the workingman, the bricklayer walked the dog with a debutante from farthest north—a lovely parasite Jim Larkin might have called her.

Sharply the music ceased. But from the bar below voices took up another refrain and carried it through with a vigor they hadn't evinced since they left the rocky shores of Sweden:

"Hallelujah, give us a hand out
Hallelujah, amen.
Hallelujah, give us a hand out
To revive us again."

Over and over again they sang in warming to the true spirit of the brotherhood of man.

Upstairs the more serious side of the meeting was being expressed. During a lull a young man appeared suddenly and the crowd waited expectantly. The debutantes stopped talking and giggling, the artists stopped seizing types, and the waiter paused for breath. The young man climbed to the platform. A nondescript pair of trousers encased his legs and a soiled sweater covered him from his waist up. His jaws despite a hard day in the factory worked mercilessly upon a wad of gum. This he removed adeptly to thrust with loving care upon the piano just south of the second bass. With an awkward bow he announced: "The Dishwasher."

It was a poem, a poem of feeling, rather metrical as to feet and decidedly

"punchy" as to effect, and he rendered it well. Whatever fagging anti-capitalistic followers were there received new life thereby.

It appears that the hero of the poem was matron of the sink in a well known hostelry where the malefactors of great wealth ate ham and eggs from golden plates. All day long, in the murk and the slime, the dirt and the grime, he stood there washing dishes. Sometimes they honored him with a spoon—but he never pocketed it.

The boy didn't care any more about washing dishes than you do. In fact, he hated it. There was almost no future in it and he had not been trained for housework. At the sight of a plate from which some of the idle rich had but lately fed he almost went wild. A soup tureen from a similar source inflamed him to madness.

The idea was that here was a man, who was probably infinitely more intellectual than those who ground him down, wiping off the magnates' spoons—a reiteration of the old theory that after all is said and done justice is blind in both eyes and is splitting fifty-fifty with the police.

About this time the speaker warmed to his work; he pictured the growing hatred that the downtrodden dishwasher was heir to and of his sinister plot for revenge. And as he approached the climax his face became knotted and lined.

This climax is going to be a blow to you idle parasites who sit in cabarets and give no thought to the man back in the slime, grime, etc., etc. Are you ready, Gridley? Then:

"While they sit there in their splendor
They are searing souls with hate;
While they laugh in their contentment
I am spitting on their plate!"

A deafening patter of applause from his followers drowned out the following lines. The half score of guests, including the debutantes who had come to mix with the working classes, shuddered. They seemed to sense that under the prevalent gayety there was something bigger; that these men really felt. It rather terrified them.

Another speaker took the stage. He had no gum. With a voice that fairly made the house tremble, he commanded his brethren to have none of the preparedness propaganda; he wasn't going to raise his boy to be a soldier for the great capitalists, and he didn't care who knew it.

Every ticket bought upstairs for the drinks in the saloon downstairs meant more money for the cause, and no one wanted to see the cause neglected. Some were extraordinarily concerned with the financial success of the cause. They bought tickets for the cause, recklessly, daring, prodigally. They made themselves look like a ticket vender at a nickelodeon for the cause; they had tickets for the cause in great rolls and strips, hanging out of their pockets, filling their hands. And as the cause of socialism forbids extravagant waste the ticket holders made their way to the bar and disposed of them for good quid collateral.

Near the insular group which was still singing "Hallelujah," etc., with undiminished gusto, three attractive women, disciples of socialism, were leaning with cigarets in their hands against the bar and sipping their apple green drinks. They were discussing the supersoul and its sufferings, particularly the proposition of how much a lady will stand before she hits him.

Down the long, narrow bathroom, resounding with song as well as with the inevitable piano strains, expensively dressed women held tight to horny handed partners and were swung around the room, vanity bag clashing dinner pail, idleness smiling at toil.

A tall pale youth, a neophyte in the lore of socialism, which he utterly misconstrued, and a beginner in the difficult art of loop hounding, banged his beer glass down on the table and emitted loud cries of "Confusion to the government!"

It was plain that as long as he drank beer he would insist that the government be confused, but a kindly spirit—she was a pretty woman, who talked about birth control right before everybody—bought him something stronger and silenced him for the night.

A very young girl with a Jolly Roger hat stood near the beer spigot and tried to look like Carmen. The cigaret in her small mouth made her eyes water.

"Why," asked the guide, "why do you do it?"

"Because," she answered, "it's wicked."

That explains the whole evening the "parasites" had. They thought they were doing something shocking. They thought they were shocking the socialists. But they weren't; they were shocking themselves.

REO

Yes! History Will Surely Repeat Itself

LAST SEASON WE REO FOLK did a thing that was unprecedented in the annals of advertising.

WE PUBLISHED AN AD in all the principal newspapers throughout America—spent several thousands of dollars—stating "Today there isn't a new Reo automobile of any model for sale in the world."

WE DID THAT for two reasons: First to absolve Reo distributors and dealers from the blame that customers were heaping on them because they could not supply all who wanted Reos. And second: to impress buyers in future with the importance of ordering early if they wanted Reos.

FOR YEARS WE HAD been urging prospective buyers to place their orders well in advance of the dates on which they desired deliveries.

IT IS IMPERATIVE that buyers do that if they want the cars that are the "Gold Standard" in automobiles—namely Reos.

WE FIND IT NECESSARY to repeat that injunction over and over—and yet some buyers are tardy—will delay placing their orders till it is too late.

NEVER SINCE THE FIRST Reo left the factory has it been possible to make enough cars to supply all who wanted Reos. Never a time.

LAST YEAR the demand for Reos, and especially for Reo Sixes, was hopelessly in excess of the factory's output. We simply could not make enough.

BUYERS BLAMED DEALERS—but it wasn't the dealers' fault. They had their specifications in in time and their allotments. But they had sold out—it was impossible for any dealer to get more Reos because each dealer demanded his full quota.

SO WE PUBLISHED THAT ad in explanation of the situation, stating at the same time that it would be several weeks before it would be possible to obtain a new Reo at any price.

NOW WE WARN YOU AGAIN that that same condition will obtain this season—and right in the middle of the selling season too.

THOSE WHO DELAY ordering will surely have to be disappointed. Only those whose orders are in their local Reo dealer's hands soon can hope to obtain Reos.

AND THIS APPLIES to all Reo models—Reo the Fifth, "The Incomparable Four" and the new Reo Six—Roadster and Touring models—all enjoy a demand that is in excess of possible output.

AND FOR THE BEST REASONS in the world—Reos are the "Gold Standard" of automobile values.

SO THE ONLY WAY to be sure of getting a Reo is to order it at once—immediately. Don't delay another hour—for history always has and will surely repeat.

Where Shall We Drive To-Day?

Drive by Automobile Blue Book Pub. Co.

ALTHOUGH Sheridan road as a main line all the way up the north shore is still incomplete, other parallel streets and roads have been vastly improved during the last year, so that it is possible to get two pretty good routes up the shore with most of the advantages of the Sheridan road route.

The following trip is outlined to take advantage of the best of present conditions with consideration for the prettier spots along the shore as far as possible, and a return trip through Libertyville and Wheeling, then to the west side of the city along the Desplaines river. This latter is a route up for consideration as a part of a future outer boulevard and forest reserve. All of this is macadam, brick, or gravel, and unless weather conditions are exceedingly bad it should be an enjoyable five to seven hour trip, with opportunity for lunch at many points, the preferable ones being at Highland Park, Libertyville, and Wheeling.

Leaving Chicago go out north on Michigan boulevard to Ohio street, where jog east one block, then left on Lake Shore drive. Follow this straight through Lincoln park, keeping along the shore on Sheridan road. Follow Sheridan road with its few turns but direct to Main street, Evanston. Here turn left two blocks to Forest street, and then right to end of Davis street. Here turn left three blocks to Chicago avenue. Turn right at boulevard light and go straight north out of Evanston, passing Northwestern university on Sheridan road again.

Follow Sheridan road until just after crossing the sanitary canal, where bear right at fork onto Michigan street, Wilmette. Follow this along shore and go one block past brick inn. This one block is rather rough, but it is a short one. Here turn left in Chestnut street. Follow this into Kenilworth. Keep straight ahead through Kenilworth and at end of street turn right one block, then left; take second left and follow main travel with two or three turns, but easy to find, shortly coming along railroad on brick at Indian Hill station. Follow brick straight ahead to far side of park in Winnetka. Here turn left up slight grade to business center, turning right around drug store just before railroad.

Take Main street out of Winnetka, winding but direct, coming onto Green Bay road. Follow this along east side of railroad through Hubbard Woods and Glencoe to the north side of the latter at what is known as Green Bay crossing. Here turn left, following Green Bay, coming onto new concrete straight into Highland Park.

At Central street turn right across railroad and follow Sheridan road past fort at Fort Sheridan to far side parade ground and on edge of wood, crossing trolley and railroad. Go a little over half a mile, passing Elm Tree Country club. This stretch is rather rough. Take first right hand road on Green Bay road again. Go straight north nine and one-half miles, passing Onwentsia Country club and going through western edge of Lake Forest. At four corners, nine and one-half miles from last turn, is a yellow brick school. Turn left, crossing railroad at Warrenton.

Go about two miles beyond to prominent crossroad, where turn left in Milwaukee avenue road, going straight south through Libertyville, Half Day, and Wheeling. Go two and one-half miles beyond Wheeling to fork just beyond iron bridge. Here bear right, leaving Milwaukee avenue and follow direct road along west side of Desplaines river, passing straight through Desplaines with short quarter mile jog at Kolze's roadhouse, passing edge of Franklin Park and coming into Maywood in Fifth avenue.

It's their wonderfully long wear under day-to-day routine that distinguishes them from other tires.

The indented tread of Batavia Security Tires makes them hold in an emergency, of course. The unusual part of it is that this tread offers the minimum amount of surface to the road—which means minimum friction and maximum speed with long, long wear. AER-IN THE ASSISTANT CARBURETOR is a simple but revolutionary invention—attached easily and quickly to the manifold of any automobile. It makes an amazing reduction in the amount of gasoline consumed, works automatically, never requires attention and will last much longer than the car. It will pay for itself from 5 to 20 times over the first year. If a test does not prove this, Aer-In costs you nothing.

How Aer-In Works—The patented principle of Aer-In is very simple and its construction is simple. It puts just enough air in the manifold to supplement the work of the carburetor—so that every drop of gasoline is consumed completely. When the carburetor is not mixing enough air with the gas there is a suction in the manifold. Aer-In responds to this suction by letting air in. The greater the suction the greater the intake of air. The result is that every particle of gasoline is surrounded with the oxygen necessary for complete combustion. No other device ever has performed this work so efficiently, because none other responds accurately and positively in proportion to the suction of the manifold.

Gives Real Flexibility—Fuel economy is only one result of this complete combustion. Unbelievable flexibility and freedom from carbon deposits are just as important. The pickup of your engine is marvelous and you can idle along on high with a car which without Aer-In would not go slower than 5 or 6.

Lasts Longer Than the Car—Aer-In is all blued steel. There is no leather or fiber about it—nothing that can wear out. It can be attached in a few minutes to the manifold of any gasoline engine—automobile, motorboat, motorcycle or stationary—and once there it need never be touched again, or even thought of. It cannot be taken apart. It does its wonderful work automatically and continuously—as long as the car lasts. Then it is ready to start all over again with your next car.

Big Mileage Increase—The larger your automobile the more fuel will Aer-In save. Cars which run from eight to twelve miles per gallon without Aer-In will show fourteen to eighteen miles with it. Smaller cars will average about a 40% increase of mileage per gallon. All this means an investment of only $5—the first cost and only cost of Aer-In.

Here's What Aer-In Did for a Packard

In a recent test in Jackson Park, Chicago, Aer-In, attached to a Packard, made a 65% increase in the miles run per gallon of gasoline. Following are the exact figures:

Temperature	Miles per gallon without Aer-In	Miles per gallon with Aer-In
76 degrees	9.9	16.4
66 degrees	9.4	13.6

At the higher temperature the saving in gasoline per mile was 39%. The increase in mileage per gallon was 65%. At the lower temperature the results were only slightly less. This is just an illustration of what Aer-In will do for you.

DEALERS: Write for Our Attractive Proposition!

Results Guaranteed—Money back if Aer-In doesn't do for you everything we state—and more. The facts in this advertisement are taken from the least striking of our tests. Frequently Aer-In does much more than we ever announce. We tell only what it is sure to do. The fact that we will refund your money if you are not satisfied—any time within 30 days—is not an indication of our willingness to make good, but of the intrinsic and certain value of the article itself.

Let Aer-In Start Now for You—Get Aer-In at once and start now to save on your gasoline bill. Get the marvelous flexibility and freedom from carbon which results from perfect combustion. Don't go along in the old, expensive, inefficient way. Give your engine a chance. Remember, there is no substitute for Aer-In.

REAL ESTATE FOR SALE.
BUSINESS PROPERTY—SOUTH.

FORCED SALE.
I own a building containing 6 stores and 20 flats. Annual rentals $8,400.
I am obliged to sell it to protect other investments and will accept the best offer I can get.
There is a loan of $25,000 which I may keep to run at 5%. The loan was originally $20,000 more and was made by a private party who has twice renewed it for five year periods without commission and will undoubtedly be glad to do so again if desired.
The property is on the best main South Side business street, in line of advancing values, less than 2½ miles from the loop. Always rented and in good condition. My interest is worth twice what I will probably be obliged to accept for a quick deal, and offers a genuine opportunity for a profitable investment. Write me for full particulars, examine it, and make me an offer.
If sold by a broker will pay com., but a private sale will save this for himself. Address L L 344, Tribune.

REAL ESTATE—FARM LANDS.

Florida.

Free trip to Vero, Florida's Newest Potato Growing Section.

Results this year have been next to marvelous; up to $300 an acre from potatoes, up to 16 a bumper for beans; peppers, eggplant, strawberries, tomatoes, and practically all vegetables produced handsomely; bearing groves and pineapple fields in the heart of this rich district, producing large incomes and excellent yields of hay and forage crops prove the value of Indian River Farms as Florida's foremost trucking, citrus fruit, and general farming section.

Come down and see these fertile lands at the worst season of Florida's year, the summer season, the rainy season; the season when the growers are producing the least of any time in the year, but come down to Vero and see how delightful and what a wonderful section this is even at its worst.

Call or write for further details regarding this free trip to Vero May 16, to purchasers, or any information you want regarding the crops in this tried and proven section which seems destined to be the most valued land in all Florida.

WHEAT RALLIES ON FAVORABLE POLITICAL NEWS

Longs Seek to Reinstate Lines —Crop Damage Reports Numerous—Oats Strong.

Efforts of local bulls to reinstate sold out lines of wheat following the more optimistic reports in regard to the political situation, with covering by shorts, and further commission house buying were prices a big upturn yesterday. Prices at the close were practically at the top with net gains for the day of 2¼@2¾c. Chicago were unchanged, and the foreign news was a little more bullish.

The market was affected by reports of increased damage from green bugs and hessian fly. Kansas wheat is said to be affected by hessian fly over a wider area than ever known before. Damage also is feared from green bugs, which are present in unusual numbers in Oklahoma and southern Kansas. The reports of damage from these pests showed a material increase, and undoubtedly the reports were effective in stimulating buying.

The cash demand was moderate and there was no change in conditions. The total cash sales were 25,000 bu. Some export business in Manitobas was reported.

Bullish Report Expected.

The government report will be issued at the close tomorrow and is expected to confirm reports of a big abandoned acreage. The amount of spring work done in the northwest will also be important. No great improvement is looked for in the condition of winter wheat, judging from the private and state reports received. The Michigan report, however, showed a gain of 3 points during April.

Weather conditions were favorable throughout the entire grain belt of this country and Canada, but the fine conditions had little effect on prices. The forecast indicated the possibility of showers northwest. Generally the seeding is still backward northwest and much will still depend on weather conditions during the next week or so. Canadian reports were a little more favorable.

Missouri Conditions Low.

The Missouri May report as wired by King of Toledo makes the condition 62.8, against 65 last April and 90 last May. Receipts here were 87 cars and primary receipts were 5,470,000 bu for the week, compared to 5,116,000 bu a year ago.

Northwest receipts for the week were 36 cars, against 183 cars a year ago. Winnipeg receipts were heavy, 602 cars, compared to 159 cars a year ago. Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 55,000 bu for one day. Liverpool reported cargo offerings firmer and Buenos Aires was firm with a good export demand and lighter receipts. Clearances for the day were 1,234,000 bu.

Corn Has Strong Tone.

Corn prices were ⅝@½c higher for the day. The cash demand was fair and sales were 35,000 bu. Receipts were 91 cars, with primary receipts of 942,000 bu, compared to 805,000 bu a year ago, and for the week primary receipts were 5,295,000 bu, against 4,005,000 bu a year ago. The Missouri report shows 19 per cent of the corn acreage planted. Crop reports generally were favorable, the weather being excellent for farm work.

Cables were unchanged. The spot demand abroad is moderate. Commission houses were good buyers of wheat and local bulls were aggressive buyers at times, following the lead of oats and wheat. Selling was scattered. Cash prices were steady to ½c higher and there were shipping sales of 35,000 bu.

May Oats Shorts Cover.

Oats were strong, with May again the leader. Advances were ½c to ⅞@1c higher. May shorts were buyers, and there was further buying by cash houses. Rye-Jenks bought May and sold July early, and later Jackson bought May. Clement-Curtis bought July outs. Selling was scattered. According to reports from the southwest the oats crop is being badly damaged by green bugs. Receipts were 253 cars, with primary receipts of 1,125,000 bu. Receipts for the week were 6,919,000 bu, compared to 1,832,000 bu a year ago. All the oats have been seeding in Missouri, according to the state report.

Hog Products Are Higher.

Provisions closed strong. There was good commission house buying, with local bulls again buying lard and ribs. Packers were supposed to have bought early also. The cash trade conditions were reported healthy. Receipts were 30,000, with 30,000 for tomorrow and 140,000 for the week. Prices at the yards were 5@10c lower. Receipts in the west for the week were 543,200, compared to 806,000 the previous week and 453,000 a year ago.

Export Call for Rye.

Rye was dull, with 97c being bid for No. 2 to arrive. Sales of 10,000 bu were made for export. Receipts were 4 cars.

Barley ruled steady. Malting was quoted 72@83c and sold 76@77c; feed was quotable at 63@67c, with sales at 65@66c; milking was quoted 68@70c, and screenings, 60@63c, the latter selling at 65@63c. Receipts, 36 cars.

Timothy seed was easy; September closed $8.50 bid and cash lots were quoted at $4.50@7.75 nominal. Clover seed ruled steady, with cash lots, $8.00@14.00 nominal.

Duluth flax closed 2¾@4¼c lower; cash on track, $1.95¼; May, $1.92¾, and July, $1.93¼; receipts, none. Minneapolis was 1c lower, with cash on track, $1.96¼; receipts were 19 cars. Winnipeg closed 3¾@3½c lower; May, $1.70½, and July, $1.73; receipts, 27 cars.

Hog receipts of 9,000 head met with a slow demand at lower prices, the bulk selling 5@10c lower than on Friday. Prime heavy hogs were scarce and held fully steady, but the lightweight lots met with poor favor at reduced values. Top sales were at $10.00, and the bulk at $9.70@9.90. Pigs were slow sale at weak figures.

Final quotations made hogs largely 10@20c lower than a week ago, while pigs showed little change. The average price for the week was held at $9.85, or the same as that of the preceding week. Receipts for the week aggregated a little more than 155,000 head, and showed a substantial increase. The expectancy is for 38,000 hogs for next Monday and about 140,000 for all next week.

CATTLE.

Steer receipts at Chicago this week included an excessive proportion of common and medium lightweight animals, which sold on a weak basis and closed 10@25c lower than a week ago. Demand was largely centered in the prime steers, valued at $9.25 and better, and these closed the week fully steady with a week ago. The trade was of restricted volume, with buyers slow to take the cheap animals, which comprised the bulk of the supply, while furnishing a prompt outlet for the less freely offered high priced beeves. Top sales were at $9.95 and the bulk at $8.75@9.65. Cows and heifers closed steady to 10c lower than a week ago, while calves were practically unchanged.

Cattle at seven markets for the week 114,650, against 120,800 the preceding week, 120,500 a year ago, and 117,800 two years ago. Total for 1916 to date 2,533,000, against 2,297,000 the same period in 1915.

SHEEP.

Firmness pervaded the market for live muttons at Chicago most of the week and sheep and yearlings closed largely 10@25c higher than a week ago, while shorn lambs showed a gain of 35@50c and woolskins advanced 10@25c. Receipts for the week showed a small decrease, which was not reflected in the demand from local nor outside buyers. All offerings were promptly taken and the market finished the week in a strong position. Wool lambs topped the week at $11.85 and sheep reached $9.50. Shorn lambs closed at $9.90 for the best, with fall shorn lots at $10.60.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE

"I have reports of the damaging presence of Hessian fly in twenty-nine counties in Kansas," said B. W. Snow. "The infestation is territorially the most extensive I have ever known in that state, and extends farther west than ever before reported. The question of damage depends very largely upon the weather conditions of the next five weeks. Hot and even moderately dry weather, by reducing plant vitality, will cause material loss; on the other hand, a cool, wet season, by encouraging vigorous plant growth, will largely offset the fly attack. The point to be remembered is that the fly is heavily present in Kansas this year, and an exceptionally favorable season must be experienced if a good wheat crop is to be secured."

The cash demand was slow and the market was without much feature yesterday. Prices were called steady as a rule, with premiums for No. 2 red showing some weakness, prices having declined a little the last few days relative to the May. Purchases of Nebraska wheat to come to Chicago have been liberal the last few days. The demand at the seaboard continues to be mainly for Canadian wheat, as that grain is relatively cheaper than our wheat. Local sales were 35,000 bu. Cash corn was steady to ½c higher, and oats were ¼@1c up, following the advance in the May. Shipping sales were 35,000 bu corn and 90,000 bu oats. Sales of 10,000 bu rye also was reported.

Sentiment in wheat was much more bullish. For several days the local bulls were nervous owing to the political conditions, but with the more optimistic advices from Washington there was a disposition to reinstate lines sold out on the decline of Thursday and Friday. The crop news is regarded as bullish, the reports on Hessian fly and green bugs being given more consideration. Possibility of a further delay in the seeding of spring wheat also was a factor, and the lack of a big export demand appears to be ignored at the present.

Bennett had the following from Nebraska City: "We are having good growing weather, and the farmers are commencing to plant their corn the last couple of days. Our wheat is spotted, especially on the north slopes. Some farmers are talking of plowing up their wheat, but do not know of any that really turned their wheat under. We figure that around here we will not get over 12 to 14 bu to the acre under favorable conditions."

Le Count wired Barrell from Blackwell, Okla.: "Weather clear and favorable. Wheat looking generally good, with stand good, but green bugs in every field and slight damage resulting from same, and there is possibility of considerable damage if pest continues to increase, which seems likely, but devastation will not be nearly so great as in 1907. Oats are being damaged."

"Lard stocks are liberal, but the position remains unchanged, except that prices are much higher," said W. L. Gregson. "Even on these levels lards is economically the cheapest product, and we think it finally will give the best account of itself, regardless of occasional good market setbacks, which should be expected."

Lake freight rates were stronger yesterday on a basis of 4½c bid, Lake Superior to Buffalo and rail orders guaranteed on arrival of boat at destination. Straight charters are at 5c Lake Superior to Buffalo. A large business in both was done yesterday and Friday. Line boats left Chicago last night for Lake Superior light to carry wheat to lower lakes.

The Michigan crop report for May, as wired by King of Toledo, makes the condition of wheat 81, against 76 last April and 92 in May, 1915. Oats acreage is 98 per cent of last year; rye condition, 88, against 94 a year ago. Clover acreage, 97 per cent, compared to last year.

The sale of 600,000 bu oats from Milwaukee to Newport News was reported late Friday. The seaboard appears to want the oats, and the heavy shipments from Chicago offset the current big receipts.

Receipts inspected Saturday: Wheat, 87 cars; corn, 91 cars; oats, 253 cars; rye, 4 cars; barley, 36 cars. Hogs estimated for Monday, 30,000 head, and for all next week, 140,000 head.

Kansas City wired: "More than half our corn stock is said to be sold, and it is moving out freely. The decrease in corn stocks for the week was 227,000 bu."

Some acceptances of Manitoba wheat were reported at the seaboard, with some buying of futures by exporters at Winnipeg.

Peoria corn and oats were ½c higher. Kaffir corn advanced with the other corn.

Minneapolis wheat stocks decreased 55,000 bu for one day.

OPTIMISM ON STREET.

New York, May 6.—Further substantial gains registered by securities today plainly implied a widespread belief on the part of conservative as well as speculative interests that Washington would accept Germany's latest pledge and that the long pending crisis had been averted. Trading was on a large and broad scale, albeit it centered largely around the Mexicans, motors, shipping issues, and munitions, more or less in the order named.

The Mexican division was stirred into renewed activity and strength on advices suggesting a lessening of the tension in the Mexican situation. Mexican Petroleum, in which the overturn was enormous, made an extreme gain of 6½ points to 107½, and Texas company rose 7¾ to 191¾ with almost 3 for American Smelting and more than 2 for California Petroleum.

Auto Shares Prominent.

Automobile issues claimed attention from the outset, the 3@6 point gains in Maxwells, Willys Overland, Studebaker, and allied shares resulting partly from rumors of a forthcoming consolidation of leading motor interests, although these were later officially denied.

Shipping shares were conspicuous throughout, Marine preferred making further recovery from its heaviness of the early part of the week with a gain of 2 points for the common. United Fruit, which led yesterday's sharp rebound of prices, supplemented its gain of that session, but succumbed to profit taking, closing at a small net loss.

Steels Lead War Shares.

Crucible and Lackawanna Steels led the recognized war shares at 3@4 point advances with considerable activity and strength in American and Baldwin Locomotives, New York Air Brake, Studebaker, and Westinghouse.

Reading featured a belated rise in rails, that division, together with United States Steel, moving forward in the later dealings, the market closing with an impressive manifestation of strength.

The bond market was firm, but lacked especial features. Panama coupon 3s declined 1⅛ on call during the week.

MARKET BUYING FORECASTS MORE FAVORABLE NEWS

Traders Expect Cabinet Meeting Will Accept Terms of the German Note.

The course of the market yesterday indicated belief that there will be more favorable developments in relations between this country and Germany. It is expected that after the cabinet meeting this week, official announcement will be made of acceptance of the German note. This view led to considerable fresh buying and precipitate covering by shorts. Traders as a whole were reported on the bull side at the close. Some observers, usually pessimistic, thought they saw better prices for the next few days.

NEWS OF THE FINANCIAL WORLD

Earl D. Babst, president of the American Sugar Refining company, says the concern is now employing about 10,500 men, an increase of 1,000 men over a year ago. Regarding the effect upon his company of the termination of the war, he says: "At the moment there is a heavy demand for sugar for export. This will doubtless be materially curtailed with the termination of war, but I anticipate a continuation of good times for at least another year, whether the European war ends or not in the meantime."

President Schwab of the Bethlehem Steel corporation is quoted as saying there will be a large addition to the concern this year. He estimates the cost at around $30,000,000. Mr. Schwab is said to believe that the termination of the European war will cause some temporary reaction in the business of the company, but he believes that the demands of the United States are going to be so great that in the next year or two good earnings will result.

W. C. Durant, who it was announced in dispatches from Detroit was at the head of a movement to consolidate a number of automobile concerns, said yesterday concerning the matter: "The entire article and report is a fabrication, pure and simple, and the facts of which could have been easily ascertained by any request for information or verification being made."

The public service commission of New York has approved the application of the New York Connecting Railroad company for authority to issue $8,000,000 bonds under the mortgage approved in November, 1913. In addition to $16,000,000 now outstanding.

It is now said that the differences between the two stockholders committees of the International Mercantile Marine company are not such as to endanger the chances of an agreement. Mediators are at work to bring the committees together at a joint meeting, where all differences may be settled.

It is announced that Charles H. Sabin is to retire from the American International corporation, the concern organized by the National City bank of New York. Mr. Sabin is chairman of the board of the competing company, recently organized.

THE WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER

MAY 7, 1916.

"NETTOYEUR DES TRENCHES" (CLEANER OF THE TRENCHES)—This French soldier's job is to enter newly taken trenches and armed only with a sharp knife and a revolver to execute any Germans who may be still lurking there. This one is also equipped with a gas mask. The job is obviously very dangerous, for the only escape from the trench cleaner's attention is to kill him first.

THE NEW UNITED STATES ARMY FIELD KITCHEN—In the background of this scene, showing part of the United States expeditionary force sent into Mexico taking the last meal of the day in camp, may be seen the new army compound cook stove, designed by "Capt." Buzzacott of Chicago. Russia had the first moving kitchen cart, and one was later adopted by Germany. "Capt." Buzzacott's is an improvement over the foreign ones; it has a capacity of seventy-five gallons of different foods, all of which can be cooked at the same time while the kitchen is in motion.

OVER HOT SANDS WITH FEET BARE ON THE GROUND—This official photograph shows United States soldiers snatching a few moments of rest while on the trail of the elusive Villa. The government authorities, in compliance with Carranza's wish, would not permit the army to use the Mexican railroads or to march through Mexican cities. As a result the men suffered from lack of equipment and food supplies due to the fact that these things had to be transported over long distances by wagons, mules, and automobile trucks. Note the hole in the sole of the soldier's shoe in the foreground.

CZARINA AND DAUGHTERS AS RED CROSS NURSES.

The Russian imperial palace, Tsarskoe Selo, near Petrograd, has been turned into a hospital for wounded Russian officers. In charge of the hospital work is Dr. Derewnke, one of the czar's physicians. The czarina and her two eldest daughters, Olga and Tatiana, are trained in Red Cross work, and they daily attend the bedsides of the wounded officers. The picture shown herewith is the latest one of the Russian empress, taken in the palace hospital. In the middle row, reading left to right, are: Grand Duchess Marie, who is 17 years old; Grand Duchess Olga, who is 21 years old; Czarina Alexandra; Grand Duchess Tatiana, who is 19 years old, and Grand Duchess Anastasia, who is 15 years old. Immediately behind the czarina is Dr. Derewnke. The others in the group are wounded officers and Red Cross nurses.

It has been rumored that the prince of Wales is the favored suitor for the hand of Grand Duchess Olga. Should a marriage be effected between these two, it will be in fulfillment of a long standing ambition of the Russian people—that of having a Russian princess share the throne of Great Britain.

"NOT STEPPING O'ER THE BOUNDS OF MODESTY?"

"Look pleasant, please," used to be the signal for the camera operator to snap the picture. Now it seems to be, "Cross your knees and slop." The result is sometimes zebra striped and sometimes frightfully skinny; sometimes fat and sometimes very shapely. That the highest honors must go to the understandings of our Vurr Best People, as illustrated herewith, you will admit. These photographs were snapped—some were especially posed—here and there, at dog shows and horse shows, at tournaments, and on the beach—wherever the smart set foregathers. But psst! You should see some of those we didn't print.

"PIPES FOR WOMEN!"—With women doing men's work in England, the pipe has been found to be a good substitute for the cigaret. For some time many women, who formerly used the "fags," have been smoking small pipes filled with a mild, fragrant tobacco. The woman shown here works in a munition factory. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

SHE'S COME BACK—Like her w. k. father, Mrs. Alice Roosevelt Longworth is again in the limelight. Her husband, Congressman "Nick," is helping represent Ohio in the lower house, and she is again in a commanding position in Washington society.

SYMBOLIZING MONTENEGRO'S WOE—These Montenegrin war widows, gathered in one of the deserted streets of Cetinje, former capital of the little "Black Mountain" country, portray vividly the result of war in old King Nicholas' conquered land.

Leading surgeons everywhere use Sylpho-Nathol for the most delicate operations. The best hospitals use it constantly.

To guard your home against disease and at the same time make your housework more effective, nothing is so useful as a good disinfectant.

Sylpho-Nathol (formerly Sulpho-Napthol) has long been considered one of the really good disinfectants. A trial bottle will be sent you with the booklet.

It has been used by New England housekeepers for thirty years. They have found that it gives sure, safe results and is economical. In bottles of four sizes—10c, 25c, 50c and $1.00.

Let this booklet tell you just how to use it in a hundred ways around the house and for personal use.

How to Use It

This book tells how Sylpho-Nathol, as an antiseptic, is used for cuts, wounds, bruises, bites and stings; as a gargle, for sore throat; and as a douche.
As a disinfectant, how effective it is for kitchen sink, garbage pail, closet, cellar, waste pipes; in the sick room and for general cleaning.
And for toilet uses; the benefit it gives tired, aching feet; in the bath and for shampoo.

Authorities Endorse It

Sylpho-Nathol has the approval and endorsement of Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Director of Good Housekeeping Bureau of Foods, Sanitation and Health, and of Professor L. B. Allyn, Director of the Westfield Laboratories.

MARTIN LARSON

Who Makes Shoes To Fit Feet

MANY fortunate folk feel like Gelett Burgess did when he wrote:

"My Feet, They haul me Round the House,
They Hoist me up the Stairs;
I have only to Steer them, and
They Ride me Everywheres!"

But other people have discovered that their feet need more than "steering." They have found them sprouting all manner of agonizing ills from corns to nervous prostration.

To such people Martin Larson has devoted himself so effectively as to win national fame. He devised a system for building shoes over plaster paris casts of the feet. He worked out special lasts to correct broken arches, torn ligaments, misplaced bones—foot ills which throw the whole nervous system into confusion and even produce pains that are diagnosed as rheumatism. Martin Larson has proved that the influence of ill fitting shoes is felt throughout the body.

"Your feet grow old rapidly if neglected. See that they don't become aged while you are still young."
MARTIN LARSON.

"In all the centuries no two human feet were ever precisely alike."
Martin Larson.

This unique business was promoted in a unique way. Through full page advertisements Martin Larson made his face and his abilities familiar to the foot sufferers of the nation. His Chicago studio at the east end of the Madison Street Bridge is known from the Atlantic to the Pacific and from Canada to the Gulf.

Martin Larson's latest venture is the making of custom shoes marked by every refinement of style, yet built to conform to the individual peculiarities of each person's feet.
